Nazi Advance Reported Halted But Germans Claim Successes; President Pledges Aid to Soviet

D. C. Autoists Asked to Cut Gas Use 20% Voluntarily

Commissioners Get Conservation Group's Plan to Stretch Motor Fuel

The owners of Washington's 167,388 registered motor vehicles late yesterday were called upon to reduce the city's gasoline and oil consumption 20 per cent through voluntary curtailment of use.

The first city in the country to enact such a program for fuel conservation, the District has adopted the slogan "Make Four Gallons Do What Five Did Before" and has appealed for widespread consumer cooperation.

Details of the plan were submitted to the Commissioners by the recently formed District Petroleum Conservation Committee headed by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner. The campaign was instigated by Interior Secretary Ickes, the Administration's new oil administrator.

Pipe Line Planned

Prefacing his report to the Commissioners with an explanation that the Atlantic Coast area is facing a drastic cut in gas and oil deliveries because of tanker diversions to aid Great Britain, Maj. Snow pointed out that many plans are under way to restore the tanker loss through building new boats and pipe-line construction.

"But these things take time," he said, continuing: "While the situation may be greatly relieved by such means, the whole problem is not solved and there are things consumers can and should do to help out.

"We are adopting this program as a guide for the Nation," said Maj. Snow, "and it is our hope that every motorist will cooperate fully."

An intensive educational program for motorists through press, radio and poster mediums is planned for the District, Maj. Snow announced.

Pleasure Cars Use Most Gas

Pleasure cars are the city's greatest users of gas and oil, the committee reported, and owners are asked to reduce present consumption of 7,500,000 gallons a month by 2,200,000 gallons.

The following conservation practices are suggested for pleasure car owners:

Avoid racing motor.

Cut off motor while waiting for friends, etc.

Avoid racing up to red lights.

Reduce speeds and avoid over-acceleration on open roads.

Use first and second gear no longer than necessary.

Avoid unnecessary use of your automobile—don't drive just for the ride.

Maintain even speeds, avoiding rapid acceleration and deceleration.

Plan your driving carefully, avoid congested roads.

Have carburetor and ignition checked frequently.

Check wheel and brake clearances.

Maintain even tire pressure.

The committee also suggests that car owners be "good neighbors" and offer rides to friends and associates to and from work, the theater, etc., so one car may do the work of two or three.

Cooperation With Stores Urged

Vehicle operators, however, are not alone in the conservation plan. To department and other store customers, the committee urges:

Notify stores at times when deliveries can be received, so as to avoid unnecessary return trips.

Avoid unnecessary return of articles.

When calling for fuel, try to give advance notice to permit efficient routing of trucks—avoid night calls whenever possible, since these mean long trips.

Filling station operators are called upon to avoid spilling gasoline while servicing autos.

Attacker Vanishes

A Negro gunman raped a 26-year-old white woman in a District business establishment yesterday at 2:55 p. m., and at 2 a. m. today the police had no suspect in custody.

The woman, Mrs. Vada (Kitty) Abarca, 312 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., told police she was alone in a dyeing and cleaning establishment, 3427 Fourteenth Street Northwest, where she is employed as a clerk, when the man came in.

He carried a coat and asked her how much it would cost to clean it. She replied the price was 39 cents. He then walked toward the entrance and locked the door. When he faced Mrs. Abarca again, he pointed a pistol at her and ordered her to put up her hands and stoop behind the counter.

The man took $28 from the cash register and $5 from her purse. He then forced her into a rear room, bound and gagged her and assaulted her. This was about 3 p. m. or a few minutes after, as nearly as she could judge.

After that, Mrs. Abarca said, the man tied her to an iron rack used for hanging clothes, and left the place.

At 3:15 p. m. a woman customer entered the place. She noticed the store was empty but heard a noise in the rear. Upon investigation, she discovered Mrs. Abarca trying to free herself.

The customer then ran from the place and called Policeman John H. McHale, walking his beat on Fourteenth Street. The officer released Mrs. Abarca, questioned her, and called the Tenth Precinct.

This took about seven minutes and, at 3:27 p. m. the following alarm was broadcast: "Look out for a dark-skinned colored man, between 30 and 35 years old; medium height, medium heavy build; concave face, deepset nose, long protruding lips. He wore a brown suit and dark sun glasses."

At 3:40 p. m. Policewoman Frances Bird, of the Woman's Bureau, arrived at the cleaning establishment and 10 minutes later headquarters detectives came.

At 4:40 p. m., police photographers arrived, and five minutes later Mrs.

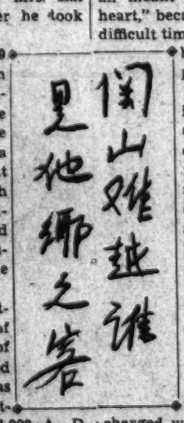
Chinese Mother of 10, Troubled, Quotes Poetry to Photographer

"The pass and the mountain form difficult barriers; who will smypathize with the one who lost his path; meeting each other by chance like leaves flowing on the stream, we are all strangers from different places."

This message in Chinese was given a Post photographer by Mrs. Lai Ping Lee yesterday after he took her picture.



Mrs. Lee, who is 39 and the mother of ten children, was in Gallinger Hospital, where she was taken after she was found bound to a banister in a vacant house. She gave birth to a daughter a few minutes after her release and was reported in a satisfactory condition at the hospital last night.

S. C. Chu, chief assistant in the Division of Orientals, Library of Congress, who translated the note, said it was from an epic poem written between 900 and 1,000 A. D., by Wang Puoch. It is very popular in China, he said, and at one time was read in all Chinese schools.

He declared he believed the woman meant it as a "cry from her heart," because she is having such a difficult time and the future looks so bad, with no one to sympathize with her.

Mrs. Lee was discovered in the early morning in a house in the 5800 block of Georgia Avenue Northwest by police who responded to a telephone call that a woman was screaming. When a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived, Mrs. Lee already had been delivered of the child with the aid of the policemen.

Park Lin Lee, 52, the woman's husband, 3108 Eleventh Street Northwest, was arrested and charged with the assault. He later was released under $1,000 bail pending the outcome of his wife's condition. (Picture on Page 5.)

Courtroom Drama

Boy, 7, Kisses Mother, Refuses To Testify at Cruelty Trial

Seven-year-old curly headed "Jimmy" Ford took the witness stand in a packed District Court room yesterday, but he refused to say anything against his mother, Mrs. Evelyn N. Stewart, who is charged with beating and scalding him.

When attorneys had tried to get him to talk and failed, he rose from the stand and tip-toed around the judge's bench to the table where his mother sat.

He kissed her. "Goodby, mama," he said.

Mrs. Stewart burst into tears.

There was not a dry eye among the three women jurors as he left the room. Among the nine men in the box there was a great deal of manly coughing.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough stared at the ceiling.

Whether Mrs. Stewart was guilty of injuring the son of her first husband by whipping him and then placing him in a tub of hot water is the question the jury is expected to receive late today.

Under the barrage of a cross-examination by Bernard Margolius, assistant United States attorney, red-headed Mrs. Stewart yesterday denied testimony taken by police which she signed.

She said that she whipped her son last April 17 at their home, 2133 First Street Northwest, because he failed to obey her and had dirtied the dress of her baby by her second marriage to Irwin Stewart.

"I never liked to whip him, anyway, because it hurt me more than

Initial U. S. Effort

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday pledged Russia all possible aid in her struggle against Nazi invasion, and the Treasury immediately made good his word by releasing at least $40,000,000 of "frozen" Russian funds.

There was nothing in the President's press conference remarks, however, to indicate that a great flood of planes, guns and tanks would start flowing to Russia.

On the contrary, officials who interpreted the President's words expected American help to the Soviets to take the form, first, of even greater efforts to aid Britain, and secondly, of granting long-standing Russian requests for machine tools, use of immobilized Baltic ships in United States harbors, permission to buy aviation gasoline and other similar concessions.

Shoes and Socks

Mr. Roosevelt said that he has not received any list of needed supplies from the Soviet government. This statement bore out an earlier disclosure by Undersecretary of State Welles that no official communication has been received from Russia. Late yesterday, the Soviet envoy, Constantine A. Oumansky, had not yet requested an appointment either with the President or with the State Department.

For the present, supplies that the United States could make available to the Russians would be of such types as shoes and socks, Mr. Roosevelt said. He observed that when the Russians submit their list it would not be possible merely to go

Vichy Mission Due in Turkey To Arrange Syrian Retreat

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, June 24.—A special mission of six representatives of the Vichy government headed by Minister Without Portfolio Benoit Mechin is expected to arrive in Turkey shortly from France to discuss the possibility of evacuating through this country the armies now fighting for High Commissioner General Henri Fernand Dentz against the Allies in the mandated territories of the Levant.

However, the aircraft bringing them from Vichy is now 24 hours overdue and considerable worry is evident among French circles. It is reported—without confirmation by the French Embassy—that the mission is bringing with it a special letter to President Ismet Inonu and it is believed this will not only emphasize the friendship of France and Turkey, explaining away the misunderstandings caused by Vice Premier Admiral Francois Darlan's last speech, but will ask for Turkish permission to retreat in this direction.

If all this information should prove accurate, it indicates that the Vichy government feels that the Syrian undeclared war is nearing its end and wants a graceful way out. What Turkey will do should this request be made is not clear, although it is possible such a retreat would be allowed on condition that the soldiers lay down their arms and submit to internment. Italian and German aviators who have made forced landings in Turkey have been interned.

Turks Reported Massing Troops

(Meanwhile, reports reaching Vichy, France, indicated Turkish troops were being massed on the Syrian frontier. Whether this meant that Turkey was preparing to move into northern Syria, a territory to which it long has laid claim, was not made clear.)

Heavy fighting was reported today on three different Syrian and Lebanese fronts as the Allies consolidated their positions west and north of Damascus and pressed home their attack on Beirut. British military sources here predict that city will be occupied within a week at most and state they have information that the column fighting its way there north of Damour has improved its position. British artillery is now pounding the French batteries defending the city.

The Beirut radio announced that the French air force has heavily bombed the British motorized column which is now in Palmyra after

High Costs to Increase Price Of Milk, Dairy Official Says

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

In a milk price tug of war yesterday, the proposal to give producers a cent a quart increase was attacked and supported by partisans whose diversified number included the production head of a large Washington dairy, several farmers, and an expectant mother.

Highlights of the second day's testimony in the Department of Agriculture hearing on amendment of the Washington milk marketing order were:

A proposal by M. V. Davison, in charge of production for Chestnut Farms, Chevy Chase Dairy, that if Secretary Claude R. Wickard grants an increase to producers, it be no more than 30 cents a hundredweight, rather than the 46 cents requested. If the amount be higher, he implied that the retail price of milk will go up not one but two cents a quart.

A frontal assault by Mrs. Sarah Newman, chairman of the Consumers Milk Committee, on arguments submitted Monday by B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, purporting to justify a cent a quart increase to farmers. Mrs. Newman pleaded for extension of the 3-cent milk program for undernourished families and hinted the Department of Justice might well investigate "a kind of monopoly" here in milk.

Derrick's invitation to Mrs. Newman to send him 1,000 Negroes for job placement in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Mrs. Newman demurred at the responsibility, explaining she does not run an employment agency. Derrick repeated that he can use up to 1,000 farm laborers. His office is at 1756 K Street Northwest.

Mrs. Evelyn Cooper's plea against a milk price increase because, combined with the fact she expects a second child soon, it would wreck her modest budget. She and her husband are residents of Greenbelt, the Maryland community of low income families.

A suggestion by Mason F. Smith, a Herndon, Va., producer, that the proposed price increase include not only fluid milk, but that milk which is processed for sale as cream. Because of the spring drought, he's going to have to spend between $2,000 and $2,500 for hay, Smith said, in support of

Roosevelt Invites Youths To Join British

Includes China In Indorsing Drive For Technicians

President Roosevelt, in effect, yesterday encouraged young Americans to enlist in the British and Chinese armed forces and at the same time gave strong indorsement to the British drive to recruit a volunteer corps of noncombatant American technicians to service war equipment in England.

Any boy who wants to go to Canada and enlist in His Majesty's fighting forces has a perfect right to go, said Mr. Roosevelt, issuing what was interpreted as a broad invitation to American youths to "join up" with embattled Britain.

Further, the President said that, while the Neutrality Act forbids belligerent countries from recruiting soldiers here, an American may enlist in Canada and become part of the armed forces as long as he does not take the oath of allegiance to the King.

Oath Not Required

The President then volunteered the information that British forces are no longer requiring foreigners to take the oath of allegiance, which would make them British subjects.

Mr. Roosevelt's encouragement of American enlistments in the British fighting services came as he issued an indorsement of the British drive to recruit an unlimited number of Americans for the newly organized British civilian technical corps.

Under this plan, announced here and in London last week, young

Army Will Build $3,000,000 Supply Depot in Arlington

The Army has selected a 73-acre site south of the Arlington Experimental Farm and the Washington Airport for the construction of a $3,000,000 quartermaster depot to supply troops stationed in this area.

Col. R. E. Duff, of the War Department General Staff, disclosed the decision to build the depot adjoining the Arlington Cantonment during testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee, made public yesterday.

Options already have been taken from five of the six owners of the tract while the other land will be condemned, it was said. The area desired lies between the experimental farm and airport, the railroad tracks, Columbia Pike and Washington Boulevard extended. A brick and tile yard and other business property, as well as residences, are on the tract, officials said.

Cost of the land is expected to be about $500,000, while the depot, 500,000 square feet in area, will cost about $2,500,000.

The post now houses a military police battalion.

Great Battles Rage in Poland; Reds Pour Bombs on Warsaw; Panzer Regiment Wiped Out; Reich Parachutists Join Fray

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 24.—Extremely heavy fighting north of Brest-Litovsk was indicated today and German reports from Hitler's headquarters in the east told of "great successes," including the shattering of a line of Russian bunkers in the third day of the German-Russian war.

[Adolf Hitler has joined his troops on the eastern front, a New York Times dispatch said.]

The fierce fighting apparently was between Brest-Litovsk, which the Germans captured yesterday, and the East Prussian frontier and Pripet swamps. This region, with a base about 100 miles long, bulges into East Prussia from German-occupied Poland.

Here four Russian armies stood on the first day of the German attack Sunday, according to a report to the German high command. The armies included, the report said, 49 infantry divisions, many of them motorized, three tank divisions, 12 armored brigades and 7 cavalry divisions.

Stukas Terrorize Foe

These forces could be supported by 2,000 Soviet planes based north of the Pripet swamps.

Behind the hot, dust-clouded battlefront Stukas dived in screaming attack at Russian columns, and war reporters, who rode in them declared: "The effect is terrible . . . There is nothing but confusion beneath us."

The official German news agency, D. N. B., reported the piercing of a strong line of Soviet bunkers in the middle of the front. It also said "several hundred were killed and several thousand Russian prisoners have been taken" in brief fighting at close quarters in an unspecified location.

D. N. B. reported also that German units had "destroyed" one Russian division. (A division normally has 15,000 men.)

The Germans clashed with the Russian division yesterday after breaking through enemy border positions, D. N. B. said. "Before the German troops were able properly to station themselves for battle," said the agency, "the Russian division collapsed under German fire and was destroyed."

Planes Rout Tanks

"Soviet tank forces standing ready were scattered by the German air force," the agency continued. "German losses were exceptionally small in this fighting."

Tonight D. N. B. reported that the Germans destroyed 280 Russian tanks in two operations. At one unnamed point where the Germans smashed through Soviet positions after fierce fighting they destroyed 180 tanks which had sought to hold up the Nazi advance, D. N. B. said.

Yesterday, the agency said, the German air force destroyed 100 Russian tanks in a comparatively small sector of the eastern front.

The high command reported only that operations were "following with great successes their planned course" in a communique issued from "the Fuehrer's headquarters."

The Germans penetrated 120 miles and 80 miles, respectively, in two main thrusts into Soviet territory in the first two days of fighting, according to reports to foreign military attaches in Ankara.

In the longer drive, Nazi panzer divisions reached far into the Ukraine, Russia's granary, with an attack launched from southern Poland, these reports said.

In the second thrust German forces, aided by Rumanian troops, were reported to have cut northward through Russian Bessarabia in an attack aimed ultimately at Odessa and other Russian Black

Moscow (Wednesday), June 25.—Meeting the German onslaught with "stiff resistance," Russia officially declared early today her armies had "annihilated a Nazi mechanized regiment and her bombs had started huge fires in Warsaw, Constanta and other German-occupied cities."

Claiming great damage to military objectives, the Red army reported gasoline dumps were burning in Warsaw and the Rumanian city of Constanta is "ablaze" after three bombings by Soviet warplanes.

[The Russian claims were supported by information reaching military quarters in Vichy, France, and Berne, Switzerland.

[From Vichy came reports that the Russians were holding all along the front and that the Germans were unable to advance after initial successes along the frontier of Russian occupied Poland.

Nazis Face Real Danger

[Military experts in Berne, the New York Times reported, expressed belief that once the main weight of the Russian forces is thrown into the northeast, the German situation may become "extremely precarious."—Editor's note.]

The war report revealed that the Germans had brought their world-famous parachute troops into play in the all-out assault on the Russian lands.

The Red army charged they wore Soviet uniforms.

"The Germans are dropping parachutists for the interruption of communications in batches of five or ten clad in the uniform of Soviet militiamen," the communique declared.

Say Onslaughts Repelled

"Units for the destruction of these parachutists have been created behind the front line. The NKVD (Russian secret police) is intrusted with the direction of the operations of these units."

On the far-flung battle line, the Russians declared the German offensive in the Siauliai area in old Lithuania had been repelled with heavy losses to the Nazis; fierce fighting is in progress in defense of Grodno, Poland, and Wilno (Vilna), and Kaunas, Lithuania.

Large tank formations are battling in the Brodsk area.

It was in the Siaulial fighting that mechanized units of the Russian army met and destroyed tank formations of the Germans and a mechanized German regiment was blasted, the report said.

On the home front, Soviet citizens cheered troops departing for the front, sent them away with rousing Russian songs, pelted them with flowers.

Claim 381 Planes Smashed

The Red army high command said its air force was cooperating with the army in the field and had dealt "crushing blows to the airdromes and important military targets of the enemy."

It declared the air force brought down 34 aircraft during the day and that 381 German planes had been destroyed—161 by Russian aircraft in air battles and 220 while on the airdromes of the Luftwaffe.

At sea, the Russians reported the sinking of a German submarine by Ship Owners Ask for 'Just Compensation'

By the Associated Press

Operators of American merchant ships told Senators yesterday they were carrying national defense supplies to the Red Sea, Rangoon in the Far East, and newly established naval bases.

The testimony about operations under the Lease-Lend Bill and national defense programs was given at a public hearing of the Senate Commerce Committee when ship operators asked numerous changes in a House-approved bill to establish "priorities" on virtually all merchant ships operating from the United States.

The ship operators asked the Senate to assure them "just compensation" under the proposed legislation which would place their ships under warrants of the Maritime Commission to control cargo, destination, and operations.

At present all American vessels are operating under voluntary control of the commission and ship operators cited their services on this basis to support their plea for a "just compensation" provision.

Carry War Supplies

D. S. Morrison, of the American-Hawaiian Line, said a large part of his 32 ships had been used for "lease-lend cargo to the Red Sea," presumably war supplies for English, Free French and other forces opposing the Axis powers.

J. W. Von Herbulis, official of the Waterman Steamship Line, testified that of 37 ships under his control 31 had aided the national defense program, including four sent to the Red Sea, and one to Rangoon, Burma, whence supplies have been carried to China over the Burma Road.

Herbulis protested that the Government had not availed itself of his company's management and stevedore services in connection with this work and asked that a Senate provision remedy this.

John Mann, Maritime Commission attorney, demurred, saying that in the Red Sea shipments an enormous amount of cargo was going to one area and it was necessary to use the management and stevedore services of another line which normally operates there.

If this were not done, Mann said, a "mess would result" from trying to operate through all ship lines involved, or the Maritime Commission would be forced to set up a large staff of its own.

More for Red Sea

Douglas W. Barton, of the Baltimore & Insular Steamship Lines, testified that of 30 ships, some 21 had been used to carry supplies to Puerto Rico for new bases there and in that area.

Oliver P. Caldwell testified that of 25 vessels under the Luckenbach Line, three had gone to the Red Sea, three more were going, and others would carry supplies to the Far East.

The merchant marine operators said they were assured "just compensation" under the present maritime law but that the proposed legislation included no such provision.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he favored such a provision, pointing out this was "compulsory legislation."

"It avoids requisition by a process of coercion," he said. "It puts you out of business unless you come in. If you come in, you are under control."

Maritime Commission officials informed Congress that the new priorities legislation was necessary to meet a "serious shortage of merchant shipping."

350 To Get Training

Because of a shortage of licensed merchant marine officers, the Maritime Commission announced yesterday a new educational program for 350 American seamen.

Two officer training schools, the commission said, will be reserved entirely for experienced seamen seeking to become licensed officers.

One school is at Fort Trumbull, Conn., and will accommodate 200 men. The other is at Government Island, Alameda, Calif., and will accommodate 150 men. Both schools are units of the United States maritime service, operated for the commission by the Coast Guard.

Experienced seamen accepted for training will be paid $55 a month for a course of four to six months. This will fit them to take examinations for license as third mates or third assistant mates.

USO Drive for $250,000 Nears Halfway Mark; Bishop Freeman Tells Need for Soldiers' Fund

DRIVE NEARS HALF--WAY MARK—The Washington division of the United Service Organization reported at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel that the halfway mark in its drive for $250,000 was almost in sight. A total of 124,392 has been collected, it was reported. Bishop James E. Freeman (left) was principal speaker at the luncheon. Shown with him are Sidney F. Washington's United Service Organization drive to raise $250,000 here has almost reached the halfway mork, more than 400 volunteer campaign workers were told yesterday at their second report luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel. A total of $124,392 has been collected to date, it was said.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, warned workers this country has never faced a situation comparable to that it faces today. "America is not yet aroused to the danger," he said.

Speaking of the USO campaign for funds to provide recreation for soldiers on leave from camps, he said: "I have heard some people say this is a job for the Government. God forbid!"

"I am shocked that people should question the propriety of this thing," said Bishop Freeman. "I deny vehemently that this is the Government's business."

He told workers he wanted each of them to go out as "evangelists," taking thir jobs with "deadly seriousness."

Richard Hynson, vice chairman, reported a total collected to date by the special gifts unit of $31,745; A. M. McLachlen, cochairman of the group solicitation unit, reported $11,435; Col. Thomas M. Spaulding, executive officer of the Government unit, reported $79,545, and Harry L. Merrick, chairman of the general solicitation unit, reported $1,048.

Albert W. Atwood, vice chairman of the District USO campaign committee, presided, and Sidney Talliaferro, chairman, also spoke. Another report luncheon will be held Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

units of the Red fleet.

In addition to Warsaw and Constanta, the Red air force had bombed Danzig, whichh the Germans wrested from Poland in 1939, the East Prussian city of Konigsberg, and Lublin, about 100 miles southeast of Warsaw.

Each of these cities was subjected to three different attacks, the communique declared.

Foe Repulsed in Finland

The war report then turned to Finland and declared German soldiers quartered in that little country had been beaten back in an attempt tto cross the Soviet border.

"Finland has lent her territory to the German army and air force," the communique said. "For the past ten days concentrations of German troops and planes have been proceeeding on the borders of the U. S. S. R.

"On June 23, six German aircraft flying from Finnish territory attempted to bomb the Kronstadt region (where Russia has a naval base).

"These aircraft were repelled| One of them was shot down and four German officers were taken prisoners. Some units of the German army tried to cross the Soviet border. The German army units were repelled. German soldiers have been made prisoners."

Next the Red army report turned to Rumania's part in the German attack.

Raids, Land Offensive

"Rumania has put her territory at the complete disposal of the German armies," the communique said.

"Not only are raids by the German air force carried out from Rumanian territory on Soviet towns and armies, but German troops with the cooperation of the Rumanian armies are also conducting a land offensive.

"The repeated attempts of the German-Rumanian armies to take possession of Cernauti (in Bucovina territory yielded to Russia last year by Rumania) and gain a foothold on the eastern bank of the River Prut have not been successful. German and Rumanian prisoners have been made."

Girls Seek to Enlist

Tass, the Soviet news agency, describing this upsurge of patriotic emotion, told of girls clamoring for permission to join the Red army and high school students coming in groups to seek early enlistment in the armed forces.

Pravda, the Communistic party organ, writing again with old Bolshevist enthusiasm, proclaimed that now is the time to "smash the vile Fascist beast which dared to lift its blood-stained paw against our free life."

At the same time Soviet vigilance against counter-revolutionary, pro-Fascist and other subversive elements was redoubled. Pravda printed the stern warning that "each and every one attempting in these tense and hard times to violate discipline and spread panic will be regarded as an enemy of the Soviet state and treated mercilessly to the full extent of wartime law."

Roosevelt Invites Youth to Aid British

Transportation Offered

The recruits will wear distinctive uniforms, will receive wages ranging from $24.12 to $38.65 a week plus board and lodging, and be transported to Britain and back at the war's end at British expense.

Mr. Roosevelt, saying he favored this wholesale recruiting drive, observed that applications may be addressed to the British consulate general, 25 Broadway, New York.

The President made it plain that such technical recruits would do noncombatant work and would not become a part of the British armed forces.

Is Perfectly Legal

It is all perfectly legal, he said, explaining that despite the Neutrality Act anyone may go to a belligerent country at his own risk, provided he does not take the oath of allegiance to a foreign government.

The President said that his indorsement of such enlistments applied for China as well as for the United Kingdom. He did not know, however, whether a man who enlisted with the British forces would be deferred from Selective Service. He stated emphatically, however, that they would be returned to this country should the need arise.

10,000 Already Serving

The Canadian Legaton disclosed last night that already approximately 10,000 Americans are in the Canadian and English armed forces.

According to a speech this week by H. J. Halston, Canadian defense minister, between 6,000 and 7,000 United States citizens are serving in the Canadian armed forces. In addition, there are 600 Americans on the staff of pilots in the Royal Canadian Air Force and another 1,500 pupils are in training as pilots.

This does not include several hundred Americans who were in England or made their way to England after the war broke out to enter the service, nor the membership of the Eagle Squadron, an all-American air-fighter outfit.

Asked about official statements that some Selective Service trainees might be kept in uniform by the Army, the President said he expected a report on that subject shortly from the War Department.

The President's Day

By International News Service

JIMMY HOME: Capt. Jimmy Roosevelt of the U. S. Marines, came quietly home yesterday bringing his bride, the former Romelle Schneider, and a report on his hazardous observation tour of the Middle East. At a quiet dinner for three, the President heard all about his eldest son's experiences in Cairo and the Mediterranean battleground, got acquainted with his new and beautiful daughter-in-law.

CONFERENCE: French windows open against the air-conditioning which he doesn't like, the President served notice through the U. S. press that Uncle Sam stands ready to give Soviet Russia all possible aid even if Uncle doesn't like Communism, heartily indorsed the British drive to enroll American volunteers in British civilian technical corps and by broad inference gave his blessing to adventuresome American youths who want to go to Canada to join Britain's fighting forces—without oath of allegiance to the King.

UNSHINY: Little of the usual Roosevelt humor shined up the day's press rally. The President was genial, calm and soft-spoken but not in the mood for funning. The gray-and-white striped seersucker suits which he prefers during the Washington swelter was accompanied by a gray tie with a tweedy pattern in white, and a white soft shirt. On his desk lay a fragrant bough of balsam from the Presidential summer place, Campo Bello, and brought to him by a returning friend who heard the President say how much he liked the keen, piney smell of the Campo Bello balsam.

EPILOGUE: Immediately after the conference Mayor LaGuardia bustled in and out again after a few words with the President.

to a department store and fill their orders.

Such vital military equipment as warplanes present a problem, he said, because American orders for our own defense and Great Britain have to be filled. Orders are piled up as a backlog at plane factories for many months ahead.

No Answer on Machine Tools

The President told reporters he did not know if any priorities on warplanes now assigned to Britain would be made available to Russia, but he said that delivery schedules can only be changed by agreement.

Moreover, the Chief Executive said he did not know whether supplies turned over to the Communist forces would be handled under the lease-lend law or would have to be paid for by the Russians. He refused to answer one newsman who wanted to know if the defense of Russia was "essential to the defense of the United States," the phrase used by the lease-lend law to determine what nations are eligible for American war aid under its terms.

President Roosevelt's pledge gave force to the statement of Government policy issued by Welles yesterday which supported Russia's struggle against Hitlerism as the lesser of two evils.

Mr. Roosevelt said, in answer to questions, that he supposed export licenses would be made available to Russia for goods it has been anxious to purchase from the United States.

On the question of machine tools, which head the list of materials the Russians have been trying to buy here, the President gave no specific answer, but he noted that nearly a year ago Russia secured delivery on some machine tool orders and that later on the United States took over some tools that had been ordered by the Soviets because the tools were needed for American defense.

Both the President and Welles indicated that there were communication difficulties between Washington and Moscow. Mr. Roosevelt said he did not have the foggiest idea what equipment the Russians wanted and he didn't think that the Russian Ambassador, Oumansky, had any clearer idea. Welles had told the press at noon that the State Department had received no word yesterday from Moscow.

Russia Can Withdraw Funds

In an unusual announcement, the Treasury disclosed that a general license had been issued permitting Russia to withdraw its funds here.

The statement said that the license had been issued "without requirement of the formal assurances which have been requested of European neutral nations affected by the freezing order."

These assurances, requested of Sweden and Switzerland last week, were to make certain that none of the frozen funds, immobilized June 14 by Treasury order, will be used to help the Axis powers.

"Recent events concerning the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics," said the Treasury, "have made such assurances unnecessary."

The Soviets are known to have $40,000,000 in assets in the United States, which become "unfrozen" by the general license. In addition, there are believed to be other Russian funds here which might bring the total Soviet resources in the United States to more than $50,000,000. The size of the "unseen" portion of Russian holdings here is not known to the Government.

Officials yesterday were considering relaxing export restrictions that bar sale of aviation gasoline of more than 87 octane rating to Russia. Heretofore exports of this type of fuel have been permitted only to the Western Hemisphere and British Empire countries.

President Roosevelt said he had read reports that Col. William J. ("Wild Bill") Donovan, World War hero who has toured the war erea twice on secret missions for Navy Secretary Knox, might be assigned an important post in the Army Military Intelligence Division. The President did not indicate whether the reports were true or false.

Officials pointed out that there were two opposite interpretations of the wording of President Roosevelt's pledge of aid to Russia.

The President's language, which may not be quoted, said in substance that we are going to give all the aid we possibly can.

Some quarters took this to mean that every resource would be strained to give weapons of war to Germany's new foe, while others took the phrase to mean that Russia would receive all the help consistent with America's own national defense program and policy of helping Britain.

Informed officials leaned to the latter interpretation: that while the President wants to support Russian resistance as much as possible, and will grant Russia many concessions, the Soviets will have to wait their turn for actual tools of war.

The Gallup Poll

67% Favor Nation-wide Adoption Of Summer Daylight Saving Time

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 24.—Secretary Ickes' suggestion that the Nation adopt daylight-saving time to save electricity and increase daylight working hours meets with the approval of a sizable majority of American voters interviewed in a Nation-wide survey. Even in the large farming areas—the Middle West and the South—where sentiment has heretofore been against daylight saving, substantial majorities now approve the suggestion for setting the clocks ahead during the summer period up to the end of September.

However, the country is opposed by a slight majority at this time to the idea of keeping the country on daylight saving throughout the whole year, the poll shows.

Sharp Controversy

Daylight time has been a subject of sharp controversy, especially between city folk and farm folk, ever since it was first widely adopted during the last World War.

To discover where the country stands today the American Institute of Public Opinion interviewed a representative cross-section of persons in cities, small towns and on farms on the following issues:

"To save electricity and to increase daylight working hours, it has been suggested that the entire country be put on daylight saving time until the end of September. Do you favor or oppose this suggestion?"

The results are:

Favor	67%
Oppose	19
Undecided	14

"Would you favor or oppose keeping the country on daylight saving time throughout the coming year?"

Favor	38%
Oppose	41
Undecided	21

President Wilson helped sponsor daylight time as a means of prolonging daylight working hours during the World War. However, daylight time is favored today not simply as a war measure, or an emergency measure. As a matter of fact, the country was in favor of daylight time in summer at least four years ago in an Institute survey.

In 1937 and again in 1940 the Institute asked:

"Are you in favor of daylight saving time?"

Among those who expressed an opinion the vote in the two surveys was:

Favor	57%
1940
Favor	60%
Oppose	40

Approximately one person in every five (19 per cent) expressed no opinion in the 1940 survey.

Every survey has shown that the greatest opposition to daylight time comes from the farmers of the Nation, who argue that setting the clock ahead would upset the farmers' work day.

Today the farmers as a group favor daylight saving but by a vote substantially lower than the national average or the average for cities and towns.

Favor D.S.T. for Summer		Oppose	Undecided
Farmers	45%	34%	21%
Towns Under 10,000	64	20	16
Towns Over 10,000	77	13	10

The farmers are definitely opposed, however, to the idea of having daylight time all through the year.

People who have tried out daylight time in their own communities are much more willing to see it extended throughout the Nation than people who live in communities without daylight time.

In fact, those with daylight time are in favor of keeping the clocks set ahead all year round. Their actual vote is 48 per cent for year-round daylight saving, 35 per cent against and 17 per cent undecided. On the other hand, people living in communities which have no daylight time are opposed to having daylight time all year. Every section of the country, however, votes for daylight time during the summer.

Fish Traps Banned On 2 Tributaries Of Potomac River

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—Chairman Carl H. Nolting of the State game and inland fisheries commission, announced today that after the present license year no fyke nets would be allowed in Belmont Bay and Gunston Cove, tributaries of the northern Potomac.

Commercial fishermen who now have the fish traps in place will be permitted to retain their nets until the expiration of their permits, but no additional license will be granted.

The announcement was made after a conference with J. Brooks Mapp, the Virginia commissioner of fisheries, with whom an agreement recently was reached giving the game and inland fisheries commission jurisdiction over the Fairfax and Prince William County tributaries of the Potomac.

Network of 352 Air Spotters to Cover Maryland

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Isaac S. George, executive director of the State council of defense, said today that Maryland's volunteer aircraft warning service, being organized to aid in combating possible air raids, will be ready to operate within three weeks.

A network of 352 spotter posts will cover the State. Already more than 200 posts have been set up and about 100 volunteer specialists have been classified for the information filter unit to be established in Baltimore.

Approximately 5,200 volunteer men and women will be assigned to various units over the entire State when the service is completed. Between 12 and 15 spotters will be on duty for the continuous operation of each post.

Chemical Fumes Fell Workmen At Cottage City

Two men were overcome by chemical fumes while working in the Caled Products Co., Cottage City, Md., last night. They were removed to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Their condition is not serious.

The men are William Burton, 29, 4509 Prospect Avenue, Brentwood, Md., and James Pullin, 18, 16 Taylor Avenue, Riverdale, Md.

Gilbert Clarke, 35, 1442 Fairmont Street Northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital after he had inhaled sulphur dioxide fumes while repairing an electric refrigerator. Clarke was overcome in a restaurant in the 1400 block G Street Northwest.

Alexandria Lions Club Will Install Today

Newly elected officers of the Alexandria Lions Club will be installed at the regular luncheon session today at 12:30 at the George Mason Hotel by Charles M. Jones, retiring president.

Succeeding Jones as president will be Dr. Nathan G. Schuman. Other new officers are Cary Blackwell, first vice president; John L. Doniphan, second vice president; J. Randolph Davis, third vice president; Howard R. Richardson, secretary treasurer; Isador Bregman, lion tamer; Nicholas A. Colasanto, tail twister, and William H. Japan Waivers On Wisdom Of Axis Pact

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 24.—Meeting in a tense atmosphere with all members present, the cabinet today debated the political, military and economic issues created for Japan by the Russo-German hostilities, but failed to produce the anticipated statement clarifying Japan's policy.

According to the press, the ministers exchanged "very sincere, very frank opinions in studying the future course of the empire," which was taken to indicate that no decisions were reached and that another liaison conference between the government and the high command was scheduled for tomorrow.

Without official guidance or real information, public opinion and the press, which are completely at sea, agree on only one thing—namely, that all previous Japanese calculation has been upset and that Japan now faces a most serious situation politically and economically.

Politically, because Japan now realizes that Germany can win the war only by defeating Russia, Great Britain and the United States, and that is a large order for even the most sanguine pro-Axis champions. And, if Germany loses or is unable to win a decisive victory, Japan can expect little profit from her triple alliance.

On the other hand, an increasing number of Japanese are beginning to realize what a German victory of such dimensions would mean to Japan. Heretofore, Japanese followers of Nazi doctrines divided the world into four or five economic blocs, each of which was to be dominated by a big power in the new balance of power, and among these blocs the Soviet bloc was to be one.

See World Nazi Bloc

But if Germany defeats the three big powers lined up against her, the world would become merely one huge Nazi bloc. In such a case, where is Japan?

The spokesman for the Italian Embassy in Tokyo is already telling the Japanese press that after her victory over Russia, due in two months, Germany will "help to organize Russia as an agricultural hinterland which would bring the German power to the borders of Japan's own sphere of influence." As a result some Japanese are beginning to fear that Japan may be pushed into the role of Italy, and the press is already hinting about the failure of Japan's past policies.

Economically, Japan's business foresees increasing shortages of all kinds of materials and goods as the inevitable consequence of the spread of the war and the growing consumption of war materials. For the moment, business finds some consolation in the view that the Russo-German conflict is likely to postpone America's entrance into the war and the stock market, which slumped badly yesterday, steadied today. But there is general agreement that a continuation of the present policies must bring a further aggravation of Japan's already strained economic situation.

Press Urges Firmness

In the light of such considerations the press can only urge the government to show firmness and resolution in trying to "turn bad fortune into good," and the Chugai Shogyo, the organ of the business world, warns the government against "misleading public opinion."

In a broadcast tonight, Prince Konoye, the prime minister, made some general statements which are indicative of his own trend of thought beyond the China affair.

"We see a world in turmoil and upheaval," he said. "The world demands a new order, denying the old. Without making sacrifices we cannot hope for a livelihood tomorrow. It is desirable to stand outside of the turmoil. Neither Japan nor China are instruments of other countries. They have their own will and should act accordingly."

Unfortunately, he exclaimed, the will of China is obscured by the influences of other powers dominant in China, but he asserted the free will of China was born anew through Wang Ching-wei, head of the Nanking Government, with whom Japan is determined to cooperate.

Lists Three Choices

Then he continued in a manner which the Japanese admit is difficult for Westerners to understand:

"There are three ways open for Japan to deal with China. The first is aggression by force. The second is colonization of China as the imperialistic Western powers did in China in the past. The third is to recognize the independence of China and go one step further, to assist and promote her independence, so that China will be enabled to cooperate with Japan as an Axis partner and contribute to the welfare of the peoples of East Asia.

"Japan chose the last course, which was the most difficult of the three, because of her morality.

"Heaven bids Japan and China to go hand-in-hand. It is the mission of Japan and China to cooperate and to never clash."

He admitted, however, that China must go through many difficulties before she can put domestic things in order, while Japan sees the waves of the Pacific rising high.

Previous to his broadcast, Prince Konoye had been received in audience by Emperor Hirohito, and both the Italian and the Russian ambassadors had called on the foreign minister, Yosuke Matsuoka.

his contention farmers must receive greater revenue.

Testimony was concluded yesterday on the price rise demand. At what is expected to be the public hearing's final session today at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, representatives of several dairies serving the local market will urge adoption of amendments affecting handling procedures.

Marketing Order Changes Sought

Davison, first of these dairy officials to be sworn in, recommended changes in the Federal milk marketing order which would slightly revise the definition of Class 2 milk and make certain other technical modifications in dealings with producers.

In behalf of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, he also asked abolition of the two-cents-a-hundredweight assessment levied by Virginia on the company's milk sold in Alexandria and Arlington County. This charge constitutes a dual penalty, he said, since a two-cent assessment is placed on this same milk by the Washington marketing administrator.

Citing increasing handling costs, chief of which is the union contract signed this week giving wage increases and shorter hours to drivers and plant workers, Davison testified, in substance, that if the farmers deserve more money, so do the dairies.

"While it is true that the purchasing power of consumers has increased on the average it is likewise true that any increase in price to them in excess of one cent per quart is apt to result in a reduction of consumption," he warned.

"Not only is the producer price apt to be reduced by decreased consumption resulting from too great an increase in price to producers but new producers and increased supplies by the present producers may also well result in a surplus of milk and lower blended returns.

Costs Increase

"The ability of handlers to absorb increased costs has reached its limit and the recent increase in the cost of labor and supplies can only be met, without growing bankruptcies, by an increase in price to consumers.

"This situation has become so serious as to indicate that producers will not be fully paid for their milk by some handlers unless relief is afforded."

He advised producers to follow the dairies' lead and combat labor costs by putting in milking machines and other labor saving devices, adding:

"Such investments which pay dividends in reduced operating costs do not necessarily constitute justification for price increase."

"We are sure," he said, "that the defense emergency not only requires added supplies of milk, but that these supplies of milk shall be available to consumers at a price that will result in maximum consumption in view of the circumstances governing this milk market.

"Anything less than this will be detrimental to producers in their blended price, to handlers in their operations, and to the public health."

In her detailed statement, Mrs. Newman launched out aggressively against Derrick's arguments for a price increase. She said the association's closed base-quota system of payment to farmers, together with stringent Health Department regulations which keep many producers out of Washington, "resolve themselves into restraints on trade." "Careful scrutiny" of the Federal antitrust division is indicated, she declared.

She countered Derrick's pro-increase figures with a myriad of figures of her own on farm income, feed prices, influence of the drought, labor and other factors.

"There is less justice in jumping the price of so essential a commodity as milk than there is in inflating the price of automobiles, cotton or a number of similarly affected commodities on which Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold have already laid their restraining hands," she asserted.

"It has been said that food is a weapon. If that is so, isn't pricing milk outside the people's reach taking the guns out of their hands? We cannot condone an attempt to profiteer on milk while we condemn wartime profits of munition makers. The two situations have too much in common."

"Unjustifiable Social Policy"

Others who testified yesterday against a price increase which would send home-delivered milk to at least 15 cents, and probably 16, included:

Mrs. Marian Hyman, of the Washington Committee for Democratic Action, who said the proposed boost is "unjustifiable social policy." She also urged extension of nickel quarts to a larger number of needy families than now permitted to buy them.

Mrs. Georgia K. Benjamin, of the College Park (Md.) branch, American Association of University Women, who said one-fourth of the Prince Georges County school children are undernourished.

Harold A. Serr, Arlington-Alexandria Milk Consumers Committee, who also indorsed the relief milk program and recommended inclusion of nearby Virginia in the Washington milk-marketing area. Paper-container milk that is 9½ cents a quart here is 14 cents on the other side of the river, he said.

The increase was advocated by Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, who described herself as a founder of the National Woman's Party and the League of Women Voters; and A. Lawrence Leigh and Jesse J. Ramey, farmers, of Vienna, Va.

Davies Thinks Russia Will Surprise World

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Joseph E. Davies, United States Ambassador to Russia from 1936 to 1938, said today that "it is a matter of good judgment that we should take a stand now during the Nazi-Soviet fighting."

Speaking and answering questions before the Wisconsin Society of Chicago, Davies, now special assistant to the Secretary of State, added:

"It is my opinion that the world will be surprised at the extent to which Russia will resist. It is possible that Germany will break through in the Ukraine, but it is one thing to get into a country and another to maintain communication lines 1,800 miles."

If Russian organized resistance breaks down, he said, "we can expect guerrilla warfare by local Russians."

Davies quoted Hitler as saying to a British diplomat in 1937 that the Russians had the best army on the European continent outside of Germany.

On the basis of his "latest information," Davies estimated the total strength of Russian military forces at 18,000,000, divided this way: Present front-line troops, 3,000,000 to 3,200,000; trained reserves with three years in the army, 8,000,000; reserves of military age with some training, 7,000,000.

One questioner asked Davies how he rationalized Russian military might with her poor showing in Finland and he said the story he heard was that Russia "underestimated Finnish strength and sent green troops, but that when the first-line troops were thrown in they broke through Finland's Mannerheim Line in less than six weeks.

Another listener asked if there was a fifth column in Russia and Davies replied: "No, there is none in any totalitarian state; they shoot them."

V. F. W. Hears Van Zandt Ask Pension Rise

"Turn the heat on Capitol Hill" and win increases in disability pensions for American soldiers maimed in the World War, Representative James E. Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, three times former commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars told the twenty-second encampment of the organization here last night.

Van Zandt said boosting pensions to the disabled was of paramount importance for reasons of morale, and consequently to present day national defense.

The legislator recommended the members write their Congressmen urging passage of disability pension legislation which would raise monthly payments from $30 to $40 instead of trying to solve the "world problem."

"Things are happening so fast that a solution for today is obsolete tomorrow," he said. "We should take the same position we have in past years . . . demanding adequate defense."

Robert E. Merrill, of Havre, Mont., junior vice commander, emphasized the advantages of American citizens, in a country where liberty is maintained today in the face of ever-threatening totalitarianism.

Others to speak at the convention, in its second day at Roosevelt High School, included John L. Sullivan, judge advocate general, of Phoenix, Ariz., and James J. McGuirk, Fourth District council member, from Baltimore.

Election of officers will take place tonight.

D. C. Police Seek Missing Girl, 16

Police are searching for a 16-year-old girl who left her home last Monday to go to a Health Department clinic and didn't return.

The girl, Lucille Mandley, 618 Evart Street Northeast, left her home at 11:30 a. m. to go to a clinic at 469 C Street Northwest for a chest examination.

At the time she was wearing a pink dress with buttons down the front, blue shoes and light hose. She is 5 feet tall, has hazel eyes and light hair.

Keech Drafts Buckley Case Appeal Bill

First draft of a bill of exemptions to Police Court Judge Hobart Newman's ruling in the Buckley case was prepared by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech yesterday and after revision will be phesented to the District Court of Appeals either today or tomorrow.

Keech said the appeal will request a review of the case and particularly Judge Newman's decision that to try Attorney M. Edward Buckley, jr., on a 3-year-old driving-drunk charge would place the lawyer in double jeopardy.

Keech said his office intended to pursue the matter as far as possible and as quickly as arguments can be prepared. His action upholds a statement from Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch, who prosecuted the case, that he (Gasch) intended to take the matter to a higher court.

Judge Newman's decision that Buckley would not have to stand trial was in conflict with a ruling by Judge George D. Neilson on the same question. Neilson ordered the case to trial but when Buckley withdrew a jury trial demand and the case was called before Judge Newman in Traffic Court, the latter ruled in favor of the defendant and the case literally was closed.

Originally charged with driving while drunk July 22 last year after a two-car collision, Buckley did not appear in court until January when he was allowed to plead guilty to a charge of driving on the wrong side of the street and pay a $25 fine. Judge Newman assessed the fine and no witnesses were in the courtroom at the time.

Following an expose of the charge changing, Keech ordered an investigation after which he instructed his Police Court assistants to reopen the case and recharge Buckley with the original accusation.

After months of argument during which Buckley contended he was being placed in double jeopardy, Judge Neilson decided the elements of double jeopardy were lacking and order the case to trial.

Buckley demanded a jury trial and the case was continued for assignment in jury court. It appeared on the docket while Judge Newman was in Traffic Court and Buckley withdrew his plea for a jury trial and asked to be tried by the judge in Traffic Court.

Spanish Crowds Shout for War Against Soviet

By the Associated Press

Madrid, (Wednesday,) June 25.—In the wake of demonstrations in Spanish cities approving the Axis attack on Russia, the Spanish government declared early today it was studying "very carefully and fully the new phase" in the European war caused by the German-Russian conflict.

More than 10,000 demonstrators, led by uniformed Falangists appeared in Madrid yesterday shouting "on to Moscow" and assembled outside the German Embassy to applaud the Axis.

In an announcement after the cabinet session which extended two days, the government said Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner reported to the cabinet on a note from the German Ambassador announcing "grave, powerful reasons" for the Reich's war against the Soviet.

Similar demonstrations were held in Albacete, Barcelona and Valencia. In Barcelona German officials appeared on the balcony of the consulate and acknowledged the cheers.

The Madrid demonstrators, wearing the blue shirts and red berets of the uniform of the State Party, carried a banner saying 'Falange volunteers against Russia," and the demonstrators shouted wildly "death to Communism—death to Soviet Russia."

The demonstrations here culminated before party headquarters where Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, secretary-general of the party, appeared on a balcony and declared that the Soviet Union "must be exterminated."

The American and British embassies had special police guards because of the demonstrations.

Organists Hit Strange Note In Shop Talk

If you've never heard an organist "talk shop," then you should have been at St. Alban's Church yesterday afternoon where more than 300 leading organists from this country and Canada were having their second biennial convention.

Conversation among the organists would sound strange to the layman who might wonder what it meant to "keep intoning and intoning," or to have "pneumatic tubes on a grate so that you couldn't trill." Shop-talk like this followed yesterday's discussion about the choral problems of the volunteer choir, led by Donald Gilley, choir specialist from Worcester, Mass.

Dr. Palmer Christian, 56, organist at the University of Michigan, and one of the nation's leading experts on organ music, in a small group discussion with some of the other delegates, spoke of "the trend toward modernism or dissonant music."

"An organ is not the proper instrument for extreme dissonance," Dr. Christian stated. "If there can be a proper coordination of dissonance, not to the extreme, then we'll have something."

The Michigan organist foresees a revival of the old "plain-song" melodies in church music. He is enthusiastic about the influx of women into the profession, and credits the change to modern organs which do not require "blacksmith muscles" of the organists.

Dr. Christian studied organ at the Leipzig Royal Conservatory of Music with Karl Straube, and later in Paris, with Alexandre Guilmant.

Friday morning the organists will make a visit to the White House at the invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt, and a banquet that night will conclude the convention.

Host to the Guild of Organists in their five-day visit here is the District chapter, headed by Ruth Farmer Vanderlip. Channing LeFebvre, New York City, is chief warden of the associatoin.

Chase After Pair in Hotel Ends In Grand Theft Indictment

A chase after two transients that started in a downtown hotel last month ended yesterday when a District grand jury indicted the man and woman for grand larceny. The pair are Charles J. Regan, 37, with one alias, and Sylvia Nathan, 31, with four aliases, according to their indictments.

Eugene J. Hynes, of Philadelphia, Pa., told police he was dozing in his darkened hotel room waiting for milk and crackers to be brought him when the pair, accompanied by another woman, entered his room.

In apologies over getting in the wrong room, they left with $80 belonging to Hynes. Hynes chased them to an upper floor, then downstairs again, and finally cornered the pair with the assistance of hotel employes. The third escaped.

Other indictments included:

Unauthorized use of auto—Melvin M. Nichols, William Burnett, Richard Ross, Raymond Brooks, Charles E. Grandison, Norwood Stubbs and Olee Mitchell.

Housebreaking and larceny—Joseph B. Evans, Elmer L. Edwards, James H. Greene, Shirley Harris, Louis J. Williams and James R. Greene.

Grand larceny and embezzlement—Ralph W. Fischer.

Assault with dangerous weapon—William Marshall and Christine Lee.

Depredations on fixtures in house—William Bell.

Gunman Rapes Clerk After Robbing Store

Abarca was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

At 3 p. m. L. E. Hazard, police photographer and fingerprint expert, arrived at the scene. Because he had been out on another case, he was without the necesary fingerprint equipment. It was 5:45 p. m. when the equipment was brought to the store from police headquarters.

85 Detectives Assigned

Meanwhile, Capt. Floyd Truscott, former ace detective and presently head of the Tenth Precinct, arrived and took personal charge of the investigation with four of his precinct detectives.

At the same time, Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives, ordered 29 headquarters detectives assigned to the case in an attempt to break it quickly.

A suspect was arrested a few hours after the attack, but Mrs. Abarca failed to identify him as the assailant and he was later released.

Detectives found a number of fingerprints, some believed to have been left by the assailant. It also was learned that the man took a gray herringbone suit and may be wearing it in place of the brown suit he had on at the time of the assault.

The scene of the attack is two short blocks from the busy intersection at Fourteenth and Park Road, in Mount Pleasant where the sidewalks and streets are crowded with hundreds of shoppers and paisersby. Police were unable to locate any person in the neighborhood who saw the man enter or leave the establishment.

Mrs. Abarca is a registered nurse. She had been working at the cleaning establishment on part time for about a month. She was to have gone to work last night for a physician in Tokoma Park, D. C. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds.

Truscott, whose brilliant work as a headquarters detective earned him a precinct captaincy, assigned Precinct Detectives H. E. Hamilton, John Caton, C. M. Green and L. M. Francis to work directly under him. Capt. Truscott is credited with bringing to justice the Tri-State gang in 1934, and solving the murder of Allan B. Wilson, killed by gangsters because of mistaken ideantity, five years ago.

it did him," she said.

She testified she drew a bath which she believed was of moderate temperature into which Jimmy climbed after he had been whipped. When she returned she found him in convulsions.

"I'm kind of nervous anyway," she said. "I just went all to pieces."

She said she phoned the family physician, who prescribed for Jimmy. When he had a second convulsion he was taken to a hospital by an ambulance.

She denied testimony that she had beat him for 15 minutes, that she had told the police he had welts on his body, that she had hit him while he was in the bathtub, and that she had struck him more than "three or four times."

Mrs. Stewart followed her son to the witness stand where she remained, tight-lipped and pale, for more than an hour.

Attorneys attempted to determine whether Jimmy understood the difference between a truth and a falsehood when he came to the stand.

After elaborately preparing the way to his knowledge of what is truth by asking him about his Sunday school record, they asked:

"What would happen if you didn't tell the truth, Jimmy?"

"I'd go to the devil," he replied. It was his longest testimony.

Loud Radio Trips Suspect; $7,000 Seized

Two hours after he stepped from a train at Union Station with close to $7,000 worth of loot from a Natick, R. I., burglary, a 20-year-old paroled convict was in custody—tripped by blaring swing music from a radio.

The suspect, who was held last night as a fugitive from Natick, was arrested when policemen investigated a complaint from the Stratford Hotel that one of the guests refused to subdue a noisy radio.

Detectives Roy Blick, Elwood Groves and B. F. Bean found the roomer counting a pile of coins when they entered his room. He had $371 in small change, the investigators said. Search of his luggage disclosed between $6,000 and $7,000 worth of jewelry.

A tin milk check found among the coins brought about the suspect's identity and the place from which the loot was stolen. The check was stamped "B. B. & R. Knight, Natick," and investigation brought a report the home of the dairy owner had been broken into Sunday.

Confronted with this evidence, the fugitive, who gave the name of John Johnson, 20, of Boston, confessed.

He said he was a paroled convict from a Rhode Island penitentiary at Warwick, where he had served time for housebreaking. He agreed to waive extradition, it was said, and will be returned to Natick, probably this afternoon.

Sea ports.

(Reuters, British news agency, reported from Bucharest that Rumanian troops had occupied Cernauti, in the province of northern Bucovina.)

On the waters of the Baltic and the Black Sea, too, the battle raged in midsummer temperatures.

The Germans reported sinking a Soviet submarine and destroyer in the Baltic. (The British news agency Reuters from Ankara said Russian cruisers, destroyers and submarines were battling German planes off the Bulgarian coast of the Black Sea.)

Press reports from East Prussia told of Russian attempts to send bombers over German soil. German fighters engaged one Russian squadron in a brisk battle and shot down 20 planes, D. N. B. reported. The agency said some Russian crews attempted to bail out and prisoners were taken.

Russians Make Stand

One report from an unidentified point on the Eastern Front said German infantrymen had advanced several miles without encountering opposition. Then, in a village, Russians unexpectedly took a stand.

"The fighting was hot and bitter," the German news report stated. "Artillery shot down house after house, barn after barn. Clouds of smoke rose up against the clear blue summer sky. Tongues of fire licked out and destroyed buildings."

Another German war reporter gave this picture of a dive-bombing attack on a Russian column of tanks and horse-drawn cannon.

"Three or four tanks have been hurled to the side. Between them horses are running, are racing with their carts cross country, are spilling them, are falling prostrate. Scared, anguished faces are turned up toward us. After that there's nothing but confusion underneath us."

Diplomatic activity kept pace with fighting. Bulgaria agreed to take over representation of German interests in Moscow, thus indicating she intends to remain neutral. Slovakia declared war on Russia and sent her troops into action.

a long advance from Iraq, and that an Allied attack in the Merdjayoun sector has been repulsed. The British fleet shelled French coastal positions again and the Royal Air Force bombed Beirut.

British Claim Sea Victory

The British claim that French ships were struck in the harbor and that not only was a destroyer sunk by a direct hit, but that fire was started along the entire length of the northern pier. Australian aircraft machine-gunned French motor transports on the Damascus-Beirut road.

The British now confirm officially the previously reported capture of the Damascus air base at Mezze and the southern fortress of Khiam. They also claim to be advancing from Dagana to a point cutting the Damascus-Beirut road.

Informants who have just arrived from Syria report that one German general is still in the Levantine territories and that there is evidence of the organization efforts of the Nazi, who left shortly after hostilities broke out. They say the French have been fighting well and that they have considerable strength in armored units, especially in the Merdjayoun sector. However, the French troops are said to be tiring and not overly enthusiastic about this undeclared war. Some captured Senegalese are now said to be fighting well for the Allies.

Three Delegates At Gettysburg for G. A. R. Reunion

Gettysburg, Pa., June 24 (AP).—A late arrival has averted the possibility of a deadlock over election of a new commander and other business before the Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic annual encampment.

Former National G. A. R. Commander A. T. Anderson, 95, Washington, Pa., appeared shortly after State Commander Alfred Gabrio, 95, Hazelton, and J. S. Chapman, 97, Scranton, voted unanimously as the only convention delegates to postpone business sessions yesterday for a visit to the historic Gettysburg battlefield.

The three veterans are among 85 remaining of the 337,936 Pennsylvanians who shouldered arms in Federal forces of the Civil War. Most of the survivors are inactive and many are bedfast.

Britain Speeds Plans to Send Soviet Mission

London, June 24.—Great Britain and the Soviet Union have agreed to fight Germany together as military and economic partners, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden informed the House of Commons today.

The government announced tonight that preparations to send a mission to Russia "are being pressed forward as quickly as possible."

Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador who returned home from the Soviet Union June 11, "hopes to be able to return to Moscow in a few days' time," the foreign office announced.

Eden also disclosed that Turkey had "made it plain in the last 24 hours that the Anglo-Turkish treaty (for mutual aid) stands intact—that it stands first and foremost in her engagements," despite the new non-aggression accord signed between Turkey and Germany last week.

As for the attitude of the United States toward Britain's collaboration with communistic Russia, Eden suggested that "the declaration by Sumner Welles in the press this morning" should be read. This was that statement in which the American Acting Secretary of State asserted that "any defense against Hitlerism" would benefit the security of the United States.

Eden urged Britons to put aside political cosiderations raised by the new London-Moscow collaboration, adding they "cannot and must not obscure the reality which confronts us today."

War Chest Voted

Eden said that "we have always hated the creed" of Communism, but that that was not the issue today. The Russians "are fighting the man who seeks to dominate the world," he said, and added "that also is our sole task."

After hearing Eden, the House voted to place £1,000,000,000 (about $4,000,000,000) at the disposal of the government for war purposes—an amount which Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood estimated would last about three months at the present rate of expenditure.

Regarding the position of Turkey, the post-World War friend of Russia who last week signed a friendship treaty with Germany, Eden said Britain "should naturally have preferred if no such, treaty had been concluded."

Nevertheless, he said, Britain had been kept fully informed of the negotiations leading up to signing of the pact.

Former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, a frequent critic of the government, declared that "by vigorous action we can sustain" Turkey and added that "it is urgent to take military measures to reassure her."

Earl Winterton, Conservative, remarked that "sooner or later" Turkey "will have to declare which side she is on," whereupon Prime Minister Churchill stepped in to close this phase of discussion.

"It would not be in the public interest," he said, "for the discussion to continue along these lines. This really is a case of the least said the soonest mended."

2,000-Mile Front Crosses Soviet 'Buffer' Territory

From the White Sea to the Black Sea, the two-section battlefield of the Russo-German war extends more than 2,000 miles across forests, marshes, plains and mountains, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"Much of the Russian border territory involved in the first bloody fighting represents 'buffer' land obtained by the Soviet government during the last year and a half," the bulletin points out. "Included are areas formerly belonging to Finland, Lithuania, Poland and Rumania.

"The Russo-Finnish border, as redrawn after the short but intense war of 1939-40, is the northernmost third of the new conflict zone. Through dense pine forests and myriad lakes the area stretches from the Arctic south to the Gulf of Finland, with the White Sea making a deep indentation into the Russian part. First dispatches told of Soviet reconnaisance flights over the region, which now is enjoying the 'light night' period of little darkness.

"At Finland's southeastern edge the Germans were said to be attacking Russians on the Karelian Isthmus, a 70-mile wide bridge between the Gulf of Finland and Europe's largest lake, Ladoga. Before the Russo-Finnish War, Finland held part of the isthmus, and there had built its Mannerheim defense line.

"The Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea provide a gap in the original Russo-German battle line, which is resumed on the border between East Prussia and Soviet-held Lithuania. Then it extends south and eventually southeast to the Black Sea, a distance of some 1,350 miles. In driving into the Lithuanian farming plains, German troops pushed eastward of the Baltic port of Memel, a sliver of land which the Nazis took from Lithuania two years ago.

"South of Lithuania, the battleground zigzags through the heart to Poland. The central portion of that boundary follows the Bug River, east of which stretch the vast, soggy Pripet marshes. The sparsely inhabited region forms difficult terrain for battle. Roads are scarce and poor. The few villages are huddled on high spots of ground. Residents use small boats for transpertation. In 1915 a German offensive against the Russians was halted when the Czar's troops gained the protection of the swamp.

"In the Russian part of Galicia, south of the marshes, are extensive oil deposits. On the treeless plains of western Galicia dwell sturdy Ruthenians, who speak a Russian dialect. Unlike some Europeans who have put away their bright native costumes except for gala occasions, the Ruthenian women always wear brilliant red skirts, white embroidered blouses and black or blue velvet vests.

"The Carpathian Mountains, running through Galicia, furnish another potential military barrier. They lie west of the Russo-Rumanian frontier, which last year was moved to the Prut (Pruth) River when Soviet troops seized the districts of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina. The 500-mile Prut crosses one of the historic 'bumper' areas of conflicting national interests. In the eighteenth century, Peter the Great was trapped temporarily with his army midway along the river's course."

65 Parole Pleas Set for Hearing Today in Md.

Annapolis, June 24 (AP).—Sixty-five applications for parole will be considered by Herman M. Moster, director of the division of parole and probation, at hearings tomorrow.

The parole applicants include:

J. Leroy Boyer, sentenced in Washington County, December 11, 1939, to serve three years for embezzlement.

Soldier Dies Of Injuries in Auto-Train Crash

Police reported yesterday that Walter H. Cabaniss, 20, a soldier stationed at Fort Meade, Md., died at Walter Reed Hospital Monday night of injuries suffered when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a train at a grade crossing near Beltsville, Md.

Two other soldiers, Berkeley Green, 20, and Dan Owens, 19, also of Fort Meade, escaped with minor injuries. The impact of the crash threw all three out of the car and carried the wreckage 300 feet down the tracks. All three men were from Chase City, Va.

Martha Ann Heintzleman, 15, of 1718 Bay Street Southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital yesterday for head cuts suffered when her bicycle collided with another bicycle near her home.

Attack Suspect To Appeal Writ Of Extradition

William Mason Wellman, colored laborer charged by North Carolina authorities woth attacking a 67-year-old white woman at Statesville, N. C., last February, will remain in custody in the District while his defense carries his case to the United States Court of Appeals here.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough so ruled in District Court yesterday after a review of the case by attorneys for both sides. He termed it "the sound thing to do."

Prior to the announcement of an appeal by Wellman's attorneys, Justice Goldsborough had discharged a writ of habeas corpus and stated he would remand Wellman to the North Carolina authorities.

Attorneys seeking Wellman's extradition had put witnesses on the stand, including the 67-year-old woman who declared he was the man who attacked her in the backyard of her home last February 11.

The defense produced witnesses who testified Wellman was engaged as a day laborer at Fort Belvoir, Va., all through the month of February, including the day on which the attack occurred. Their testimony was supported by the records of the construction company.

Attorneys for the defense are Edward Berger, James Washington and Andrew Ransome.

Attorneys seeking Wellman's extradition were Robert H. McNeil, E. M. Land, of Statesville, and Charles L. Coggins, State's attorney for North Carolina.

Pharmacist Hits Ungoverned Sale Of Internal Drugs

Point Comfort, Va., June 24 (AP).—J. L. Ives, president of the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association, told the annual convention of the organization yesterday that the ungoverned sale of internal medicines "has perhaps killed more desperately ill people than all the mistakes of doctors and druggists combined."

In this connection he urged legislation to allow only pharmacists to sell internal medicines and to prevent their sale by "every Tom, Dick and Harry."

Approximately 250 delegates were present for the meeting which was welcomed by Maj. James Bickford, of Hampton.

Alexandria Girls Club Offered Nursing Course

A special course in home nursing, prescribed by the State health department, will be offered at the Alexandria Girls Club on Friday morning at 10:30, under the direction of Mrs. Mae Bowman, a member of the city health department's nursing staff. Classes are open to all girls over 12 years of age who have reached the seventh grade in schools.

Mrs. Isabel Zimmerman, executive secretary of the girls club, said Girl Scouts who successfully complete the course can qualify for merit badges.

Va. Clerk Clears Mystery of Fish Wearing Dog Tag

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—Shann R. Morris, assistant chief clerk of the State fisheries commission at Newport News, explained today the "mystery" of the sturgeon wearing a Virginia dog tag when it was caught at the mouth of the Connecticut River June 2.

Capt. C. C. Johnson, of near Newport News, was fishing in Hampton Roads early in May, Morris related, when he hauled in a 5½-pound sturgeon, and, in lieu of a regulation sturgeon tag, attached a 1939 dog tag to the young fellow. Then he tossed it back into the water.

Three weeks later a sturgeon weighing 8 pounds was caught in a shad net at the mouth of the Connecticut. But the Virginia dog tag left no doubt that it was the same one that Capt. Johnson had encountered hundreds of miles to the south.

Morris told the story of the sturgeon while visiting game and inland fisheries officials here today.

V.F.W. Prize Goes To Norfolk Band

Staunton, Va., June 24 (AP).—The Norfolk Veterans of Foreign Wars Senior Drum and Bugle Corps—in a class by itself—wore the State crown today at the nineteenth annual encampment of the Virginia V. F. W.

Without opposition the Norfolk contingent took top honors in last night's judging and the accompanying prizes.

Honors in the junior division went to Staunton Post 2216 with the Ocean View juniors taking second position. The Broadway High School Band was adjudged best band in the parade that preceded the judging with Clifton Forge second.

Youth, 16, Drowned In Shenandoah River

Woodstock, Va., June 24 (AP).—Clifford Ramey, 16, stepped off a ledge into deep water in the Shenandoah River and was drowned last night. Ramey, unable to swim, was bathing in the river with a group of boy scouts.

Missing Maryland Girl Returns

Nancy Masters, 19, of Williams Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., returned home last night unaware that the police of the Eastern seaboard had been searching for her.

After a hurried hug and kiss for her mother, she announced she had been to Durham, N. C.

"I was headed for Alabama but my money ran out," she told her mother.

Her younger sister, Virginia, put in:

"Did you know you had your picture all over the front page and the police were looking for you?"

"No, why did you call the police?" she turned to her mother. Then she disappeared into the house to emerge a few minutes later munching on a sandwich. "I don't want to talk. I want to eat," Nancy told a reporter for The Post.

Nancy left home in her car Monday to go on a picnic and later to attend movies with some girl friends. She failed to arrive at either and when she did not return home by 2:30 a. m. yesterday, her mother, Mrs. Edith Masters, called Montgomery County police. A lookout for the blue sedan was broadcast.

About 9 a. m. yesterday her mother looked in the refrigerator and found a note wrapped in the bacon, saying that Nancy had gone to visit girl friends and would return in time to attend a cousin's party tomorrow.

Nancy is a graduate of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School and attended Westhampton School for Women.

Family Tax Units

It is said that the Ways and Means Committee is being warned that homes will be broken up and divorces will multiply if husbands and wives are compelled to make joint income-tax returns. These dire predictions need not be taken very seriously. Any marriage is already on the rocks whose survival is conditioned by income-tax computations. Looked at from the strictly fiscal point of view, the argument for mandatory joint returns is strong, for in the upper income brackets a great deal of revenue is lost by permitting husbands and wives to file individual tax declarations when they have separate incomes. The mere fact that the Ways and Means Committee estimates that compulsory joint returns would bring an additional $300,000,000 into the Treasury shows how important a loophole of escape is afforded by the present system.

Of course, the revenue would come from the higher brackets. Any such change in the law would be immaterial so far as concerns most taxpayers in the lower-income groups. For example, under the proposed new schedules a joint declaration would continue to be preferable to separate declarations for a family in which husband and wife have a total income of less than $5,000. But that would no longer be the case for the $10,000 joint family income.

However, the social and legal implications of the proposed abolition of separate returns for husband and wife are in some respects more interesting and significant than the effect upon revenues. For if the Government should compel husband and wife to make a joint declaration, that would mean recognition of the family rather than of the individual as the legal and economic unit for tax purposes. Consequently protests may be expected from organized groups of women out of fear that the change might adversely affect their individual interests.

Certainly the change would create difficulties in States that have community property laws. And it would also work some hardships upon families in which wives are actively engaged in business and supplementing the family income. For in such cases extra expenses are often incurred which at least partly offset the family advantage of two sources of income. Still it is easy to call to mind instances in which separate declarations result in undeserved tax reductions for families especially well able to pay.

Enough has been said to show that the rights and wrongs of the proposed change could be discussed endlessly, for the points of view are many. The chief argument for the change is, after all, the pressing need for more revenue in a time of emergency. When large returns can be secured, as in this case, without undue hardship, the burden of proof is on the side of those who oppose change.

Starting Life

The shortage of skilled labor and managers is apparently having an extraordinary effect upon the colleges, technical schools and universities. Sophomores, juniors, and in some instances seniors within a few months of graduation have quit the campuses to take jobs in defense and allied industries. So keen has been the competition of corporations for college students that some youths have had their pick of half a dozen jobs. And this raiding process is likely to increase. Federal officials estimate that 4,000,000 additional skilled workers will be needed during the next 12 months, particularly in the shipbuilding, aircraft and machine-tool industries. If this is so, we shall need a phenomenally expanded industrial training program. Plans have already been made by plants to operate existing training shops 24 hours a day and to establish new ones.

Even so, the colleges cannot begin to satisfy the personnel demands made upon them. Not long ago one Eastern institution was asked for 3,500 young engineers. Its graduating class was 235. Other schools have been confronted with equally impossible demands. Shortages in some fields have undoubtedly been aggravated by the policies of draft boards in calling up technically skilled students. This has, of course, lessened the number available for industry. In fact, one Midwestern college has reported that unless there is a change in the administration of Selective Service so as to exempt technical students, most of them will leave school for jobs in industry. If they do so, that is their concern. But it should be apparent to Government and industry alike that a student, say a junior majoring in science, will be of so much more use to his country after completing his course than before that he ought as a matter of course to be kept in school.

Presto, Chango!

You may or may not recall a certain commiserative reference on this page one day last month to the editors of the New York Daily Worker who are entrusted with the responsibility of interpreting the knots and tangles of the Communist Party line to the faithful. How, we asked, can they be sure that between the time their forms are locked and the paper is actually on its way to subscribers, its contents will not be a pack of abominable heresies? Well, bless us, if it hasn't actually happened that way! Last Sunday's edition of the Daily Worker contained an exposure of another hellish plot by the imperialist warmongers: They were circulating false and clumsy rumors about a Nazi attack on the Soviet Union. Yet at just about the time this edition was rolling off the presses, Comrade Adolf was announcing his holy war for the preservation of Christian civilization.

So you might suppose that the reddest thing about the American Reds this week would be their faces. Not so. After all, the comrades went through much the same thing when the Nazi-Communist pact of 1939 was announced. They have no time to waste on such bourgeois emotions as embarrassment or chagrin. In less time than it takes to say it, they turned their consciences, convictions, principles and policies inside out, altered black to white, good to bad, and vice versa. Thus those whilom apostles of pacifism, Messrs. Foster and Minor, who had been denouncing the conspiracy of Mr. Roosevelt and Wall Street to plunge us into war as a means of enslaving the American workers, promptly discovered that Hitler's attack on the Soviet is, ipso facto, an attack on these plutocratic United States. These erstwhile champions of appeasement denounced appeasement. These enemies of convoys to Britain demanded every aid to Russia.

The marvel is not that the American comrades let the trolley get off the party line for a moment as the world went round that breathless hairpin curve, but that they got it back on the line so quickly. That's what party discipline means. By this time the reflexes of the American Reds must be as thoroughly conditioned as those of Pavlov's dogs. The proper response to the proper stimulus is instant and infallible, provided the stimulus is from Moscow. And if—as is not altogether impossible—some burst of nationalistic fervor aroused in Russia by this war should result in the liquidation of Stalin, the restoration of the Romanovs and the reestablishment of the Orthodox Church, we suspect that Comrade Foster and the editors of the Daily Worker will be among the first to discover that Bolshevism is no more than a gigantic conspiracy against the Russian worker and peasants.

Poland Chooses

Of all the peoples of Europe none can be expected to take a more clear-eyed view of the Russo-German struggle than the Poles. Their country was the first victim of the unholy alliance made by Hitler and Stalin in August, 1939. Since then they have suffered every indignity at the hands of their German and Russian conquerors. In the German-occupied area the Nazis have sought to carry out a ruthless program of mass extermination scientifically designed to decimate the Poles and transform those allowed to live into slaves of the Third Reich. In the Russian part of the conquered country the plight of the Poles has been no better. And now Poland has again become a battlefield, this time between Germany and Russia, with the Poles again the first victims.

Nonetheless the Polish government in exile is not standing on the sidelines crying "a plague on both your houses" to the contending forces in eastern Europe. They know that their only real chance of national revival depends on a victory of Great Britain over Germany. To the extent, therefore, that Russia is battling against Britain's foe, Russia is regarded by Gen. Sikorski as much the less of the two evils. In a statement issued from London this week the Polish premier declared that "the Polish-Russian question, which might have shattered the outlook of many a friend of ours in the west, may disappear, I believe, from international politics."

The belief which this statement conveys is that the way has now been paved for an agreement between Russia and the Polish government under which the end of the war would see the eastern frontiers of Poland restored to the limits of the Russo-Polish Treaty of Riga concluded in 1921. It is also understod that all Poles imprisoned or exiled by the Russians are to be immediately released. Thus the Poles will be able to continue the fight side by side with their British allies and without reservations regarding Russia.

Red Army

In the Russo-German War the world will have an opportunity of observing the quality of the much-touted Red army in its first all-in test. For years this army dazzled most observers who witnessed the eternal parades in the Red Square. It almost became a myth—a myth that fed upon the army's successes in the severe frontier collisions with the Japanese, who were invariably worsted. In the Far Eastern border clash of August, 1939, for instance, the Japanese left 16,000 men dead on the field. But the star of the Red army became overcast when the Russians were engaged in military operations in the west. Well in advance of the Russo-German campaign in Poland, a division of the spoils had been agreed upon, but the Russians moved with so much slowness that actually they never reached the new frontier line, and the Nazis penalized them by keeping two provinces originally assigned to Russia.

But the campaign in Finland revealed the weaknesses of the Red army in startling clarity. The Russian soldier was found to be made of the same stuff as of old—full of a gloomy, suicidal courage more useful in defense than in attack. It was the staff work that made him such an easy mark for the Finns. There seemed to have been no such adjunct to an army as an intelligence branch, entire legions were lost, divisions from the warm Russian south were sent to the Arctic front without even adequate clothes or equipment for a winter campaign, and the supply system frequently bogged down. In the end, to be sure, the Rusians crashed through the Karelian Isthmus. But the final success, which was a tribute to materiel more than to men, hardly offset in military eyes the glaring weaknesses which had been shown earlier.

Perhaps the failings of the Red army are traceable to the frequent purges and turnover of officers. It stands to reason that no army can be efficient which has to be weeded out so frequently. And the weeding has taken place among the more efficient officers. Thus a Russian officer always seeks to remain in a lowly grade, keeps himself inconspicuous, and avoids successes like the plague. Otherwise he might find himself marked out for elimination. Moreover, a superior officer may have to take orders from a militarily incompetent political commissar. All these factors seem to have produced a degree of military helplessness in Soviet Russia which nobody in Europe except perhaps the general staff in Berlin could have conceived. But its helplessness will not save us from a barrage of glowing bulletins from Moscow. This is the same capital which told the world of the "dashing onset" into Poland and showered the bungling officers in Finland with thousands of decorations and verbal accolades.

Feeding Hawaii

Army officials have just disclosed that a huge food storage tunnel with a capacity of at least 15,000 tons is to be built on the Island of Oahu, in the Hawaiian group. Once completed and stocked with provisions for the island's 267,000 civilian inhabitants, the outstanding flaw in the defense of our Pacific Gibraltar should be removed. For Oahu, on which Honolulu and Pearl Harbor are located, produces only about 15 per cent of its own food supply, the remainder coming chiefly from the West Coast. Should the island be subjected to siege or blockade, the resulting interruption of food ships from the mainland would, it is felt, seriously endanger Oahu's defense, since Army forces there, numbering some 40,000 men, could hardly fight with a starving population on all sides. The Service Command of the Hawaiian Department has, in fact, encouraged a greater degree of self-sufficiency in foods, but without notable success. This is due largely to the fact that such a move would disturb the snug commercial balance of the Territory, which flourishes primarily as an export-import community. Though both the Army and the Navy in Hawaii have consistently maintained sufficient food stores for some months ahead, civilian supplies, it is estimated, are usually sufficient for but two to three weeks. As a defense move the construction of the new storage center has thus been long overdue. That it comes just a few weeks after war preparations in Hawaii which have included orders to householders to store staple foods and to be ready to evacuate certain shore areas, is fair indication of an emergency status which, happily, is not yet typical of the rest of the country.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN

Just as a boy takes out his watch to be
The very first to give the time to me,
But seeing there such brightness in his hand
He marvels, though he does not understand,
And mutely gazing at each jeweled sprocket
He puts it gently back into his pocket,
The hour untold . . .

So, looking up to see what the sky forebode,
A tired farmer, plodding along the road,
Beheld such splendor in the setting sun
Sifting its colors into the evening just begun
That he thought no more of the morrow's cloud or rain
Nor stopped to read the heavens' weathervane
Before him scrolled.

Thus does beauty swiftly put to flight
The baying hounds of reason from our sight.

'Old School Tie'

The editorial, "Old School Tie," in The Post of Sunday, June 15, begins with this statement:

"There is an old saying that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton. Etonians still take pride in the saying..."

It is an old saying, more than a hundred years old. It is, however, only a myth, and even a hundred years cannot change a pious lie into truth. An English officer investigated that famous story in 1914 and published the results of his researches in the Daily Chronicle of London. He collected the names of all British officers of the rank of colonel and upward who are mentioned in British history of the years 1800 to 1815 and studied their lives. He found that only a very few of them had been educated in an English "public school," such as Eton, Rugby, Westminster, etc. (Please note that in English the word "public" means what we call "private.") An overwhelming majority of those officers had been educated in France, which had been, until the great Revolution, the classical land of military science where many a foreigner prepared himself for a military career. Wellington himself, the famous Iron Duke, the greatest of British military heroes, received his military education at the celebrated war college of Angers in France.

D. C. Police

It seems to me some of our Washington police, who can't write up a minor traffic ticket without appearing to be some Western Sherlock apprehending a train robber, might well dispense with a little of the fanfare when four brute killings in one small area yet remain unsolved. Here's desiring to see some talent in other important phases of modern criminal apprehension. In the event added talent is needed, allow me to suggest the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Finland's Plight

Our slogan was "all aid for the democracies," but is that to include the Soviets? Can we fight the Finns? The one heroic people of Europe recognizing its obligations to the United States, when all others conveniently forgot, is now making its fight against the unspeakable Stalin. The wounds and miseries inflicted by the Soviets on Finland still burn in the minds of Americans. Not acting on the impulse of anger but after mature reflection, the Finns elevated the spirit of revenge into the element of virtue; animated by a noble purpose, they decided on a blow at the Soviet.

Hitler was a convenient weapon at hand to deliver the blow and recover their lost lands. What choice have we in the case? We find no fault with Churchill for employing every enemy of Hitler that may appear, yet when we approve the act of Churchill, how can we condemn the conduct of Finland? The Finns know the bitter hostility of the people toward Stalin. They know the anger of Christian hearts forbidden the rites of their church in marriage and death, facing imprisonment for teaching their children the catechism.

Those of us familiar with conditions in Soviet land know that the possibilities of a rising against Stalin are more than a hundred times greater than such a revolution against Hitler. The Finns feel that this war will end the Soviets, their present horror. A sturdy, upright, moral people they would not enter a war merely to put another Communist in the place of Stalin. When Churchill named Hitler a "guttersnipe" he was no doubt stuffed with epithets of war. What words could accurately describe Stalin to the Christian world? Let us await with complete sympathy a full statement of the case from Finland.

The Best Defense

To those who say that the United States can do nothing to help defeat Hitler because we are not yet prepared for war, let them remember three things:

1. The immediate problem is not a military or an air problem; it is a naval problem, and our Navy is the best in the world, daily growing stronger and ready for action.

2. A small force such as we now have ready can, if it moves first, occupy and hold bases of great strategic importance, which Germany covets, and which she can now occupy without hindrance. Once in possession a vastly stronger force would be needed to dislodge her. An obvious example is the British invasion of Iraq. Had the British allowed the Nazi "tourists" time to establish themselves, the invasion would have been a difficult matter. By acting quickly, it was accomplished easily.

3. If we do nothing we can count on a much worse position strategically. England cannot hold out indefinitely and Germany may get important bases from which to operate. Let us, therefore, remember that "the best defense is a bold offense."

Real Leader

President Roosevelt has ordered German consulates and the German Library of Information closed, as a proper and necessary countermeasure against Nazi boldness in this country.

We should all hail the President's action. Those who say that President Roosevelt is not the real leader of the Nation are thus dumbfounded, for Mr. Roosevelt sometimes annoys his own loyal followers by not acting soon enough.

Cost Of Appeasing Japan Held Prohibitive

During the past month there has been much talk of appeasement of Japan. The President boldly attacks Italy and Germany by name in his fireside chat, but failed to mention Japan. German and Italian credits were frozen, but not Japanese. German government representatives, excepting diplomatic, were ordered to leave this country, but not Japanese.

The case for appeasement of Japan was stated perhaps most plausibly by Mr. Walter Lippmann on May 31 in an article entitled "America in Her Own Right."

If I read Mr. Lippmann's article aright, he proposed that we beat Hitler at his own game—instead of permitting Hitler to isolate and encircle us, we should encircle Hitler. Mr. Lippmann proposed the taking of military, political and economic steps to strengthen our bargaining position in the Pacific following which we would approach Japan with a view toward, if not winning that country over to the Democratic front, at least neutralizing it. We would then, according to Mr. Lippmann, be free to cope with the Nazi threat to our security.

This is a very attractive prospect which is held before us—so reasonable, so appealing to our sense of politico-economic decorum; orderly changes producing mutual advantages, a fair enough bargain.

Before proceeding any further, it would perhaps be well to inquire what Japan seeks, what she wants. If the statements of her leaders and her actions over the course of the last ten years are to be accepted as an answer, Japan wants certainly nothing less than a recognition of her "special status" in China and Indo-China plus assurances of access to vital raw materials in Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies, together with such a readjustment of Pacific power as would satisfy her that her supply lines southward to these vital raw material areas would in time of war not be jeopardized.

In other words, international acceptance of Japan's hegemony over East Asia—the "New Order in Greater East Asia." These are her minimum immediate objectives.

Her long-rang program embraces "living space" in what her foreign minister vaguely discribed as "Oceania." And some of the more tactless Japanese army and navy officers have spoken covetously of the American continents. What Japan effectively seeks, like what Germany effectively seeks, is limited only by her strength and the resistance she meets. This is the "candid recognition . . . of Japan's vital interest' 'which Mr. Lippmann calls for.

Given these aims, would Japan, excepting as a matter of tactics, be interested in bargaining with us now? The answer is—no. Any assumption that she would bargain in good faith with us places a very low estimate on Japan's will to expand and betrays its protagonists as entertaining wholly naive ideas about Japanese objectives and Japanese determination to achieve those objectives. Nor must we forget that Japan is a have-not power; that during the last ten years she has pursued a successful career as an international bandit and that she stands to gain much more through an Axis victory than through negotiations now with us.

If we are so desperate or so fatuous as to try to negotiate with Japanese, will we be able to buy the security on our own western flank which we seek? We do not have to look back on the history of appeasement in Europe, nor to China's disastrous experience with trying to buy off Japan between the Mukden and the Marco Polo Bridge incidents. We need only refer to what has happened during the last month, during the period that we have been solicitous of Japan's feelings, the sensitive feelings which Japan, like a spoiled child, so heavily capitalized on. During this period the Japanese army in Indo-China seized $10,000,000 worth of goods purchased with money from our Export-Import Bank, among which goods were 127,000 gallons of aviation gasoline which are now available to the Japanese air force for the next expansionist move. Then, only a few days ago, Japanese planes flew over the American Embassy at Chungking and the USS Tutuila and unloaded a cargo of bombs. The office of the American military attache was reported to have been demolished, and the Tutuila struck by bomb fragments. Now this was no accident. The embassy and the Tutuila are on the south bank of the Yangtze with no military objectives nearby, and Chungking is clear across the Yangtze on the north bank. The bombing was deliberate.

There is a strong pro-German clique in Chungking. If we were to make a Hoare-Laval deal with Japan, we must be prepared to have a violent reaction in China, abetted by the pro-German faction. The only course left to China would be to throw her lot in with Germany, the Soviet Union and Japan, relying on the first two to save her from extreme Japanese demands. We should then find ourselves confronted on our western flank by a hostile Asiatic bloc.

For China, even now hurt and bitter over our making possible the Japanese invasion through the sale of oil, iron and trucks to Japan, would then hate us with the hatred of people twice betrayed. The only allies left to die for us would then be the British. And the Japanese army, now bogged down in China, would be freed to turn its attention to further adventures southward and in the direction of the Western Hemisphere.

This, Mr. Lippmann, is the price of appeasement of Japan.

'Wisely Merry Capital'

Among our feminine filmgoers chiefly, Tyrone Power, named by a New York critic among the "romantic types, possessors of assorted sex appeal," is a favorite. Conversely, American girls of more than a century ago made a hit with his famous forebear, also an actor who excelled in "representations of blundering, good-natured and eccentric Irish characters" and who probably had a wider appeal to audiences than his great grandson. W. G. Tyrone Power, who had been married in 1817, at the age of 19, to an Isle of Wight girl of 18, wrote a "rave" about our young women in "Impressions of America," following his first professional pilgrimage.

His biographer, Michael MacDonagh, attributed to Power "exuberant, rollicking humor" and "inexhaustible good spirits." Touring America, he evidenced these; he was friendly and conversational with the people he encountered. In February, 1834, Power, a judge and a Philadelphia merchant, who was escorting his daughter and her "pretty young lady" friend on a visit to Washington, chartered for $25 a coach and team in Baltimore for the trip to the Capital. The actor did his best to engage the girls in a chat but the businessman's daughter responded in monosyllables, while her friend, "a lively, intelligent-looking girl, and very pretty withal," said nothing. Power rated this "an unusual case, since, when one is properly introduced, the ladies of America are uncommonly frank and chatty, and evince an evident desire to please and be amiable; which is creditable to themselves, and to strangers is both flattering and agreeable."

After "nine hours' hard driving" the group arrived in Washington and Power put up at "Mr. Fuller's Hotel" on Pennsylvania Avenue. He acted here seven nights and returned in May for a three-week engagement. On St. George's Day Sir Charles Vaughan gave a ball, inviting "all the beauties in the Capital." The "women were well dressed and pretty," the comedian commented, "and danced with infinite grace and spirit." In England and France he rarely danced, but here, "so electric is evident unrestrained enjoyment," proper Power sometimes found it difficult "to repress the inclination within becoming bounds." Sir Charles' ball was just such an occasion. "The tournure of an American girl is generally very good," the visitor observed; "she excels in the dance and one sees that she enjoys it with all her heart." By 1:30 a. m. the ballroom was empty.

Social life in Washington pleased Power. Once you met a family, he found, its home was open to you. Between noon and 2 o'clock, if your question, "Are the ladies at home?" was answered affirmatively, you walked into the drawing room, joined the circle, talked and tarried "just so long as you receive or you impart amusement." After 6 p. m. "you sally forth to visit," discuss politics, dress or scandal. If the night was balmy, the group gathered on the balcony (in the rear of most houses) where "a song, a romp, a waltz or a quite still talk while away hours of life, unheeded until passed, but never to be recalled without pleasure." At 11 o'clock the party broke up and Power took his nightly 3-mile walk to the Capitol and back to Fuller's Hotel.

Present at several large "assemblies," Power noted that "great real attention is paid to women; and I vow I have in this respect seen more ill breeding and selfish rudeness at a fashionable rout in England than could be met with at any decent crush from Natchitoches to Marblehead. Beyond these points within the States I speak not," he added, "since without them the land is strange to me." The sympathetic treatment of the United States in the two-volume "Impressions" contrasts with the perverse pronouncements of other travelers from the British Isles. Still considering society, he protested against the "sweeping ridicule it has pleased some writers to cast upon these doings here; since I saw none of those outrageously unpresentable women, or coarsely habited and ungainly men, so amusingly arrayed by some of my more observant predecessors. The ordinary observances of good society are, I should say, fully understood and fully practiced at these public gatherings, and not more of the ridiculous presented than might be observed at any similar assemblages in England, if half so much."

Senator White, of Florida, planned a fancy dress ball, giving little more than a week's notice. Twenty-four hours after the announcement not a plume, wreath of flowers, scarf or riband could be purchased. The ladies' consultations over what they should wear were amusing to the actor. They besought male suggestions and help. Every man with an "iota of taste" suddenly found himself hugely increased in importance, walked the streets with an air of self-satisfied mystery and entered the homes of the most admired belles without knocking. Men who could aid in creating masquerade costumes were caressed, listened to anxiously, gratefully smiled upon. "In short," Power remarked, "for three or four days their influence seemed only limited by their discretion." As costumes were decided upon, the fair clients fell off and "the man of taste" had ample leisure.

Tyrone Power went to White's dressed as a diplomat—inspired by his role of Sir Patrick O'Plenipo in "The Irish Ambassador." Male and female masqueraders wore rich Asiatic regalia. A couple of women, having fine black eyes and features of remarkable classic beauty, were garbed as Tripolitans. A young Army officer was an Osage warrior, painted and plumed. There were pirates and gauchos. Only a few grave Senators were privileged to appear in street clothes.

Customarily Washington balls ended at 1 a. m., with the result, Power related, the ladies were, "to use an expressive sporting phrase, ready to come again; rising, the morning after a dance, unwearied and elastic in mind and body." But Senator White's masquerade kept the "fair patronesses together some two hours later than any other fete I witnessed in this most wisely merry Capital." It was after 3 a. m. when Power returned to his hotel.

Exploiting A Break

By Ernest K. Lindley.

Time For Us To Act

IN MILITARY CIRCLES there is scarcely any expectation that the Russians can defeat the Nazi legions. The question is seen rather as how much in time, men, and materials the Russians can compel the German army to expend.

LINDLEY

Hitler's minimum geographical objectives are presumed to be:

In the south, conquest of the Ukraine, North Caucasus and Georgia, thus acquiring most of the Soviet petroleum wells, an immense granary, some cotton lands, most of the manganese mines and a large share of the coal, iron, and copper mines of the Soviet Union, together with some of its heavy industry.

In the north, elimination of Russia from all territory adjacent to the Baltic Sea and occupation of the north Russian ports of Murmansk and Archangel.

If the Germans attain these objectives, Russia will be landlocked except on the distant Pacific side, stripped of some of its richest areas, and severely hampered in continuing war on a major scale. During the last ten years new mines and industries have been developed in the Urals and Siberia, but the distances are great and transportation is limited. Once in control of the key areas listed above, Hitler might offer and the Russians feel compelled to accept a truce, opening the way for the indirect annexation of most or all of the vast Soviet domain to the Nazi order, much as France and the French Empire are being annexed through Vichy.

THE NAZI TIME TABLE is reported, as usual, to be extremely short: three or four weeks. The open plains and rolling hills of the Ukraine and North Caucasus are ideally suited in dry weather to mechanized warfare. After the campaigns in Poland, the Lowlands and France, Libya and the Balkan peninsula, few military observers—or laymen—would bet much that the Luftwaffe and panzer divisions could not slash through European Russia within a month.

Some military experts in Washington, however, think that the Russians can give a good account of themselves for at least three months. The last stages of the Finnish war showed that the Russians had some well-trained troops. Some time has now elapsed since the army was reorganized by purge of many of the high-ranking officers—and the promotion of younger officers may not have been without its advantages. While most of their large air force is considered obsolescent, the Russians are reported to have some new fighter types which are good enough to put up against the Luftwaffe. Their tanks are likewise thought inferior, but much more numerous than the Germans have encountered in previous engagements. Finally, there is the well known tradition of the Russian soldier for dogged fighting.

The truth is, though, that our military men have very little exact information about the present state of the Russian army—much less than the Germans presumably have.

In the ultimate result of the war, the difference between one month and three months of successful resistance may be highly important. Even more vital may be the Russian policy with regard to its oil wells, mines and industries in territories which are overrun. One of Hitler's main purposes must be to obtain the resources to fight a long war. If the Russians adopt the "scorched earth" tactics of the Chinese, destroying everything when they retreat, Hitler will fail, at least in part, in one of his main purposes.

WORTH UNDERLINING, in the view of military men, is the fact that if Hitler conquers the Ukraine, North Caucasus and Georgia, he will be well on his way to enveloping the entire British position in the Middle East, and to threatening British control of India.

In Persia he could cut off a major source of petroleum for the British fleet, army, and air forces in the Middle East. He could move into Iraq and then attack Syria, Palestine and the Suez. And he could attempt an invasion of England.

If Russia were considered anything approaching an even match for the Nazis, many officials would enjoy nothing more than sitting back and watching them destroy each other. But all available information points to the contrary: that the Nazis can be counted upon to conquer important parts of Russia, if not to defeat the Russians utterly. In so doing they may obtain the raw materials to fight a long war, make the British position in the Middle East untenable, and arrive at the gates of India.

Therefore, the Churchill policy, which Roosevelt supports, is to exploit this "break" to the utmost: first by giving the Russians whatever aid is feasible, and secondly by intensifying bombing attacks on German industry. Both realize that this is no time to gloat over a development which, were antagonists more evenly matched, could be viewed with no little equanimity by the western democracies.

One Clear Inference

By Mark Sullivan.

A New Breathing Spell

IN A WHIRLWIND of swirling surmises, one inference is clear and tenable. If Hitler thought he could conquer Britain, he would have gone ahead and conquered her. This inference is tenable, even though the mind whose actions we deal with is as unguessable as Hitler's. When Hitler turned to attack Stalin, it meant that he knew that, under existing conditions, he could not conquer Britain.

In this is hope. Perhaps "hope" is not the best word to use, because people tend to put too much reliance on hope, and to relax when they think they have it. Let us say, rather, we know Hitler's estimate of British power to resist. In this knowledge lies assurance for the present.

But it may be that among the reasons Hitler attacked Stalin was a wish to create better conditions in which to attack Britain later on. For this assumption there is much reason. By attacking Stalin first, Hitler, assuming he succeeds, may get many advantages for a future attack on Britain. He gets oil and food supplies. He gets immunity from the possibility of an enemy on his rear. He gets immunity from the possibility that Stalin might beat him to the act of treachery to their alliance.

To go further along this line would be merely to add more to the whirl of surmise. But one thing we can say. Britain and the United States have been given a breathing spell—a breathing spell they did not expect. They should now arm, and arm, and arm. It is possible there may be additional things they, or either of them, should do. But whatever else, they should make themselves strong—unconquerable by Hitler in any condition that Hitler may be able to create.

THERE ARE some facts that remain unchanged, and some that are unchangeable. We have promised help to Britain. This help of course will be given, in honor and in self-interest.

We will be helped in our thinking if we remember that it was for self-interest that we promised the help to England. True, many Americans had additional motives—among others, well-justified sympathy for Britain, and equally justified hate for Hitler. But the motive of national self-interest was the one that was able to justify the help we promised, in the eyes of a sufficiently large majority of our people. Once the help was promised, the additional motive of honor arose. We must continue the help and enlarge it.

All the reasons for making the promise of help continue to exist. Nothing that has happened reduces the interest we have in seeing Britain successfully resist Hitler. No difference is made by the fact that, after Hitler attacked Russia, Britain promised to help Russia. About that, Britain judges for herself. When we made the promise of help to Britain, we did not commit ourselves to all of Britain's alliances, understandings and policies then existing. Neither are we bound by any new commitments she makes now.

We shall continue to give help to Britain, help that includes a high degree of cooperation. If Britain chooses to pass on some of the help to Russia, that is for Britain to decide.

OUR OWN DECISION about Russia involves considerations quite different from Britain's, considerations difficult and acutely dangerous. The Administration will be wise to make this decision squarely on the ground of principle. About Russia, many Americans feel strongly, and their feeling will not change overnight.

This is, of all times, a time to be candid, and fair and tolerant. Lack of candor is a large cause of the world's ills. And if we in America are candid, some Americans are called upon to make an admission to other Americans. The present turn in the European war justifies some of the position the isolationists have held all along. Part of the isolationists' position was that, if we intervened in the war, we would involve ourselves in unforeseen complications.

Well, the most unforeseen possible complication has now occurred. And if we are completely candid we will admit that the present unforeseen event opens up the possibility of others now equally unforeseeable. To admit this frankly will promote the unity that America needs.

But what if we had taken the other course? Can the isolationists claim that the consequences of their course would be comfortably limited to the foreseeable? Can they say there would be no unforeseeable and disagreeable consequence if, from the beginning, we had followed a course which might result in Britain falling and Hitler dominating the world?

The C. I. O.'s Rogues' Gallery

SPEAKING OF CRIMINALS in the union movement, or racket, as these dispatches have been known to do from time to time, it may interest you to hear that the C. I. O., not to be outdone by the good old A. F. of L., has been gathering a rogues' gallery of its own. There has been an impression that the C. I. O.'s trouble was just communism and nothing else, but that is unfair to the militant, high-minded colleagues of Philip Murray and wrong John Lewis. Amends will be made as rapidly as it is possible to identify the stickup men, automobile thieves and crooks of miscellaneous talents who have been residing in their half of the double house of labor with an upper-case L.

PEGLER

A particularly charming specimen has been turned up in Pittsburgh leading a strike of a C. I. O. local of the State, county and municipal workers against the West Penn Hospital. His name is John W. Filer, and he is a criminal of long and varied experience, which began with a robbery when he was 16 years old. Held guilty of that job, he was placed on probation, but a few years later erred again in an innocent juvenile way, and this time got two and a half years in a reformatory for robbing a clothing store. In 1926 Brother Filer deserted from the United States Army and drew 18 months in Leavenworth, and soon after his graduation from that institution he pleaded guilty of auto theft and of carrying and discharging firearms and was placed on probation.

IN 1931 BROTHER FILER was convicted of participating in a stickup in which a man and a woman were robbed of jewelry valued at $5,000 and was sentenced to serve from five to ten years in the West Penn Penitentiary, being released on parole after four years. Thus thoroughly qualified for union leadership, Brother Filer became president of the C. I. O. local while still on parole. In fact, he was still on parole when, a few weeks ago, he was picked up on a charge of contempt for violating an injunction against mob violence in a strike against the West Penn Hospital, in the course of which American citizens were kicked around for attempting to go to work and the hospital service to the sick was impeded.

It was only then that the citizens of Pittsburgh learned that the president of the union was a stick-up man and, further, that the stickup man had a job as attendant, or guard, for the mentally ill at the City Home. He has since resigned both positions.

About the same time it was learned that Comrade U. S. Lusk, also of Pittsburgh, president of Local 117 of the Utility Workers Organization Committee of the C. I. O., not only had a police record, involving a box-car burglary, on which charge he was paroled for a year, but had signed the election petition of Earl Browder, the Communist candidate for President in 1940. Comrade Lusk's indorsement of Comrade Browder, himself a criminal and at present in prison, acquired special significance recently when he threatened to strike a big light and power plant in which his union had lost the regular election. In uttering this threat Comrade Lusk ominously reminded the Americans of the region that national defense production would be seriously affected at a number of vitally important plants which he named.

OVER IN CLEVELAND the C. I. O. offers another stickup man named Paul Mehringer, alias Martin, the president of the Die Casters Union, which called a brief Communist strike at the Aluminum Co. plant to tie up defense production. In 1926 Mehringer got four years' probation for stealing an automobile, and in 1919 he got a year in a reformatory for another automobile theft. In 1931 he and another gunman stuck up a chain grocery store, fired several shots at the young manager, who pursued them with a gun, and Mehringer was caught and given from 10 to 25 years in prison. He served seven years and changed his name to Martin. In January, 1940, he got a job in the aluminum plant, and a few months later his natural talent for unioneering thrust him into the presidency of a newly formed C. I. O. union, which he has not yet resigned. It turned out that Carl Milling, the man whom Mehringer, or Martin, stuck up in 1931, also had gone to work at the aluminum plant and thus found himself under the presidency of the criminal who not only hoisted him with a gun, but when arrested threatened to get him on his release from prison.

Like Willie Bioff, M. P., or Master of Prostitutes, Mr. Mehringer-Martin holds denunciations directed against himself just dirty revenge because his work for the toilers had cost the bosses a vast sum in raises.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Where Do We Go Now?

Stalin (as he gets Hitler's war declaration)— Well, what do you think of this!

Molotov—I always told you we couldn't trust him any more than he could trust us!

Stalin—But he found it out so suddenly.

Molotov—He calls you a thief!

Stalin—He can't call me a thief, the thief! I'll get the big robber on the phone.

(Business of getting the call through:)

Hitler—Hello. Who's bothering me again?

Stalin—This is Josef Stalin, you big double-crosser.

Hitler—Whom do you think you are speaking to, you crook?

Stalin—I just got your war declaration and I want to be sure it's official.

Hitler—For you it goes double.

Stalin—I didn't know I was a good enough friend of yours to be entitled to such dirty work.

Hitler—When dirtier work is done Russia will do it.

Stalin—I see by your proclamation that I'm no better than anybody else with whom you sign a friendship agreement.

Hitler—You're not even as good.

Stalin—From you that's a form of flattery. There is only one thing that burns me up.

Hitler—What's that?

Stalin—The realization that I ever could be on the level.

Hitler—How would anybody with a mind like yours know when another fellow was on the level? I just beat you to it, that's all.

Stalin—That's what hurts!

Hitler — Get off the phone, please. I've got an important appointment.

Stalin—I'm the fellow you've got the appointment with.

Hitler—Yes, but it's not on the telephone!

Stalin—Before I hang up I just want you to know one thing. Even Napoleon bit off more than he could chew when he attacked Russia.

Hitler — What Napoleon was that?

Stalin—The other Napoleon.

Hitler—There is no OTHER Napoleon!

Stalin—You may think you're Napoleon but before you get through you'll think you are Minnie Mouse.

Hitler—I'm no mouse, you rat!

Stalin—That's your story, you Hudson seal!

Hitler—I've got a little song I'd like to sing to you. It's called "That Old Pal of Mine." Ever hear it?

Stalin—Everybody who's ever had anything to do with you has heard it. It's a great burlesque number.

Hitler—It's no burlesque number.

Stalin—It is when you sing it.

Hitler—Enough of this. I'm busy.

Stalin—You ain't half as busy as you're going to be from now on.

Hitler—What's that rumbling sound on this wire?

Stalin—It's probably Mussolini and Matsuoka having the jitters.

Hitler—They wouldn't have the jitters. I'm their FRIEND.

Stalin—That's why they've got 'em.

The U. S. And The Russo-German War

FOREIGN POLICY is not an exercise in magnanimity. It is or should be an expression of the national will designed to further the national interest. If it fails to be that it fails of its essential purpose.

NOVER

We are not helping the British in their heroic struggle against Hitler because we love the British or because their struggle is, indeed, heroic. We are helping them because it is the way we can best, under present circumstances, help ourselves.

The British are not fighting Nazi Germany because the latter happens to be a menace to us and everything we stand for. They are doing so because Nazi Germany is a menace to them. Yet in fighting Hitler they are fighting our battle as well as their own. In other words, it is not sympathy which has created the present community of interests between Great Britain and the United States but the community of interests which is responsible for the fact that our sympathy for the British is taking active and constructive form.

WE NEED only consider what our plight would be had Britain gone the way of France to realize to what an extent British resistance has contributed to our safety and given us that most precious of all commodities—time in which to build up our defenses. Nor have we reached the stage—if such a stage could ever be reached—where we can face a totalitarian world on the rampage entirely without fear of being attacked.

We must assume, therefore, that anything which weakens or endangers Great Britain at the present time weakens and endangers us, and that, on the other hand, anything which hastens a British victory over the Third Reich is to our advantage too.

That is why there is not the slightest question where our interests lie in the Russo-German struggle which has just broken out. They lie in making use of the opportunity this struggle has created to weaken Hitler. If this means rendering aid to Russia, we ought to render aid to Russia. If it requires a considerable stepping up of our aid to Britain, throwing everything we have and can spare into a common pool, we ought to do that. We should, in fact, take every measure that is necessary to achieve the aim desired. And it would be a criminal waste of a golden opportunity to lose a moment in footless argument whether by helping Russia, or helping Britain, which is now fighting side by side with Russia, against Germany, we are aligning ourselves with "communism."

THAT HAPPENS to be precisely what Hitler would have us believe. But the struggle which has just broken out in eastern Europe is no ideological struggle. When it suited Hitler's purpose to do so he did not hesitate for a moment to make peace with Stalin. Now that it suits his purpose to attack Russia he is again seeking to pose as the defender of European civilization against bolshevism. Only the mentally blind or the incurably stupid will be taken in by this transparent deception.

The question we must ask ourselves is: Will a German conquest of Russia add to our security or detract from it? The answer is obvious. If Hitler is a menace today, with all Europe minus Russia in his grasp, he would be an even greater menace if he gains control of the wheat and metals and oil and hydroelectric power, the mines and factories and farms of the Soviet Union. And aside from the economic advantages he would derive from the conquest of Russia, there would be the circumstances to be reckoned with that with Russia conquered he could throw the full weight of the German army and air force against the British Isles.

That Hitler will defeat Russia, and speedily, is a possibility that must be considered. The latest German aggression is no windfall for the democracies. It is at most only a passing opportunity to deal such blows against the Reich that, whatever the outcome, Germany will have used up so many men and planes and tanks and supplies that she will be unable to win over Great Britain. If that opportunity is lost a disastrous defeat will have been dealt not only Russia but the British cause as well, and the British cause is our cause, too.

NO SYMPATHY need be wasted on Stalin in considering the tragic plight in which Russia and the Russians find themselves today. The Russian tragedy is of Stalin's own making. But it is a tragedy from which the United States can derive very important lessons.

Our isolationists have been telling us that our ocean is a sufficient barrier to protect us from Hitler. They have denounced every speech made by President Roosevelt and members of his Government that has attacked the practices, policies and leadership of the Third Reich. They have clamored for a negotiated peace. They have insisted that the way to have peace is to talk peace, practice neutrality and go about one's business.

Stalin was an isolationist after their own heart, although they profess to have no love for him. He believed that the Red army (many times the size of our own), the industrial capacity Russia has built up during the last 20 years, her inexhaustible manpower, her vast distances, would be a sufficient deterrent against Nazi aggression. To make assurance doubly sure he took over, by force, certain buffer areas in the Baltic and Balkans. He never once raised his voice against Hitler. Indeed, he came to terms with the Fuehrer and, through Molotov and Communist stooges abroad, urged a negotiated peace. How inadequate these measures, similar to many long sponsored by our Isolationists as a sovereign means of preserving peace, helped keep Russia safe from attack all the world now knows. Russia's example during the period between August 23, 1939, and June 22, 1941, is hardly one that could be recommended to the American people. But it is precisely that example the isolationists and defeatists here would, even now, have us follow.

Knudsen Sees Greater Risk, Urges Step Up in Production

Indicating his belief that the Nazi attack on Russia constituted a distinctly threatening development for the Allies, Defense Chief Knudsen yesterday called for an "even faster" tempo of armament production, "and after that, still faster."

"If our friend," he said, obviously referring to Hitler, "should overrun Russia, which God forbid, God knows where he'd start next, and I haven't any illusions about that.

"And if he overruns Russia and gets the oil and wheat that he is absolutely after, it is going to be a longer show than we figured on."

Sees Greater Risk

Knudsen's comments were made at the close of a press conference in which he declared that "new conditions" were developing and that he doubted if these "new conditions make it any safer for us; in fact, they probably make it a little riskier."

Asked if he favored aiding Russia, the OPM director general stated that as far as he was concerned, "defense begins at home." OPM spokesmen later asserted that this remark indicated only that Knudsen conceived of his job solely as one of aiding production in this country, at whose borders his scope of activity ended. They added that Knudsen's duties did not enter into the field of foreign policy.

At the same time, Knudsen made public a letter to him from President Roosevelt, urging that defense arsenals which were deficient in machine tools obtain them from factories making civilian consumption goods.

Some Tools Transferred

Mentioning the peacetime industries of automobile and refrigerator manufacture, Mr. Roosevelt wrote that machine tools in such factories should be transferred to defense plants deficient in such tools if no new machines could be obtained.

Knudsen explained that lists had been compiled of available tools and of needs specified by the Army and Navy, and that the program was being worked on, with some machine tools already transferred.

"We haven't taken many tools away from (peacetime) industry yet," he said, "but we may have to before we're through."

WPA Approves Va. Air Marker Program

Richmond, Va., June 24. (AP)—A $10,649 program for providing air markers throughout Virginia was approved today by the Virginia WPA.

The division of aeronautics of the State Corporation Commission will pay $1,868 of the cost and WPA the remainder.

The specifications call for painting and marking of roofs and obstructions, repainting signs and performing incidental work.

30 State Policemen Shifted to Four Areas

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—Thirty State policemen on motorcycles have been ordered to duty in four traffic centers in Virginia in an effort to eliminate congestion, Col. M. S. Battle, director of the division of motor vehicles, announced today.

They will be stationed in the Norfolk-Newport News, Christiansburg, Richmond and Alexandria areas.

War May Put End To July 4 Fireworks

By the Associated Press

Have a good time on the Fourth of July, boys and girls, because there may be no fireworks next year.

Charles H. Fleming, counsel of the Association of Pyrotechnic Manufacturers, said yesterday that there's plenty of celebration material to burn this year, but next year's supplies will depend on defense officials.

This year's firecrackers and other pyrotechnics, he explained, were manufactured almost a year ago, and that's why the supply is normal.

But fireworks take magnesium, aluminum (both in powdered form) and various chemicals which are now on the restricted list and are available for civilian purposes only after defense needs have been met.

Defense Aides Expect to Avoid 'Meatless' and 'Milkless' Days

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—The defense chief of the United States Department of Agriculture declared today that "at this stage of the game, we honestly believe we can avoid the 'meatless' and 'milkless' days of the first World War."

M. Clifford Townsend, director of the office of agricultural defense relations, said a few shortages were foreseen under the aid-to-Britain program—notably in evaporated milk, cheese, eggs, pork and vegetable oils—but these were being remedied.

"It is conceivable, of course, that we might have to cut down on consumption of one or two commodities such as cheese for brief periods," he cautioned in a prepared speech before the Agricultural Club of Chicago.

Milk production, spurred by a Department of Agriculture drive, rose by June 1 to the highest for that date, 5 per cent above the 1940 figure, he said. But much of the increase was in areas which had no cheese or evaporated milk plants.

The department is therefore calling conferences among evaporated milk manufacturers to discuss the construction of new plants and means of tapping the 100,000,000 pounds of dried milk now used annually for animal feed.

Adolf Hitler's Proclamation

(When He Was Wooing Russia.)

Reichstag, Sept. 1, 1939.

I am happy to report to you a far-reaching event. You know that Russia and Germany are ruled by two different doctrines. There was only one question that remained to be cleared. Germany does not intend to export her doctrine to Russia. I see no reason that we ever again will take a stand against one another.

We both realize this, that every fight of our people against one another would be advantageous only for others. We, therefore, agreed to conclude a pact which excludes for all the future any application of force between us, which obligates us to consultations in certain European questions and makes possible economic collaboration and, above all, assures that the forces of these two great states will not be spent against each other.

Any attempt of the west to alter this will fail.

At this point I wish to assure you that this political decision means a tremendous change for the future and is final. I believe the entire German people will welcome this political stand. Russia and Germany fought each other during the World War and both were the ones who suffered most in the end. This shall and will not happen a second time. The nonaggression pact and the consultation pact, which became valid on the day of their signature, have been ratified in both Moscow and Berlin. In Moscow this pact was welcomed as much as we welcome it here.

I can indorse word for word a speech by the People's Commissar, Molotov, the Russian minister. As our aims: I'm firstly determined to solve the Danzig problem; secondly to settle the problem of the Corridor and, thirdly, make certain that German-Polish relations will be changed in a way permitting peaceful living side by side. I, therefore, am determined to fight until either the Polish government is ready to bring about such conditions or until another Polish government is inclined to do so.

I will remove from the German borders the element of insecurity and the atmosphere of eternal civil war conditions. I will make certain that in the east peace in border regions is no different from that along our own borders. I shall carry out the necessary actions in such a manner that they will not contradict the proposals I have made known to you, my deputies in the Reichstag, and to the world.

That means, I will not wage a war against women and children. I similarly have given my air force orders to restrict its actions to military objectives. But if the enemy attempts to construe from this a permission for him to fight with opposite methods, then he will receive an answer that will strike him dumb and blind.

Diplomatic Corps Turns Out in Force For Celebration at Thai Legation

Reception Is Held To Mark Country's National Day

By Hope Ridings Miller

"I'd call this a diplomatic field day," said a guest stepping out into the garden of the Thai Legation yesterday afternoon and surveying a throng that was heavily accented with foreign faces. Certainly, it did seem that every legation and embassy was well represented in the company.

The occasion was the reception in celebration of the National Day of Thailand (yes, we used to call it Siam, but that name has been off the map since 1939). Events responsible for yesterday's party were written into history nine years ago, when the country then known as Siam underwent a bloodless revolution that changed the nation from an absolute monarchy to a limited one.

Receiving in the upstairs drawing room of the legation, the Minister and Mme. Seni Pramoj greeted several hundred guests from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. The hostess wore a picturesque bronze red costume styled with a straight skirt, brocaded in gold; a lace blouse and an accordian pleated scarf, daintily draped over one shoulder. A heavy necklace of antique gold further accented her attractive costume.

Guests Gather In the Garden

Punch was served in one second-floor drawing room and a lavishly laden table centered the dining room at the opposite end of the hall. Most of the guests, however, made a beeline to the garden back of the legation. There a long buffet was a popular center of attention and small tables had been set up at convenient intervals nearby. Mme. Chintakananda, wife of the Thai Third Secretary, mingled with the crowd in the garden, and, like a number of other ladies who were standing with her, she wore her country's national costume, fashioned like that of the hostess. Here, there and everywhere were countless young men and young ladies who looked as if they might have come straight from Thailand. I soon learned that they were part of a student delegation that came to Washington early yesterday from Ithaca, N. Y., where they have been attending a special conference. They arranged their trip purposely so that they could be here in time to celebrate their country's National Day at the Thai Legation.

Native dress from many different countries seemed to be the favored costume of the hour. I saw several Japanese ladies in brightly colored kimonos and Chinese robes in every shade of the rainbow were everywhere.

Mme. T. V. Soong had on one of the prettiest costumes at the party. Fashioned on straight lines, it was made of white and cerise silk in a floral design and was worn with bright blue shoes and a matching beret. Accompanying Mme. Soong was her husband, who seemed to know everybody at the party.

Diplomats There In Full Force

Who else was there? Well, just about everybody else you can think of, including several officials, a scattering of residential Washingtonians and many from the Diplomatic Corps. Lady Halifax, an early arrival, said she expected her husband, the British Ambassador, to be along a bit later. Donna Elly Colonna, wife of the Italian Ambassador, came early and stayed late. When I saw her she was chatting at length with Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss envoy. The Australian Minister was there with Mrs. Casey, who seems to have recovered quickly from the measles. The Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel Freye y Santander, sat quietly at a table and watched the rest of the world go by. The Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, gathered comments from his friends about the current European situation. Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister, put in an appearance and politely discussed nothing but the weather. Georges Picot, of the French Embassy, made the rounds quickly and was soon on his way. The German Naval Attache and Frau Witthoeft-Emden were there; also the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera and the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos.

A wave of sadness swept over the crowd when anyone mentioned Mrs. Sol Bloom's death. Latest reports from the European front were also circulated at the party and brought forth more plain spoken comments than I had ever thought one could hear in Washington. But, as usual, every remark of that type was cautiously followed by that well-worn tagline, "Don't quote me." In every instance I promised I wouldn't. So I won't.

Van Houtens Give Party

A terrace party in the gayest summertime tradition was chalked off the calendar yesterday when Dr. and Mme. H. R. van Houten, of the Netherlands Legation, entertained informally yesterday afternoon. Guests were invited for "after 6 o'clock" and two hours later a number of them were still lingering on to enjoy the pleasant fete.

The host and hostess received informally wherever they happened to be. Mint juleps and a variety of cocktail-time dainties went the rounds. A few guests strolled out from the terrace to view the scene from the Van Houten home in Westmoreland Hills, Md.

Mme. Van Houten wore a two-piece frock fashioned with a jade green skirt and a print blouse featuring a red and green design on a white background.

Vacation plans accented most of the conversation—about all in fact that didn't center around congratulations to Dr. H. N. Boon on the recent birth of a daughter, his third. Mme. Boon is at Columbia Hospital where the child was born a couple of days ago. Later this season the Boons will be off to Rehoboth Beach where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

Already in New England on her vacation is Mme. Loudon, wife of The Netherlands Minister. Dr. Loudon, however, attended yesterday's party; as did several other members of the Netherlands Legation, including Baron and Baroness von Boetzlaer, Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg and Vlack Lucassen. Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jordaan, of the South African Legation; Mr. and Mrs. Julian Amberg, Mrs. Donald Downs, George Abell who plans to leave the latter part of this week for Cuba where he will spend a month; Rafal Lepkowski, Mrs. Robert Davis, Jay Jerome Williams, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Childs, of the British Embassy, and many more.

Domero-Goltz Nuptials Announced for July 1

Mrs. Katherine Goltz announces the engagement and forthcoming marriage of her daughter, Clara Elsie Goltz, to Albert R. Romero, son of Epifanio Romero and the late Mrs. Romero. The marriage will take place July 1 at 9 a. m., at St. Peter's Catholic Church.

Miss Goltz, who is the daughter of the late Ernst Goltz, attended St. Patrick's Academy in Washington and is an active member of the Curley Club. Mr. Romero, a native of Santa Fe, N. Mex., was graduated from St. Michael's College there and received a degree this month from National University in Washington.

Dr. Aldis Weds Miss Warner

With the bride's father both officiating for part of the ceremony and giving her in marriage, Miss Margaret Warner, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Ariel N. Warner, was married last night at 8 to Dr. Henry Aldis, of Kansas City. The ceremony took place at the Marvin Methodist Church, of which the Rev. Mr. Warner is rector.

The Rev. D. O. Cowles, whose daughter, Mrs. Charles Crain, was matron of honor, performed the first part of the ceremony. The bride wore a gown of white marquisette and lace with a fingertip veil fastened by orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book covered with orchids, with a streamer of valley lilies.

Mrs. Harold Warner, her sister-in-law, and Miss Virgie Warner, a cousin, were bridesmaids. The best man and ushers, like the bridegroom, were all born and brought up in India. Dr. John Aldis was best man for his brother and the ushers were William Aldis, another brother, and Harold L. Warner, Robert Warner and John Warner, the bride's brothers.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony. Later the couple left on a honeymoon, the bride wearing a gown of brown and green chiffon made redingote style, with a large white hat trimmed with a green veil and a corsage of orchids. They will live in Winston-Salem, N. C.

The bride, whose father formerly lived in Bombay, is a graduate of American University, where she did pre-medical work, and also studied at the Woman's Medical College in Philadelphia. She has a degree in graduate nursing from New York State. Dr. Aldis is the son of the Rev. Steadman Aldis, of the missionaries of the Methodist Church in Bombay. He is a graduate of St. Paul's School in Darjeeling, India, and of the University of Kansas, where he received his A. B. and M. D. degrees.

First Outdoor Concert Is Given In Pan American Union Garden

By Carolyn Bell

In its familiar, but nonetheless romantic, setting the first outdoor Pan American Union concert was given last night—aided by a new amplifying system. On other occasions, the orchestra has always been seated just below the esplanade but last night the Army Band, led by Capt. Thomas F. Darcey, was seated at the other edge of the pool of the Aztec garden flooded with turqoise lights.

It was a gala evening and diplomats—from Europe as well as South America—and officials forgot this troubled world during a few hours of exquisite music, broadcast to eager listeners all over the Western Hemisphere.

Guests were seated, as always, on the esplanade, but last night they faced the garden—ringed with waving poplar trees—and looked out over the lovely pool now abloom with brilliant-hued water lilies. The Ambassador of Poland and Mme. Ciechanowski—both ardent musicians—were among the European diplomats attending, as were the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope. The Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Cristina Michels. The Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins were there also. From the Cabinet came the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert Jackson and the Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker.

Dr. Rowe Greet Guests

Genial Dr. Leo S. Rowe was on hand to greet his guests and later, as director general of the Pan American Union, he said a word of greeting to the radio audiences of North and South America. Main attraction of the evening was Francisco Naya, Cuban tenor, who made his debut in this country last fall with the San Francisco Opera Company.

A sprinkling of Senators could be found in the garden last night. Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette were there, as were Senator and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas and their daughter, Miss Chiyo Thomas; Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette, Senator Theodore Green, Senator Arthur Capper and Senator Tom Conally.

The Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Alfaro attended the concert, as did the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister of Portugal and Senhora de Bianchi, the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis, the Charge d'Affaires of Haiti and Mme. Carmelesau-Antoine, the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras and the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Soler.

Many Notables Seen in Crowd

The Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle were in the audience, as were the Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith W. Purdum, who were accompanied by their three daughters, the Misses Elizabeth, Mildred Lee and Laura Purdum. Also from the "little cabinet," were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolph Berle.

Accompanied by their three children were Representative and Mrs. Wirt Courtney. They had with them their two boys, Wirt, jr., and Richard, as well as their daughter, Miss Jane Courtney. Also attending the concert from the Congressional contingent were Representative and Mrs. Herman P. Kopplemann, Representative and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers.

Top ranking Army and Navy officers were there last night and among them were Admiral and Mrs. Harold Stark, Maj. Gen. Allan Gullion, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Hines, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Mrs. Morgan Bradford with her two guests, Mrs. Benjamin Jarrett and Mrs. Lewis Rogers, both of them wives of Representatives from Pennsylvania, and many others.

E. D. Alfriend, Bride to Live At Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Woolfolk Alfriend 4th, whose wedding took place last Thursday, will make their home in Alexandria after their wedding trip to Virginia Beach. Mrs. Alfriend is the former Miss Constance Woodward, daughter of the United States Maritime Commissioner and Mrs. Thomas M. Woodward. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Alfriend, of Alexandria.

The couple were married at historic St. John's Church in Georgetown, the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector, officiating. The bride wore the wedding gown of her grandmother, Mrs. Bliss Perry, of Cambridge, Mass., which Mrs. Woodward had also worn at her wedding. Made of heavy, corded silk, the gown had tulle sleeves shirred with seed pearls. A coronet of seed pearls and a long tulle veil completed the ensemble.

Miss Katherine Woodward was maid of honor for her sister, and another sister, Miss Anne Perry Woodward, was a bridesmaid. The other attendants were Mr. Alfriend's sisters, the Misses Kate Barrett and Cornelia Alfriend; Miss Elizabeth Shepherd, of Washington, and Miss Margaret Brunson, of South Carolina. They wore identical gowns of flower-dotted swiss mousseline with bouffant skirts, and wore large leghorn hats.

Charles Barrett was best man and the ushers were Donald Kendall, jr., William Wight, William Smith, Rathbone Smith, jr., and Dr. Morgan Delany, all of Alexandria.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the Woodward home in Georgetown. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Winfield Scott Woodward, of Philadelphia, and of Bliss Perry, professor emeritus of Williams, Harvard and Princeton, and for many years editor of the Atlantic Monthly. She studied at Holton Arms School in Washington and the University of South Carolina.

Mr. Alfriend is a grandson of the late Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, philanthropist and civic leader, and co-founder with Charles N. Crittenton of the Florence Crittenton Home for Girls.

Irish Minister Returns to Capital

The Minister of Ireland, Robert Brennan, has returned from a stay in New York. While there he said good bye to Frank Aiken, Irish Minister for Defense, who embarked on the Yankee Clipper yesterday to return to his homeland. He has been in this country since March 18 buying war supplies for Ireland.

Mrs. Brennan and their children are at their summer home in Margate, N. J., where the Minister hopes to join them for occasional weekends.

Marriage Postponed

The marriage of Miss Helen A. Bonorden to George A Eames, which was to have taken place on Saturday June 28, at the Petworth Baptist Church, has been indefinitely postponed.

Mrs. Everett, Mrs. Buchan Are Entertained

Entertaining at a 5-to-7 party, Miss Emma Perley Lincoln feted Mrs. Edward H. Everett and Mrs. Everett Buchan yesterday afternoon in the garden house of the Newspaper Women's Club. Mrs. Buchan, who made her home in Shanghai for many years, has taken a house on Massachusetts Avenue. At present her mother, Mrs. Everett, of San Antonio, Tex., is visiting her.

Bowls of pink roses and white shasta daisies were placed effectively about the rooms. Guests gathered in congenial groups and spilled out into the garden of the attractive house. A novel note was introduced by the hostess, who had asked a group of men to pour punch. Among them were Dr. Frank Bohn, Capt. Edward Everett and Judge Percy S. Crew.

Miss Lincoln wore a powder blue linen frock with a pink belt and white turban. Mrs. Everett had also chosen powder blue and white accessories and Mrs. Buchan wore a yellow linen ensemble. Assisting Miss Lincoln were Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Mrs. J. Duncan Elliot, Mrs. Eleanor F. Croft, Mrs. Joseph Park Crockett, Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. Duncan Hazel, Miss Margaret Hart and Miss Katherine Brooks.

A bevy of young ladies had also been asked to assist. They included Miss Mary Jo Buchan, sub-deb daughter of Mrs. Buchan, Mrs. Duncan Elliott, jr., Miss Virginia Barry and Miss Suzanne Kappler.

Miss Barbara Sweet Is Wed To Dr. George A. Gray, Jr.

In a setting of lilies and lighted candles, Miss Barbara DeLawder Sweet became the bride of Dr. George A. Gray, jr., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with the Rev. Raphael H. Miller officiating at the National City Church at Thomas Circle. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henderson Sweet, of Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase. Dr. Gray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Gray of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown cut on classical lines and ending in a sweeping train. It was made with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and long, tight sleeves. Her veil of illusion was caught across the back with a wreath of white larkspur. She carried a bouquet of larkspur and roses.

Mrs. F. S. Rixey served as matron of honor. She wore a yellow marquisette gown with an embroidered, tight-fitting basque and bouffant skirt. She carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and wore a wreath of similar flowers in her hair. Miss Jean Burns and Mrs. Alexander Castro were the remaining attendants. One was gowned in pink marquisette and the other wore a blue frock. They carried bouquets of pink and blue larkspur and wore matching flowers in their hair.

Lieut. F. S. Rixey served as best man and ushers included the bride's three brothers, George H. Sweet, jr., John William Sweet and Donald H. Sweet; Dr. Charles Hoyt, Alexander Castro and Douglas Butturff.

Cocktail Party To Fete Mr. Abbey

Miss Elizabeth Howry will entertain at a small, informal cocktail party tomorrow afternoon in honor of Glenn Abbey, who will be off soon for London to join the U. S. Embassy staff there.

The fete will take place at Miss Howry's new home, 2614 P Street, at 6 p. m. Mr. Abbey, who has been with the State Department here for several years, will leave Washington early in July for England.

Miss Lillian Willett Is Guest in Boston

Miss Lillian Hathaway Willett, daughter of Mrs. E. Jean Willett, is spending a week in Boston as the guest of Countess Henry Potier de la Morandiere, the former Miss Ellen Knapp. The countess is a daughter of Mrs. Julia Lord Knapp, of Camden, S. C., and of Arnold Knapp, of New York.

Miss Willett and Countess de la Morandiere met in Paris several seasons ago.

How to Finance And Build Home Told in Booklet

THIS may be the moment you've longed for—seeing the framework go up for a house of your own! Has it been delayed by unsolved questions about money and building? Perhaps these are the answers you need.

Q. What is a safe rule of thumb for the amount you can afford to pay for house and lot?

A. You can well afford a home costing twice your annual income! Loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration have made home ownership much easier than it was.

On $1,250 a year, you can afford to spend $2,500. An FHA loan for that amount only requires a down payment of $150 to $250 and $15 to $20 monthly, depending on the type of loan secured.

Q. How can I get the most house for the least money?

A. Compact planning helps. Sometimes wise to place dining facilities in living room or kitchen, as in the house we've shown. Confine hall space to a minimum.

Q. Where should the garage be placed to give the most back yard?

A. At the front, as shown in plan.

For answers to many more such questions see our 40-page booklet, "LOW-COST HOMES—PLANNING, FINANCING, BUILDING." Has plans and photos of 29 attractive houses. Explains FHA financing, the most economical construction; also modernizing of old homes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Small Boy Wails Inconsolably When His Divorcee Mother Isn't Home by Midnight; His Maternal Grandmother Sides With Him; Is That Unreasonable?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a daughter who lacks entirely a sense of time. By that, I mean she never knows when to come home. As a child of six, she went off one day and stayed for six hours. I was frantic, of course; but when she finally returned I did not punish her. I tried, instead, to impress her with the worry and distress she had caused, thinking this would make her realize the importance of moderation.

As an adolescent girl, she was very pretty and very popular. Her friends were nice, wholesome young people whom I made a point of knowing and whom I welcomed into our home. Our funds were very limited but by careful management she was always well dressed. However, the only way I could ever get her home from dates was to tell the young man the hour when I wanted her in. (Incidentally, no young man ever failed to have her in by the hour set). I was not unreasonable. She was allowed to stay until the party was over; but on ordinary dates I expected her home by midnight.

As she grew older, she gradually took more liberties as to hours. The night she met the man she married, she called me at 5 a. m. to say where she was. She was 24 years old when she married; but the marriage was dissolved after a year and she came back to us with her baby. Almost immediately, young men desired to take her places. This was perfectly understandable, as she is unusually good looking and has a personality that appeals to everyone. But now we come to the crux of the problem.

With nothing to do for three years but train her child, she taught him to leave his bed every night around midnight or a little later and come to her bed. Now, when she is out at midnight or later, he calls for her and cries when she doesn't answer. He refuses to be comforted until she comes in; although occasionally he sobs himself to sleep. In either event, by the time he is quiet again I am thoroughly awake and often cannot go back to sleep until daylight.

Since she trained him in such habits (or, at least, allowed him to form them), I say she should be here when he wakens. Otherwise, I am unfit to care for him the following day—and she is now employed. Also my husband is an invalid and requires a great deal of attention, which means that I need rest of nights. Do you think I am being unreasonable in expecting her to return at a moderate hour and not take her pleasure at my expense? After 15 years of bearing the brunt of her night-owl habits, I am just a little weary of it. Please give me your opinions.

One 'Sows the Wind' In Neglecting a Child

DEAR W. D. C.: It isn't a "time sense" your daughter lacks—although that rationalization of her selfish behavior probably has rung in her ears since childhood. What she really lacks is a trained sense of responsibility, with its concomitant consideration for the rights, needs and feelings of others. Apparently she thinks the world and all the people in it—but particularly her mother—exist for the purpose of serving her pleasure. Even her child she treats as a toy—to be played with and "fussed over" when the mood strikes her, and left standing more or less on his ear when social adventures invite.

Her irresponsible attitude toward the child is, and has been, shameful. In encouraging him to come to her bed after midnight, she was coddling a flighty, amusement-seeking whim of her own,—in reckless disregard of his baby need to be gently but firmly trained to spend quiet, contented, uninterrupted nights in his own corner, as it were. His good health and, sound nerves, as well as his sane habit patterns of a lifetime, would depend upon such a nocturnal regimen during his growing years.

In howling his head off of nights while she is out on the town, he is animated as much by the nervous excitement which comes of his habitual midnight wakefulness as he is by distress at finding her gone. Her flinty self-centeredness is colossal—giving promise of taking destructive toll of three generations of persons in one household. Ever since her childhood she has been a thorn in your side,—going her way and letting you worry. Then, in her twenties, she blithely messed up her own life and brought the wreckage back to your lap to be pieced together as best it could be. And now she is nonchalantly visiting upon her baby the pressures and penalties of her chronically egoistic performance.

It is impossible even to conjecture the extent of the psychic harm she is doing the child, in giving him a continuous experience of hysterical nights,—followed, but inevitably, by fretful days spent in the company of your equally fretful self; and days that are marked, no doubt, by innumerable family disputes. No one can say what alarms, what uncertainties, what heartache, what rage and resentment, are eating cancerously into the child's mind and spirit,—as a direct result of his mother's light headed neglect of her primary responsibility to give him (1) systematic, sensible personal care, and (2) an instructive example of conservative, dependable deportment.

Your daughter is a badly spoiled young woman, probably in consequence of too much maternal pampering and petting since the day she was born; probably because she is an only child. And unless she (1) wakens to a realization of the enormity of her folly in treating her small son as a sort of rag doll, to be fondled or ignored, as suits her convenience, and (2) effects a long-overdue reform, she is going to have a "problem child" of her own to cope with, sooner or later. By her current misbehavior as a parent she is sowing the wind—and it is Scripturally recorded that those who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind.

"Is it unreasonable to expect her to return home at a moderate hour of night?" Certainly not.—in view of the child's disturbed state, which she has brought on. For the time being, she has an imperative obligation to be on hand to soothe him, when he wakes and cries for her. More than that, she has an obligation to spend as many consecutive nights at home as will be necessary to train him out of his habit of waking at midnight and roaming the house in search of her. A child specialist's counsel and prescriptions may be required for solving the problem already created,—but it is a problem that must not be ignored: that cannot be safely neglected. Months from now, when the boy has learned to sleep quietly through the night, she may consider herself honorably free to set her own curfew; but for the present, all things considered, she has forfeited that privilege.

Ginger Rogers Has 11 Petticoats

Petticoats are practically as important this summer as they were in grandma's day. Rumor has it that 11 petticoats for as many dresses are included in the wardrobe made for Ginger Rogers to wear in a current picture. They're all in the peasant or pinafore mood.

Petticoats are also being made of the same fabric as the frock. Michele Morgan, for a tea date in the Beverly Hills Brown Derby, wore a frock of navy blue taffeta embroidered with navy blue bow knots. The petticoat is made of the same fabric, knife-pleated all around and edged with pink and navy. It's as long as the frock, and peps' out when Michele walks or sits.

The Gentler Sex — By Malvina Lindsay

Happy Vacation!

A VACATION trip on which you won't have to address a single picture postcard or spend all your time prowling around gift shoppes hunting trinkets for the entire populace left behind!

This Utopian adventure is promised by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League. At her press conference yesterday the noted crusader announced she was going to do something about the way in which, vacation trips were turning women into "nervous wrecks."

"There is entirely too much hullaballoo about vacations," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "More women are exhausted by their vacations than by their housework or their jobs. For instance, a woman spends the summer shopping for the clothes she will need on vacation. Then her friends get excited and give her a goodbye party or, worse still, a cosmetic kit or a soap box or a pullman robe, and as a result she spends her entire vacation getting gifts to take back to repay them.

It's Christmas All Over Again

"As a matter of fact, something drastic must be done about this vacation gift situation. As it is, no vacationist ever has time to do any sightseeing or even to rest. She must be spending all her waking hours hunting "some little inexpensive thing' to take back to somebody. And—if she is not buying gifts, she is sitting at a desk, pen in hand, trying to think of something 'different' to say on a picture postcard.

"And the more cards she sends, the more she has to send, for fear of offending relatives and friends who might see the first batch of cards mailed. Finally she ends up by sending cards to persons she hasn't seen for years or perhaps doesn't even know."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey," interrupted a publicity man for a State society, "you surely aren't going to abolish all tokens of friendship, are you."

Cards and Gifts Sent in Advance

"No, I am merely going to systematize the dispersal of them," was the reply. "I am going to make it possible for vacationists to get all their picture postcards and gifts ready in advance. To that end I am opening a vacation gift shoppe right down here in town at which I will have picture postcards from all conceivable places in the Western Hemisphere. What's more, I will have the 'Wish you were here' message written on them."

"Wait a minute," interrupted an editorial writer. "You are surely not going to have that old cliche on the cards!"

"Indeed, I am! That expression has never been improved on and it is utter nonsense for vacationists to wear their brains out trying to think of anything bright and original to say on a picture postcard.

"Then, I shall also have on hand all sorts of gifts, including burnt-wood boxes, fancy combs, satin sofa pillow tops, table mats, sea shells, handkerchief holders, etc. These may be bought and sent in advance to the recipients. The cards may be addressed and mailed here—or, if the vacationist is very conscientious, may be taken along and mailed at points along the way.

Bill of Rights For Vacationists

"By this plan," continued Mrs. DeGoofey, "all vacationists may short blithely on their way, really free of care and ready to enjoy themselves. However, I also expect to make matters still easier for them by having them sign a vacation bill of rights. Here are its pledges:

"I will not, while on vacation, be induced to visit any manufacturing plant or go through any building where any technical processes might possibly be explained to me.

"I will not be dragged to any public building or monument I 'really ought to see.'

"I will not deliver any packages, messages or 'hellos' to friends in any other city.

"I will not look up any complete strangers because somebody wants me to meet them.

"I will not, in any overly expansive mood, agree to visit persons who are not my most intimate friends.

"I will not stay overnight in any private home as long as I have the price of a hotel room in my pocketbook.

"I will not go sightseeing with more than one person.

I will not invite everyone. I know or meet to look me up some time in Washington."

You Needn't Starve to Lose Excess Fat

Balanced Menu Will Supply All The Wrong Foods

By Ida Jean Kain

MANY FAT people are starving. That may sound impossible—they don't look as if they were wasting away. But they are actually suffering from a nutritional deficiency.

In a desperate effort to keep from adding more pounds a certain percentage of the overweights jeopardize their health. I heard recently of a school teacher who tips the scales at well over 200 pounds and who is so afraid of putting on more weight that she is on an extremely poor diet. As a result she is tired all the time and feels quite despondent about the whole thing.

A Detroit mother came in to see me a few weeks ago because all her children were begging her to get thin. She seemed to be very discouraged and unhappy. A check on her diet showed that she was not overeating—but she was eating the foods which supply calories and nothing else. It is characteristic of overweights that they crave sweets and fats instead of the proteins, minerals and vitamins they must have.

Margin of Safety Needed

From the standpoint of nutrition, a diet is good only when it supplies an adequate margin of safety above the minimum requirement in the protective elements—protein, iron, calcium, and all the vitamins. The science of nutrition has advanced to the point where it is possible to include those essentials on an extremely low calorie intake. The overweight can be bettetr fed and lose weight.

There are some overweights who burn surprisingly few calories for their size. That is, they burn comparatively few calories per pound of normal body weight. The excess fat burns too few calories to count. But if they are to keep fit, their low calorie reducing diet must be up to standard in the protective elements.

The fat person who gains weight all too readily should do three things. First, she should consult her doctor and let him discover whether or not she needs thyroid extract. Then she must change her food habits until it becomes natural to choose the foods she must have daily. Finally, she should supplement her reducing menus with a vitamin concentrate. The overweight invariably shoes off concentrates for fear they will cause the weight to climb. But there are no calories in concentrates. Their use helps to keep the diet adequate even though the calories are very limited.

Don't Starve Yourself

If you are one of the overweights who are anxious to turn the trend of the scales, don't starve yourself. Give the scientifically balanced menu a chance. It contains a high percentage of protein to take care of the daily wear and tear, and this, incidentally, steps up your metabolism so that you burn slightly more calories. On a carefully balanced menu, such as given below, the only vitamin supplment you need is B1. Take daily one milligram of thiamin chloride to reinforce your dict with 333 units of B1. In planning your low calorie menus, make it rule to have these foods daily: A lean meat, fish, or fowl; an egg, cottage cheese and skim milk; a green leafy vegetable, a second low calorie vegetable, a citrus fruit and green salad, plus the vitamin B concentrate. You should feel good while you are losing weight, and on that diet you will.

Paint Outdoor Furniture

Keeping white metal summer furniture white is no picnic. It means a good paint job each summer—and this is one place NOT to economize on paint. Not unless you want the white to powder off on everybody's clothes. Here's the process—go over the surface with coarse steel wool and a scraping knife to get all the old paint off that's loose. Then paint with a first quality of auto enamel and when that's dry put on a coat of clear outdoor finish.

Royalty Sponsors Braid Hat

Groups Plan Hospitality Programs

Activities Designed To Make Stay Of Defense Workers More Pleasant

By Lucia Giddens

A welcome for newly arriving defense workers was widened yesterday as two organizations planned special hospitality programs.

The Business and Professional Women's Club has formed a new fellowship committee, with one of its major duties to help members from clubs in other States to get settled here.

Miss Criena Mahoney, chairman, yesterday announced her committee, which will greet newcomers, help them find rooms and probably plan summer outings for them.

Miss Mahoney, a florist, has lined up this varied group of committee members to compound the welcome for defense workers: Ethel Ashman, supervisor of personnel files, Farm Credit Administration, and Florence J. Enos, insurance woman, vice chairmen; Margaret Ralston, secretary at the Juvenile Court; Louise Pierce, who has a dress shop; Marie Pierce, who is connected with a printing company; Blanche Kerr, clerk in the War Department; Bessie Leach, clerk in the Treasury Department; Jane Daniel stenographer, Geological Survey; Aura Monroe, clerk, Internal Revenue.

The committee will meet next week to make plans for the summer.

The Y. W. C. A., which already has in motion a summer recreation and education program keyed to new defense workers, announced yesterday a social event just added.

The Square Dance Group of the Y. W. C. A. will have a picnic supper and dance at 6 o'clock tonight at the Palisades Field House, with country music. The dancing will be outdoors, if the weather is fair.

Leola Stahl, Lahuma Hollowell, Ruth Jehle and Arthur Lentz are in charge of the outing. The dance group meets once a month, with sessions to be held regularly this summer, as a part of the Y. W. C. A.'s increased recreation program.

On the roof of the Y. W. C. A., the summer session of the Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. Radio Guild will open at 8 p. m. tomorrow, to meet once a week through July and August. The writing of radio scripts and the making of electrical transcriptions will lead up to opportunities for taking part in in actual broadcasts at local stations. The summer session of the project was planned by a committee including Fred Nickson, Sara Rosenblum, Martha and John Ostach, Jeanne Harris and Oliver Headland.

Mrs. Bintz Named Banquet Chairman

Mrs. Helen Bintz has been named banquet chairman for the convention of the District of Columbia Department, American Legion Auxiliary, to be held August 8 and 9, it was announced yesterday.

Miss M. Edna McIntosh, chairman of the convention committee, announced that the banquet committee would include also Mrs. Edith Sadler, vice chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Ketner, Mrs. Esther Watson, Mrs. Sally Kohen, Mrs. Sylvia McLaughlin, Miss Mabel Staub and Mrs. Edith Armstrong.

Mrs. Blanche Crory will be in charge of pages for the convention, to be held in the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Mrs. Florence Taylor, past department president and national executive committeewoman of Colorado, will be chief soloist and song leader at the convention, it was announced by Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, chairman of entertainment.

Officers Seated By Phi Delta

Phi Delta Sorority, which has just been admitted to membership in the District Federation of Women's Clubs, last night held its banquet and installation of officers at Collier Inn.

Mrs. LeVerne Beales, past vice president of the federation, installed Mrs. Carolyn Ludwig, president; Mrs. Katherine Dodson, vice president; Miss Virginia Chisholm, recording secretary; Mrs. Frances Pitman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Dorothy Haycraft, treasurer.

The sorority, which was founded in 1918 as a club at Petworth Baptist Church, has now widened beyond denominational lines. Miss Evelyn Ballou, technologist, in a physician's office, is the only person from the original group among the present 25 members.

The banquet, closing the sorority's season, also marked the completion of a two-year philanthropic project. The group has supplied clothes, milk and other food to a family—mother and four children on relief—referred to the sorority by a Parent-Teacher Association. With this help, the family has now succeeded in getting on its feet. The older boy has finished school and gone to work. The mother's health has improved sufficiently to permit her to hold a job.

Gypsy Chorus to Sing At Benefit Fiesta

The Gypsy Chorus, directed by Fred Freund, will sing to orchestral accompaniment Saturday evening at a fiesta for the benefit of Opportunity House, in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, 2949 Macomb Street. May Evans and Randy Meyers will sing solos.

There will be no admission charge to the party, which will be from 9 p. m. to midnight. Dancing and refreshments will complete the program.

Allan Schirmer to Sing For Soroptimist Club

Allan Schirmer, professor and head of the voice department of Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio, will sing today at the Soroptimist Club's last luncheon meeting of the season at the Willard Hotel. Mr. Schirmer will be accompanied on the piano by his mother, Mrs. William Schirmer, of Bellvue, Iowa, with whom he is attending the convention of the American Guild of Organists this week at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Miss Hanford Is Delegate

Miss Barbara Hanford, of Arlington, student at George Washington University, will attend the national convention of Kappa Delta Sorority in Swampscott, Mass., June 26-30, as a delegate from the university chapter.

Dr. Frances Marshall To Attend Convention

Dr. Frances P. Marshall, vice president of the Zonta Club, will leave Saturday for Atlantic City to attend the annual convention of the American Optometric Association. She has completed her fourth term as president of the District of Columbia Optometric Society.

Heavy Tanks Lacking in U.S. Arms Strength

By Dan Rogers
United Press Staff Writer

Tanks, especially heavy tanks, are one weapon of 1941 style warfare which this country may have in time but which are sadly deficient now.

The Berwick, Pa., plant of the American Car & Foundry Co. is turning out ten light tanks of 13-ton size daily and expects within 90 days to be finishing at least 15 a day. The company has received orders for 3,418 of these little "land destroyers" and when this appears in print will have delivered about 1,000 of them. Some of these have reached Britain; some are on the bottom of the Atlantic. How many, only the Washington Government knows. They cost about $13,000 each.

The requirements of the seven armored divisions planned for the United States Army by June, 1942, are 2,009 light tanks, not allowing for spares or replacements. It has been said that the margin of safety in light tanks is dangerously narrow and provision for their production inadequate, considering how many thousands may be needed.

Medium Tank Outlook Fair

The next size tank is the M3, or medium tank, of 28 tons, which the Chrysler tank arsenal outside Detroit was built to produce. The plant is virtually complete. It has produced its first three tanks and is almost ready for quantity production. Full capacity, expected to be reached this fall, is 13 tanks a day. The Government has ordered 1,000 of them at a cost of $38,500 each, which does not include the cost of the armor plate.

At the rate of 13 a day, it would be midsummer of 1942 before this total of 2,600 M3's is complete, if full scheduled production is reached in October.

In heavy tanks—the 60 to 80 ton monsters—the outlook is not good. This country has had no experience in making these "land battleships." At the moment we have not one. The Government has contracted with the Baldwin Locomotive Co. to build 50, and this admittedly is an "educational" order.

How do the American tanks compare with European models? Speaking only of the 13-ton and 28-ton sizes—all that we have yet made—it is said that American tanks, ton for ton, probably are superior to any in Europe.

Wouldn't "Freeze" Model

One reason we do not have more tanks now rolling off assembly lines, manufacturers said, is because the Army was reluctant to "freeze" a design and put it in production, but kept making improvements all the time on the basis of late information from Europe. Chrysler officials said the tank they are making today was a "far better" tank than the tank they contracted to build. Add to this the fact that America has available the best of materials without having to resort to substitutes, has the world's greatest industrial capacity for making such engines of war, and that American armor plate admittedly is the best in the world, pound for pound and inch for inch, American tanks should be the best in the world.

For armament, the 13-ton tank has a 37-millimeter cannon on a turret which sweeps the circle; five machine guns and a submachine gun. The big 28-ton tank has a 75-millimeter (3-inch) cannon, a 37 millimeter cannon, five machine guns and a submachine gun. Each have two-way radio. Each is powered by air cooled radial aircraft type motors and will make more speed than ever would be practicable in battle.

In all other categories of wheeled warfare such as armored cars, scout and command cars, combat cars, bug-like little "blitz buggies" and four-wheel-drive army trucks of tremendous strength, our situation is excellent.

45 Survivors Of U-Boat Attacks Land in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., June 24—, (U.P.)—Forty-five survivors of two freighters torpedoed in the North Atlantic between Iceland and Greenland by German submarines were landed here this afternoon by the Finnish freighter Hammarland.

Ten men are from the crew of the Dutch freighter Yselhaven and 33 from the Belgian ship Mercier.

Survivors from the Yselhaven were picked up after nine days in an open boat. They report nine members of the crew were drowned when the submarine struck with two torpedoes that sunk the ship in two minutes. Fifteen other members of the crew were last seen in an open boat and have not been reported rescued.

The Mercier survivors were picked up after six days in an open boat. Other survivors of the Mercier, including one woman and a child are believed to have been picked up by another ship and taken to Canada. The survivors were in poor physical condition, many of them suffering from near frostbite. They were wearing makeshift carboard shoes.

Shorts, Slacks Banned For Florence Women

Florence, Italy, June 24 (U.P.)—Police warned the women of Florence today that they will be fined if they appear in shorts or slacks. If they are riding bicycles at the time, the bicycles will be confiscated.

The newspaper Nazione commented: "It was about time to take a strong measure against this stupid Hollywood style."

Ben Williamson, Former Senator, Dies

Cincinnati, June 24 (AP).—Ben Williamson, 76, of Ashland, Ky., former United States Senator died today.

Mr. Williamson was elected to a short term in the United States Senate in 1930, serving until March 4, 1931, when the late Senator M. M. Logan Mills took office.

CALLING ALL AMATEURS! Can you roll your eyes like Marlene Dietrich? Or tap step like Eleanor Powell? Or crack jokes in the Bob Hope manner? Or boop-a-doop like Bing Crosby? Or make sounds like Ed Wynn's "Fireman?" or gurgle like the "Shadow?"

If you can do any of these things, in fact, if you can imitate any star of screen, stage or radio, you'd best gallop down to the Neptune Room and tell Don Baker about it so that you can be entered in Neptune's new "Impersonation Contest." It starts next Wednesday eve, July 2, and will be continued for five Wednesdays. On the sixth Wednesday winners on previous nights will battle it out for top honors. Winner of the tournament will receive a week's engagement with Don Baker's Musicomics in the Neptune Room.

Don Baker has played with such stars as Burns and Allen, Irene Bordoni, Glenda Farrell and Alan Dinehart. He's familiar with the work of all amusement headliners and will fully appreciate the smart and unusual impersonations. Best time to see him is between 4:30 and 6 p. m. in the Neptune Room.

Washington's restaurant proprietors all "ate out" yesterday. They held their annual summer outing at O'Donnell's Farms all afternoon and evening.

TUMBLES AND TITTERS dominate in the new Lotus floor show. The Riddera, prize acrobat-clowns, recently featured with Ringlings' Circus, do everything but break their necks in reaping laughs. Their comedy mayhem and assaults upon each other are rewarded with long rounds of applause from Lotus patrons who like nothing better than a good fight that's all in fun . . . Cortez and Dolores present elegant twirling and spinning in the Pan-American manner and the eight Dancettes waltz demurely in garden party gowns, parade in feather costumes and jive-step in red-and-blue get-ups.

"PEACEFUL IN THE COUNTRY" is the most promising ballad that's arrived for many a month says Maestro Dick Koons of the Mayflower Lounge. The soothing title sells it from the start and the ingratiating lyrics and melody back up the fine first impression.

EXOTICISM IS UNCHAINED on the Shoreham Terrace this week. Maurice nad Cordoba are shivering and quivering through a rare group of South American dances, including the paso doble, beguine and Brazilian tango. Every number is executed with that indescribable finesse that marks authentic Latin-American dancing. The cause of the exotic is further forwarded by the delicately shuddering hula executed by Talia. The bicycle clowning of Will Morris and Bobby comes as a teasing contrast to this feast of sophistication.

Dame Nature's air-cooling is working perfectly on the Starlight Roof on even the hottest evenings.

Every night is cool away up on Starlight, many stories over the streets, and the Potomac breezes are as dependable as those from any electric fan.

ABOUT BANDSMEN. Bert Bernath, leader of the Pall Mall Room orchestra, is naturally a bit chesty about his arrangement of "Pavane." It's been praised by no less an authority than Andre Kostelanetz . . . The Rainbow Room orchestra has been less affected by the draft than any other around town. All members have been classified as 3-A. . . . Bob Seidel, saxist extraordinary at Glen Echo, was one of our town's first swing experts. He started jiving in 1933 out at Randle Gardens, Washington's first jitterbug rendezvous.

"THE CRYING PRINCESS," a fairy fantasy, has been written by Patricia, little daughter of Matt Windsor of the Anchor Room. Patricia is now rehearsing the play with her school friends and it'll be produced in the Windsor garden. Matt is writing incidental music for the show. "I've got to keep peace in the family," he says.

UNRELATED FACTS. Ida Clarke, who presides so pleasantly at the electric organ in Lounge Riviera, has often been booked as Ida May Clark. But her real name is Ida Victoria . . . Charlie Braden, partner in the Plymouth, had some apple juice the other eve and didn't know what to do with it. He mixed it up with various ingredients and after much sipping, evolved a wonderful pale-tinted concoction that he's going to call the "Pride of Virginia" cocktail. It's made of apple jice, applejack and just enough lemon juice for a tang . . . Jimmy Summerville, leader of Hi Hat's Four M's, has one lonely vice. He thinks there's nothing like a good stick of chewing gum.

The Mayfair's Chordsmen recently gave a cocktail party at their hotel. They had 40 girl guests and one man. Lovely going! We still think the man was a gate crasher.

AN INDOOR-OUTDOOR COMBINATION is River Bend. Its walls are an almost solid array of windows. On rainy or chilly nights they can be closed. But during the prevalent sizzly evenings, they're all opened and, presto! River Bend is just one big airy veranda for dancing and dining.

THE SHOW MUST GO ON. Bob Brown, star dancer at the Casino Royal, smiled as toothsomely as ever at a recent floor show. But he wasn't heppy inside. Some larcenous individual had made off with a large part of his wardrobe . . . Eve Knight, of the King Cole Room, is coping with a meanie of a cold.

AIR-COOLED COMFORT. The Harrington Hotel is admirably air-cooled from the comfortable lobby right up to the roof. Perhaps the most frequently heard remark in the Harrington lobby, is "I wish I lived here" . . . The progressive Olmsted's Grill was one of the first of Washington restaurants to install air conditioning and make its name synonymous with hot weather comfort. Both the main dining room and the spacious private dining rooms for organization parties are kept at the same even spring-time temperature.

Scout Hikes 20,000 Miles; Uses 102 Boots

JULIO CESAR BERRIZBEITIA

Fifty-one pairs of worn-out boots and many thrilling adventures mark the 20,000-mile trail of Julio Cesar Berrizbeitia, 19-year-old Boy Scout, who has arrived here after a three-year walk from his home in Carcacas, Venezuela.

The promenade began three years ago in July, 1938. Then Julio and five other Venezuelan Boy Scouts left the Plaza Bolivar in Caracas determined to walk to Washington.

One night, 1,000 miles from home, while camped in the jungle of Colombia, Julio related yesterday, they were attacked by fierce Motilones Indians. Julio said he tossed a stick of dynamite into the fire. He had brought it along to kill fish.

The explosion frightened the savages off, but not before all of the boys were wounded by poison darts.

First aid was administered, but by the time they reached a village of friendly Indians at Rio Atcha one of the boys was badly infected with gangrene and died. Yesterday Julio exhibited five large scars on his legs from dart wounds. The others turned back soon after the experience.

With 100 pounds of equipment on his back and armed only with a hunting knife, Julio then plunged into the Central American jungle. In Costa Rica, he reports, he killed a jaguar with his knife and cut off its tail, which he now wears as a bracelet. For food he often ate the meat of boa constrictors which he says tasted like chicken.

Before he reached the United States border he could speak no English. Today, three months later, he speaks it with only a slight accent. As he walked along the dusty highways of the United States many persons stopped to offer him rides, but he accepted none, he says.

Julio is a Rover Scout which is one grade above an Eagle Scout, and has been a member of that organization 13 years. He has dark bronzed skin, curly black hair and a spontaneous smile, not to mention two very muscular legs.

Miscellaneous information about Julio: He has walked through nine countries; the first rain he struck in the United States was in Washington Monday night; he has 80 merit badge; he was struck by a car just outside Washington and though he was uninjured, his mandolin was smashed to bits; he has a letter from the President of Venezuela to President Roosevelt; he wants to go to a United States flying

When asked if he wanted to walk back to his country he smiled and said, "Do you theenk I am crazee." However, two District Scouts, John Rees and Fritz Lampman, walked him all over town looking at the sights yesterday. Julio took it in his stride.

80 Boys Move Into 'Y' Camp

Away from Washington streets and the heat in them, nearly 140 District youngsters from 8 to 18 years this week started an outdoor summer vacation at the Y. M. C. A.'s 250-acre Camp Letts, on the shore of the Rhode River, near Annapolis, Md.

Eighty of the boys have moved in for the summer, the others for shorter periods, and 60 more have signed up to go later.

Except for making up their bunks, vacation started the minute they moved in—a vacation of boating, swimming, three husky meals a day, games and hiking, campfires at night and sometimes a movie. Reveille is at 7 a. m., lights out at 9:30 p. m. Besides plenty of play, the boys will have serious work, lessons in life saving and first-aid, map making, nature studies, and for five weeks, starting July 7, there will be summer school classes

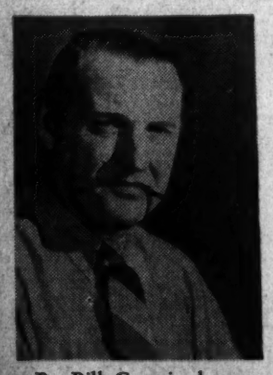
Bill Cunningham's Column:

Skipper Who Fooled Nazis Tells How to Fight 'Em



By Bill Cunningham

In terms of talk about our fighting anybody, I know it's customary to give any actual name the swerve by the use of such generalizations as "any unfriendly power," "an aggressor," or even "an invader." But there's probably no point in anyone's trying to kid anyone. If we're going to fight anybody it's going to be Germany, unless perchance our varsity quarterback figures it out the football way and decides first to throw a reverse at Japan just to see whether the Japs can smash interference or will fade with the play.

But if we're going to tangle up in that scrimmage it's going to be Germany sooner or later, and there chances to be one United States citizen who's already licked a bunch of Germans in this war and who has a very definite idea how they all can be licked. I'm more or less taking his name in vain in this present connection, for his observations weren't uttered for formal release. We were just talking one day and he happened to make 'em.

The man is Capt. Joe Gainard, tall and trim Yankee skipper of the famous City of Flint, the American vessel that was captured and prize-crewed by the Germans in that great maritime thriller of a couple of years back. The captain—he was a commander then—has never told me what he had on the Flint. The Germans claimed it was contraband, headed for England. The captain dosen't talk about that.

Neither will he talk very much about how he slugged his vessel lose from his Nazi captors, although there were 60 of them with enough grenades and machine guns to hold a Belgian fort, while he didn't have so much as a cap pistol anywhere on his boat. But I know how he did it. I got it straight from one of the crew who saw him do it.

Knocked Out Nazi Officers

Those Germans were soldiers, not sailors. They didn't know anything about currents and 3-mile limits, while he knew every dimple in every wave in the world. They were taking him to Germany down the cost of Norway, and a German officer stood outside his cabin with a pistol in his hand. The German had tried to tell him he was under arrest, and Gainard had told him no United States naval officer recognizes any such statement.

There were two of the Germans, as a matter of fact, in that companionway guarding the skipper. Cutely, he maneuvered the Flint just over the edge of the 3-mile limit, and then, moving casually to the door, he suddenly leaped like a tiger, driving the screen door hard against one German and felling the other with his fist. Before the first could get up, he had the gun of the second. With it, he disarmed the first, and with their officers prisoners, the Nazis were done.

Apparently they have no originality. No private volunteered to see what a machine gun would do against a pair of German Lugers. Their officers were done. They threw in the sponge.

Gainard sailed his ship, crew and cargo safely back to America, to become, for my well-worn money, out ranking naval hero since John Paul Jones.

That, then, is the record of the man who was talking, as I say, in private conversation, about how to beat the Germans — any Germans.

Like Louis Against Schmeling

"You ought to know," he said; "you had a perfect example of it right in your own line of work. Joe Louis' two fights with Max Schmeling tell all the story there is. The first time Louis let Schmeling set his own pace and fight his own fight. Let a German or Germany, do that, and they'll tear you to pieces. The second time, Louis went roaring out of his corner and knocked Schmeling's brains out before the astonished German could even get his fists in place. You saw what happened. It was practically the shortest heavyweight championship knockout on record.

"That's the story," he concluded. "Fight a defensive fight with them and they'll ruin you. Beat them to the punch and they'll quit. Nobody in his right mind will underestimate their doggedness, their skill, their unreasoning courage. They're methodical and they're deadly if you let them stake their own fight and follow their own plans their own way. But if you beat them to the punch, smack them before they get set, give them the unorthodox, the unexpected to contend with, they're generally helpless."

This information may

come too late to help us a great deal, provided things go on the way they've headed, but wouldn't it have been something if England and France had known this and had had what it took

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

FSA Promotion Plan To Start July 1

Good news for Federal Security employes: The Budget Bureau uniform promotion plan will be made effective in the agency on July 1 on order of Administrator Paul McNutt. Several other departments are understood to be planning to follow the lead of the Federal Security Agency and adopt the budget plan which will guarantee its employes equal treatment. The House approved the promotion plan without a dissenting vote and the bill is now in the Senate Civil Service Committee. Senator Mead, of New York, has said he would sponsor the legislation in the Senate.

Under the McNutt order Federal Security employes earning less than $3,500 and who haven't had a raise during the past 18 months and who have had good or better efficiency ratings will be eligible for a one-step-in-grade promotion. Employes earning more than $3,500 will have to wait 30 months before being given an increase.

Like many other agencies, Federal Security gave exceedingly few raises to its employes in the 1941 fiscal year. The restrictive rider on its 1942 appropriation bill prevented the agency from promoting its employes even when promotions were earned. It's quite possible that the House Appropriations Committee will direct agencies to use the Budget Bureau promotion plan after July 1 unless the Senate acts in the meantime.

Robert Frazer, secretary to Senator Hill, of Alabama, has been appointed NLRB regional director in Atlanta. He has been succeeded by Walling Keith, Birmingham newspaperman . . . The Government won't use the Marvin Methodist Church at Tenth Street and Independence Avenue as an office building. The church will be torn down when Independence Avenue is widened . . . The Government is negotiating for several office buildings here that are under construction.

Many Quitting Union

An exodus has started from UFWA's local at USHA. Three members already have submitted their resignations and others are anticipated. They are dissatified over the handling of the Dana Doten case. Those who have resigned are Dorothy Cline, Corienne Robinson and Charles Alldredge. Alldredge said he resigned because the "leadership of the local isn't following a policy in the best interests of the Nation." Misses Cline and Robinson had expulsion charges placed against them because they opposed the handling of the Doten case. Pressure from C. I. O. headquarters caused the "trial" to be called off, but the charges have never been formally dropped, which was one of the reasons for the resignation of the two girls.

The rider in the Army appropriation bill that would have barred the employment of anyone at a salary over $5,000 except those specifically authorized by law was stricken from the bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The committee report said that War Department officials declared passage of the rider would "definitely impede" Army operations and that it is essential that the department be able to hire technical experts without salary limitations.

Phillip C. Holt, of Arlington, Va., will get a check from Uncle Sam for $450 for work as a temporary employe in the Treasury Department back in 1933. He was refused payment at the time because of a technicality and Congress had to pass a special bill. The President signed it yesterday . . . Negative cutters at the Army War College are paid only $1,440. They have been offered jobs paying as much as $2,000 in other agencies but they can't transfer because of the transfer ban.

Agriculture Department, it's reliably reported, didn't recommend to the Budget Bureau that any single bureau be transferred to the field en toto in the decentralization drive. However, the department is understood to have suggested further decentralization of its various bureaus. Fact is that Agriculture already has done a pretty good job of decentralizing Farm Credit, AAA, Farm Security, Soil Conservation, and the entire Bureau of Plant Industry soon will be moved to Beltsville. The department has 11,500 employes here now and 19 months ago there were 13,000.

More Police Favored, Inquiry Starts Friday

Funds for 98 additional Metropolitan policemen, including a "supersquad" of expert crime investigators, were voted last night by the District Appropriations Subcommittee in the Senate while the chairman of the House Police Investigation Committee called for more policewomen to protect young women coming to the city to work for the Government.

Senators Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, emerged at 7:30 p. m. from a session on the 1942 District appropriation bill with the announcement that the body decided to give the Police Department 44 men in addition to the increase of 54 provided in the bill as it passed the House.

Four of the new men, it was announced, are to be detectives at a salary of $3,600 a year—a wage equal to that now paid police captains. These men would be selected by the District Commissioners after specially conducted civil service examinations.

"It is our purpose," explained O'Mahoney, "to create an opportunity for a few especially intelligent, highly-qualified men to compete for these posts either from within or without the Police Department. In this way we hope to provide the beginning of a high-grade detective bureau."

40 to Walk Beat

Overton disclosed the subcommittee specified that 40 of the new men should be assigned to foot patrol duty.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, urged increasing the personnel of the Police Womens Bureau after his subcommittee voted in executive session to launch its investigation of the Police Department at 10 a. m. Friday.

One of his early witnesses, Schulte disclosed, will be Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, chief of the bureau. She is to be asked if she believes that with more policewomen the department will be better equipped to prevent such crimes as the sex murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, War Department employe. Congressional concern over police failure to solve the murder was responsible for the investigation.

May Invite Out-of-Town Expert

An out-of-town expert on police administration may be summoned to the Capital to make a survey of the Washington department for the guidance of the subcommittee, Schulte indicated, but emphasized that "undercover agents or stool pigeons" would not be used "in any way."

Schulte declared he expects the investigation soon will disclose enough about the operation of the department to justify asking the House Committee on Accounts for funds to conduct the inquiry. He said he will ask Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee to ask allocation of money from the House contingent fund.

Open to Reporters

As far as the general public is concerned, the investigation is to be closed, but the proceedings of the subcommittee are to be open and newspaper reporters will be admitted to all sessions, Schulte said. He explained that the decision to bar public attendance was taken because the House District Committee room has a capacity of only about 50 persons.

"We want to emphasize," Schulte said, "that any person who has a constructive criticism to make of the department will be given an opportunity to be heard at specified times."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan Police superintendent, will be the first witness before the investigating subcommittee. He will be asked to bring to the opening session a list of the entire personnel of his department with full data on salaries and duties of all subordinates from top-ranking inspectors to the newest rookie private.

He will be asked to submit also maps of all police precincts and to give the subcommittee a complete description of the assignment of his men. He will be asked to tell how many men he has working in the precincts at various hours of the day and night in scout cars, patrolling beats and in plain clothes.

Subordinates to Testify

As the investigation progresses, the subcommittee will call to the stand Brown's subordinates, starting from the top of the department. Each man will be asked to detail his duties, his experience, rate and method of his promotion and circumstances of his appointment.

Veteran newspaper reporters at headquarters will be called as witnesses early next week, Schulte said, as the subcommittee is anxious to know what they think of the department.

There will be no investigation of any specific crime and no probe of whatever charges may be made during the inquiry. Charges against members of the department, Schulte said, will be referred to the Police Trial Board.

The District Commissioners have been invited to attend all sessions to listen and ask questions, but not to participate.

Exhaustive Probe Promised

"This should afford them a great opportunity to find out what's wrong with the department," Schulte said. "We do hope to make this an exhaustive study and we certainly hope that the Commissioners will honor the recommendations we will make

"This subcommittee intends to place responsibility for any and all crime in the District. If it means demotion, we are going to insist on demotions. If promotions are necessary, we will recommend those, too.

"If inefficiency is what is wrong with the Police Department, this inquiry will develop that. If lack of men, or if morale of the department is low, equipment inadequate or discipline poor, we will learn about that."

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, who made the original demand for an investigation, declared that "if possible, we want to bring the efficiency of the Washington Police Department at least up to the level of the best in the country."

Representatives Maciora (Democrat), of Connecticut, and Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, also attended yesterday's preliminary session.

Sex-Slaying Inquiry

FBI Analysis Asked to Aid District Police in Strieff Case

Authorities investigating the brutal rape-murder of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department clerk, yesterday turned to the FBI for assistance in analyzing particles of sand found in her shoes.

Together with specimens taken from various locations where investigators believe the girl might have gone, the sand was submitted for laboratory comparison by Federal Bureau of Investigation chemists.

Specimens include particles of sand picked up near Rockville, Md., where a taxicab bearing a screaming woman was reported sighted, June 15, the day Miss Strieff disappeared, and from several places along the route to Duncan's delicatessen, where she is believed to have purchased a stick of butter.

Investigators said that if microscopic examination of the sand discloses any similarity they may be able to establish over which route the girl traveled to the grocery store, a fact they did not know last night.

Police took into custody a 30-year-old Government worker for questioning but released him when he presented an alibi. The man, said to hold a responsible position, knew Miss Strieff and at one time tried to make a date with her, police said. However, he said he had never been out with the girl.

Storekeeper, Woman Quizzed

Meanwhile, detectives continued to pursue various leads furnished by tipsters, all of which, according to Detective Capt. Ira E. Keck, brought no results.

Peter Duncan, proprietor of the delicatessen at 1810 Florida Avenue Northwest, who told police he sold Miss Strieff 12 cents worth of butter, Sunday, and Maggie Foutz, colored, who lives above the former's store and who said she saw the girl, both were questioned again yesterday.

Keck and Lieut. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, said both told conflicting stories about the girl's appearance and about the automobile she supposely got out of to enter the store and drove away in.

Exact discrepancies in the two stories were withheld by the investigators but after both witnesses had completed their statements, Keck indicated he was doubtful that the girl ever entered the store.

"Had both parties seen the girl," he declared, "their stories would be identical."

Duncan, according to officers, said he remembered Miss Strieff's face when she ran into his store "carrying a white umbrella." He said he could not recall whether or not she was wearing a blue transparent raincoat.

The Foutz woman repeated her story that she was sitting in a front window of her apartment Sunday about 2:30 p. m. when a young girl whom she identified as the murder victim stepped from an automobile and ran into the shop. The girl, she said, was carrying a blue coat. It had just begun to sprinkle.

Both Duncan and Mrs. Foutz said a black-bodied sedan was parked abreast in front of the store when Miss Strieff made her purchase.

Keck admitted last night that his men have run out every possible clew in the baffling case, and have made no progress.

"We are completely in the dark in this case," he asserted. "It is the most mysterious crime I have encountered in 30 years and I am open to suggestions from anybody."

3 Auto Thieves Are Captured After 80 M. P. H. Police Chase

A motorcycle policeman captured three long-sought auto thieves in an 80-mile-an-hour chase through Georgetown during the traffic rush hour late yesterday afternoon.

Only after the patrolman had fired two shots at the fleeing car did the thieves give up the race and abandon the auto in an attempt to escape in nearby alleys on foot.

Private Anthony J. Kaskeski, attached to the traffic unit, rounded up the car-snatchers with the aid of several citizens. The stolen auto, still in motion when abandoned, smashed into two other vehicles, damaging all three.

Chase Reaches 80 M. P. H.

The chase began at about 4 p. m. when Kaskeski, stationed at Thirtieth and O Streets Northwest, saw a 17-year-old colored youth and two companions, all wanted for a series of car thefts and housebreakings, driving by in an expensive, high-powered automobile.

The motorcycle policeman tried to overtake the trio, but each time the fugitive driver would swerve his car as if to run down the policeman, he reported.

The pursuit continued through Precincts Seven and Three, the speed reaching at times 80 miles an hour, passing two playgrounds, and forcing autoists to swerve and pedestrians to jump for safety.

On N Street, as the machines roared toward Rock Creek Park, Kaskeski fired twice at auto's tires, but missed. At this point only, Kaskeski reported to his superiors, did he feel it safe to fire without endangering passersby.

A few moments later, at P and Twenty-seventh Streets, the thieves leaped from the auto, which smashed into an oncoming car and caromed into a parked vehicle. Kaskeski captured the driver and ringleader of the gang; witnesses caught up with the other two, also 17-year-old youths with juvenile crime records.

The stolen car is the property of Mrs. John S. Keir, of the Wardman Park Hotel. She told police that she had left the auto to be washed. Only last week the thief had stolen an auto by a similar ruse, and although seen by police, escaped after a brief chase.

Music of Americas Pleases Large Washington Audience

Pan American Union presents the 103d concert of music of the Americas on Tuesday evening in the Aztec Garden. Program by the United States Army Band (Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, leader), assisted by Francisco Naya, Cuban tenor, and the Washington Choral Society (Louis A. Potter, director).

Swelled by the delegates in attendance at the second biennial convention of the American Guild of Organists, last evening's audience was one of the largest that has ever assembled in the Aztec Garden of the Pan American Union for a concert of music of the Americas. Turning propitious for the occasion, the atmosphere was balmy and serene with a suggestion of the tropics in the flashing flight of fireflies, and the two-hour program was thoroughly enjoyed by the guests from near and far.

BROWN

Capt. Darcy directed the United States Army Band in the major portion of the concert, beginning with a march, "Our Glorious Flag," by Castro Carazo of Costa Rica and closing with the "Zacatecas" march by G. Codina of Mexico. As is frequently the case, Brazil was represented by its first operatic composer, Antonio Carlos Gomes, with selections from "Salvador Rosa."

Among the compositions played by the band were "Angel Mujer" by A. M. Alvarado (Mexico), "Capricho Colombiano" by E. Murillo (Colombia), "La Tarde" by D. Santos (El Salvador), "San Lorenzo March" by C. A. Silva (Argentina), "America" by E. S. Williams (United States), "La Serenata" by M. de Adalid y Gamero (Honduras) and "American Girl" by R. A. Castillo (Guatemala).

The vocal soloist, Francisco Naya, disclosed a pleasantly resonant voice in two groups of songs by composers of his native land. His choice fell upon "Te quiero morena," by Ernesto Lecuona; "La Dolorosa," by A. V. Serrano; "Ampola," by J. M. Lacalle; "Mirame asi," by Sanchez de Fuentas, and "Quiereme mucho," by Gonzalo Roig.

Under the direction of Louis A. Potter, the Washington Choral Society made its first appearance of the evening in two choruses from Brazil: the nostalgic "Cancao de Saudade," by Heiter Villa-Lobos, and the lively "Toca Zumba," by Luciano Gallet. The organization closed the concert with an excellent performance of Randall Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom," which it introduced here recently at its spring concert.

This interesting work, which contains admirable part-writing for mixed voices as well as some striking harmonic effects, consists of six choruses with texts from Isaiah. Of these numbers the most dynamic is "Woe Unto Them," and there are fine dramatic moments in the others: "Say Ye to the Righteous," "Howl Ye," "The Paper Reeds by the Brooks," "For Ye Sall Go Out With Joy" and "Ye Shall Have a Song."

During the day the organist visitors took time away from business sessions for two periods of listening to music. The first was filled by a brilliant recital by the French virtuoso, Joseph Bonnet, in National City Christian Church. M. Bonnet paid a compliment to the country in which he is now residing by including in his program Seth Bingham's chorals on the tune, "Saint Flavian," and Leo Sowerby's "Carillon."

Late in the afternoon the talented young American organist, Catharine Crozier, played in Washington Cathedral a recital richly rewarding for those who desire wider acquaintance with the literature of the instrument. Her program, performed with breadth of style and musical intelligence, consisted of three compositions. Roger Ducasse's charming "Pastorale" served as calm bridge between Leo Sowerby's remarkable and powerful symphony in G major and one of Sigfrid Karg's symphonic chorales: "Ach, bleib mit deiner Gnade."

Aid Planned For WPA Cut Victims

Senate Unit Votes Direct Relief Fund; D. C. Supply Bill Being Speeded

Funds to provide direct relief for some District WPA workers who will be dropped from the pay roll July 1 were voted last night by the Senate District Appropriations Subcommittee.

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman, said it was decided to increase the amount for direct relief carried in the District appropriation bill as it passed the House from $950,000 to $1,050,000.

At the same time, Overton said, the subcommittee voted increases of $25,000 for old-age assistance and $50,000 for home care of children.

The subcommittee was unable to finish its "mark-up" of the bill last night and Senator Overton said the subcommittee would meet tomorrow morning to put the measure in shape for presentation to the Senate.

The unexpected delay cut heavily into the few days remaining in which Congress must complete action on the $52,500,000 bill to provide District officials with funds with which to start the new fiscal year July 1.

The Theater Guild Again Sticks Capital Chins Out

There Seem to Be Too Many National Theaters; Cass Daley 'Improves' Upon Victor Herbert; Oddments and Remainders of Amusement World

REMEMBER THE SANDSTORM IN A SALTCELLAR whipped up last season between the local drama desks and the Theater Guild, over the supposed booking of Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in "Twelfth Night" at the National Theater in this city, prior to New York? Well, the same "misunderstanding" could have happened again. The latest bulletin from the Theater Guild says this:

HELEN HAYES

"The Theater Guild announces that one of the early American Theater Society subscription productions of the 1941-42 season will be Maxwell Anderson's 'Candle in the Wind,' starring Helen Hayes. The play, which will open at the National Theater October 6, will be presented jointly by the Theater Guild and the Playwrights Company. 'Candle in the Wind' is a modern play in prose, dealing with the relation of this country to the European situation."

Then comes the stinger:

"The Anderson drama will be seen in Boston for two weeks, beginning September 15, and in Baltimore on September 29."

So it must be the National Theater in New York they are talking about, with Washington once again left on the outside looking in, until "Candle in the Wind" is blown out on Broadway. It would be nice if the Guild would call its shots a little more definitely—unless Manager Edmund Plohn would prefer to change the name of his citadel of the drama on E Street.

Some thoughtful benefactor—probably her agent-manager-publicity man—has taken the trouble to mail this desk a voluminous clipping from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of June 17, celebrating the personal triumph of Cass Daley in Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts," at the St. Louis Municipal Opera. Somehow, we couldn't reconcile Miss Daley's rowdy clowning with the Herbert score until we had read far enough to discover that she registered her hit with her own interpolated numbers—"Lament of a Laundry Girl," "The Last Time I'll Fall in Love" and that nonsensical symposium of double-talk, "The Hut-Zut Song." That's different. When, as and if Al Jolson brings his resuscitated "Hold Onto Your Hats" to town next season, it will be Cass who will be leaping about in the original Martha Raye role.

The "Big Tops" Are Doing All Right

When we ran into Barrister Melvin D. Hildreth, walking encyclopedia of the tent shows, the other twilight, he confided that all the circuses—and there are fewer of them out than usual—are mopping up this summer. Even the motor units that are traveling the highways instead of the rails. The only trouble the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey outfit has had has been a labor shortage occasioned by the defense program. Even so, capacity crowds have sat an hour or two without complaint, waiting for delayed matinees to go on. Not that it matters, since it already has been here and gone.

So, for the first time since "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Columbia is taking another whirl at the Capital's official life. "Adventure in Washington," opening Friday at the Earle, takes up the matter of the Senate page boys—with what result remains to be seen. In passing, those neat young gentlemen in navy blue, whom you may have noticed in the National Theater last Saturday afternoon, were those same Senate page boys, who were guests of the Walt Disney management to view "Fantasia."

Come and Bring the Kiddies

Taking tempus by the fetlock, or something, the Children's Theater of New York, presided over by Clare Tree Major, announces that its 1941-42 season at the National Theater will be as follows: "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," October 18; "Little Women," November 15; "Penrod," December 27; "The Sleeping Beauty," January 31; "Toby Tyler, or Ten Weeks With the Circus," March 17, and "Poor Little Rich Girl," April 4. Season subscriptions are now being booked at the Children's Theater office, 1734 F Street Northwest. The office will be closed during July and August, reopening on September 2.

Bouquet for Betty

Hollywood, Calif., June 24.—It's been said Zanuck was a builder-up of male stars, but he didn't know what to do with women. He certainly found out quickly in the case of Betty Grable. In "Moon Over Miami" she does much more than all right for her boss.

BETTY GRABLE

That girl not only dances but she troupes, and you've got to step lively with Charlotte Greenwood, Jack Haley, Bob Cummings and Don Ameche. Cobina Wright, jr., has poise and great beauty, and deserves a better part than she got in this one. And the settings and color were superlative. It's interesting to see what different people do in the same parts. Some time ago Loretta Young, David Niven and Joel McCrea played these roles. But this is so much more entertaining.

I love Clare Luce's description of Orson Welles: "His enemies say he's a genius, but his friends still refuse to admit it." . . . If you're thinking of feeding the genius, find out if he's on a diet first. The J. P. McEvoys laid in a supply of filet mignon and trimmings when they invited Orson for lunch, but he arrived carrying a paper bag containing four bananas and a bottle of skimmed milk, and said, "Here's me lunch—brought it with me." It's natural Anna May Wong should be chairman of Aid to China in Santa Monica. Their quota for the little town is $5,000, and they'll probably raise it in one night when they put on that mammoth show at the Santa Monica High School. They'll have a fashion show, concert, George Murphy, Rudy Vallee. Roland Young will stooge for Chester Morris' magic act; Gloria Jean, Rex Evans will accompany Odette Myrtil. Vincent Price of the beautiful voice will do "Burma Road," the Mersy Macs the "Hut Song," and with Olsen and Johnson of "Hellzapoppin," well Hellzapoppin' in Santa Monica June 27.

LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 24.

FINANCE DEPT.: Vincent Sheean, who now is in London, had to stay in Lisbon for a few days, awaiting plane-passage to England. He went to the Estoril Casino there and spent some hours at the gambling tables . . . Sheean, who once obtained a 50,000-franc loan from Winston Churchill at a baccarat table in Monte Carlo, began to win on this, his last night in Lisbon. His newspaper friends urged him to quit when he was ahead, but Sheean became reckless and kept increasing the stakes. He refused to quit even when his winnings went over $4,000. And so his colleagues knocked him out, took the money from him and then brought him to his hotel room . . . In the morning when he recovered they returned the money to him.

MUSIC DEPT.: Elisabeth Hawes, the fashion designer, lives in a private house in midtown, next to the house occupied by Artur Rubinstein, the pianist. Their garden adjoins, and for many weeks Miss Hawes and her husband, Joe Losey, have been waiting to overhear a private performance by the pianist . . . A few days ago Miss Hawes had some dinner guests and took them into the garden. Jascha Heifetz was a dinner guest at Rubinstein's, and as the Hawes party was prepared for an unusual treat—a private concert by two famous classic musicians . . . Heifetz plotted up his Strad, while Rubinstein seated himself at the piano. And into the garden where Miss Hawes' guests waited in awesome silence for the music of one by great masters came the Heifetz-Rubinstein strains of that remarkable melody—"Kitten on the Keys."

SOCIAL NOTES: When George Backer, the newspaper man, arrived in London, Quentin Reynolds decided to give him a dinner-party and have him meet the British and American Correspondents. Such a large dinner, however, would be too expensive for Reynolds, who therefore went to Ambassador Tony Biddle and suggested, "I think Backer should meet the newspaper people here." . . . "I'll be glad to give the party," Biddle offered—and Reynolds told him: "Oh, no—not by yourself. We'll each pay half." And Biddle agreed . . . Reynolds then went to W. Averell Harriman and suggested: "I think Backer should meet the newspaper people here" . . . "George is a friend of mine, and I'll be glad to give the party," Harriman offered—and Reynolds said: "Oh, no. Not alone. We'll each pay half."

PHOTO DEPT.: In Fefe's Monte Carlo Burgess Meredith and Olivia de Havilland were seated next to John Gunther . . . the cafe lights were dimmed and they watched John Buckmaster's bird routine—which features three strip-teasers working on the stage in back of him . . . "Somehow," whispered Meredith, in this red-draped room full of socialites who were viewing a trio of disrobing ladies, "this gives me the feeling that the French Revolution began on a night like this" . . . "Yes," agreed Gunther, staring at the three sets of limbs onstage. "Let 'em eat cheese cake."

FASHIONS DEPT.: The knitted underwear division of the HGWU sent its representatives to Washington to obtain a minimum-wage increase to 40 cents an hour . . . The 24-man committee which decided this question was composed of 8 labor men, 8 employers and 8 impartial economists . . . The union-agent displayed some of the finished products on which the members work—and one exhibit was a set of ladies' panties, complete with pocket . . . "What's the pocket for?" asked one of the economists—a university professor . . . "For change," he was told . . . "I'll vote for the increase," said the professor, "if I can get one of those with the pocket for my wife" . . . He was presented with the pair of panties. The increase was voted.

RADIO DEPT.: Johannes Steel, the radio commentator, went to London for a series of broadcasts. When he left he wasn't sure that he could return to New York in time for his next scheduled broadcast. And so he made a recording of his 15-minute talk, to be broadcast from London the day after he left . . . The recorded broadcast was delayed in London for 24 hours. By that time Steel already was here. And so he sat in his apartment in Manhattan—and listened to himself broadcasting from London.

BOOK DEPT.: Yesterday, Random House received the manuscript of Reynolds' new book, "Don't Think It Hasn't Been Fun." Quentin had sent it by Clipper—and the airmail postage was $17 . . . Bennett Cerf, the publisher, immediately cabled Reynolds: "We're not publishing the book until next spring. So what was your hurry, and why waste $17 postage?" . . . That cable cost $19.

EXCHANGE DEPT.: The Mexican government sent 2,000 cactus plants—a trainload—to be placed around the sunken gardens at Rockefeller Center. When the train crossed the border into this country an inspector examined the cacti, asked what their destination was and learned: "They're for the Rockefellers" . . . "By way of exchange?" said the inspector. "Mexico sits on the Rockefeller oil-wells . . . and the Rockefellers sit on this cactus?"

'Young April' a Happy Comedy For Late June at Cross Roads

By Richard L. Coe

Whoever has been picking the plays for the Cross Roads Theater this season has been, certainly, in the happiest of moods. First it was a comedy about country life, "George Washington Slept Here." And last night, in "Young April," its second production of the season, the Virginia group contemplated young love, than which, as any one but a schoolboy knows, there is nothing pleasanter to contemplate. And on this frail wreck it has had the effect of a solemn vow to look up a good rejuvenator—but quick!

In other words, Aurania Rouverol's slight comedy is neatly adapted to a carefree summer night in the country where a bear is a quaint beast and not part of an international trapeze act. The Cross Roaders play it for what it is, too, managing to be happy, normal folk, not amateur-actors-out-to-show-the-world. It's not the sort of thing you'd call brilliant during the height of E Street's season, but you'll find the play and particularly its players happy company this mid-June.

By "particularly" the company is meant exactly that. Since it's a comedy about young people, the Virginia barn has none of the casting trouble that would beset most professional companies. Their cast is likable and quite equal to the situations Miss Rouverol has plotted for them.

By Author of Original Hardy

Aurania Rouverol, you may have forgotten, is the lady who dreamed up the Hardy family in the first place. She wrote, in 1937, a play titled "A Family Affair," which came to the screen as "You're Only Young Once," which by golly, was the first of all those Hardy films. So it's small wonder that "Young April" concerns 18-year-olds and their amatory gropings, viewed from the winking eyes of the affectionate eldster.

George, 18, who "hasn't really been in love since 17," has come up to his family, a fatherly professor, a shrewd mother and a younger sister, similarly afflicted. George has a crush on Diane, who seems to be playing the field. To us discerning oldsters Sister Terry carries the torch for "beeftruster" Brian, though in her anxiety to catch the fleeing cherub (Cupid, you idiot!), she manages to light it up in the face of several far less worthy chaps. The difficulty of having parents to worry about in the midst of such cataclysmic matters weighs down our youthful shoulders still more, but do you need to be told how the curtain falls?

As we've said, the casting is first rate, with Gordon Gray drawing one of his nicely detailed characterizations as George. Gray was eminently successful last season as Henry Aldrich in "What a Life," a similar role, but it isn't stretching it to say that Gray does make him an older brother to the put-upon Henry. What you'll relish about Gray is the flair for fullness of detail he brings to George—without spreading it on too thick, either.

Youthful Cast Scores

Phyllis Warner, who was opposite Gray in the earlier play, is his sister in this, a charming youngster whose string of admirers is utterly understandable. Of these, you'll be particularly taken with a straightforward chap who has the sympathetic role of the "beeftruster," Jack Dees. His is a nicely natural style. Robert Kirby has the sad duty to be a mama's boy and so acceptable is his work, you'll cheer when Terry finally sees the light. Helen Todd is the knowing mother and Irma Gordon has some swell moments as the annoying mother.

And what a beauty is Grace Pearson as the unattainable Diane. She's really a love; she is, and it will be interesting to see how she manages other roles this summer. Buel Patch, Lynn Dall, Mary Shafer, Kitty Roberts, Bill Croarkin, Francis X. Nolen, Robert Nash, Wilhelmina Van Slyke, Madeleine Raven, Robert Boudinot, Joseph P. Kelley and Norman Bliss complete the company.

Howard F. Wentworth's direction has one eye on the essential simplicity of it all, the other on the pacing, which will take up what few dropped cues remain after another performance. Ah, happy day, young love!

Red Planes Bomb Boat, Finns Charge

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, June 24.—Russian planes again have violated Finnish territory and have bombed a Finnish motorboat in the Turku Archipelago, it was officially announced tonight.

A communique said the captain of the boat was wounded by a bomb fragment when the vessel was attacked off Utoe.

The communique said the latest violations of the Finnish territory occurred Monday.

Early in the morning, between 1:20 a. m. and 4:45, numerous Soviet scout planes flew deep into Finland high over Kuhmo and and Tolke.

Later two fighters came east of Hango and then flew toward the sea.

Sweden Rushes Defenses

Meanwhile, Gen. Ernst Linder, who led the Swedish volunteer corps in the Finnish-Russian War of 1939-40, arrived today in Helsinki to study the new threat to Balkan peace, and was quoted by the state information bureau as saying Sweden's defenses were rapidly progressing.

Apparently determined to cling to neutrality unless war is thrust upon her, Finland passed the third day of the German-Russian war in watchful waiting but continued defense preparation.

(A Rome radio declaration that Finnish soldiers definitely are fighting beside the Germans was heard in New York by NBC.)

Fighting Near Finland

War had come close to Finland, however, for today Helsinki and other coastal towns heard explosions in the direction of Estonia, across the Baltic, and aerial lookouts reported smoke rising in that direction.

(Helsinki observers atop high buildings saw what they described as a "sea of flame" of Estonia's capital, Tallinn, Reuters, British news agency, said in a Stockholm dispatch. Reuters said it was presumed the city was set afire by bombing.)

(A dispatch from Stockholm reported that a German officer announced over the Kaunas radio that German troops had entered the Lithuanian capital after sweeping across the Baltic nation with the help of Lithuanian insurgents. This report was carried by the United Press and was attributed to Lithuanian quarters.)

The newspaper Sanomat without citing the source of its report, said the Germans had captured Wilno (Vilna) in old Lithuania. No confirmation was available.

It was reliably reported that the Germans had also effectively bombed the Hango and Estonian Soviet airbases and gigantic fires were said to be raging in Leningrad as the result of German air raids.

(An authoritative source in London said Finland had broken off diplomatic relations with Poland.)

British Name New Minister To Washington

By the Associated Press

London, June 24.—Ronald Ian Campbell, until recently British Minister to Yugoslavia, was appointed tonight to be Minister in Washington, succeeding Sir Gerald Campbell.

Sir Gerald recently was named director general of all British information services in the United States with headquarters in New York.

Neville Montagu Butler was appointed head of the American department of the foreign office.

The new Minister to Washington will become a sir before leaving to take his job. His name appeared in the recent King's birthday honors list but the knighthood has not yet been bestowed by the King.

Other appointments announced were:

Sir Noel Hughes Havelock Charles as Ambassador to Brazil, succeeding Sir Geoffrey Cox.

Ralph Clarmont Skrine Stevenson, as Minister at Uruguay, succeeding E. Millington Drake.

John Balfour as Minister at the Lisbon Embassy.

Leslie Charles Hughes-Hallett as Minister-resident in Quito, Ecuador, succeeding G. H. Bullock.

In addition to the ambassadorship, Sir Noel Hughes Havelock Charles was made a knight commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

The new appointments were in accord with Eden's recently announced policy of choosing younger men.

Hughes-Hallett, 53, is the oldest of the appointees.

"Gowns by Adrian."

Three words to be reckoned with by fashion-minded women. But in this case it is 7-year-oldd Jackie Horner whose wardrobe bears the magic label.

Jackie plays Jeanette MacDonald as a child in "Smilin' Through," and she wears a blue taffeta dress, bonnet and French flannel coat, all designed by Adrian.

By the way, this is hte first time that Adrian has designed clothes for a youngster.

Explosion Burns Germantown Worker

Roy Plummer, 35, colored, Germantown, Md., laborer, suffered first degree burns yesterday when a steam roller exploded at Colesville Road and Hastings Drive, Silver Spring.

Employes of the Conte Construction Co. were putting gasoline into the roller when a few drops fell on the heated engine and caught fire. Silver Spring volunteer firemen administered first aid. Burns were confined to Plummer's hands and arms.

No Glamour Candidates Rise To Claim Fair Brenda's Crown

BRENDA FRAZIER
"How Will She Bow Out Monday?"

GLORIA VANDERBILT
She Doesn't Want the Glamour Crown

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

New York June 24.—Even the Republican party in a Presidential year is seldom as hard up for candidates as society—cafe, table d'hote and a la carte—in the matter of likely misses to succeed Miss Brenda Frazier as the No. 1 glamour girl.

Brenda will lose her glamour crown once and forever when she becomes Mrs. John S. ((Shipwreck) Kelly next Monday. But there are no fair hands lifted aloft to catch the crown.

The reasons are both military, and parental. The debutante ranks, from which Brenda's successor should spring, are badly muddled by the war situation.

To give or not to give costly shindigs in these trying times—that is the question agitating many debutantes and their parents.

Furthermore, even if our little cup cake and her parents decide to give a swell soiree, how will they ever get together a stag line when so many of the old contemptibles are now serving in United States camps and khaki?

Furthermore, the debutante ranks are pretty well divided into two classes: Those girls who could be glad to take the crown off Brenda's hands but haven't got what it takes. And those chickadees who have what it takes but who also have loving parents and assorted kith and kin who have sworn to skin their babes alive if they so much as make a pass at the crown.

Some of the debutantes, like Gloria Vanderbilt, are even frightened by the prospect themselves and duck every effort to glamourize them. Gloria is the logical successor of Brenda, but neither Gloria, her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, nor her mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, will have any of it.

The kleig lights under which Miss Frazier has lived for the past three years send conservative parents and their offspring into the megrims and the shakes. They want none of this merciless glare.

Brenda is a natural, a phenomenon. She was elected to her present position as the No. 1 glamour girl by popular acclamation. She was in the middle of the maelstrom before she knew what had happened to her. And then it was too late to do anything about it.

But she will bow out on Monday. For some reason or other, a glamour girl survives everything but matrimony. Undoubtedly, Brenda will go the way of her glamour girl predecessors: Eleanor Young Becon and Gloria Baker Topping. Marriage has translated them into "charming matrons who are popular members of the younger married set." Only this and nothing more.

U. S. Tightening Its Control Of Aliens Seeking to Enter

The United States last night clamped new and tighter controls on admission of aliens into this country.

To make sure that no subversive persons gain entry here, the State Department ordeed its consuls to transmit all applications for entry visas to the department for review before the visas may be granted.

This procedure is to be allowed, the order said, for all visa applications after July 1, 1941, to aliens seeking permanent residence here, temporary entry or transit to a foreign destination.

The only exceptions to the rule are for native-born citizens of countries of the Western Hemisphere and for seamen for whom a different procedure was provided.

The new regulations were the latest of a series of steps tightening immigration restrictions in view of the national defense emergency.

Last week the State Department announced that no would-be immigrants from Nazi-dominated Europe will be allowed to enter the United States if they leave close relatives behind them. This was designed to prevent Germany from forcing refugees here to act as Nazi agents through fear of some harm befalling relatives.

Interdepartmental committees here will examine the visa applications, the State Department said, leaving open the implication that investigations will be conducted by the Justice Department to determine the reliability of the applicants and of their sponsors.

The applications will be considered "with reference to the national defense program," said the announcement.

In the past, visas have been granted by the United States consuls abroad, without reference to Washington. The new regulations permit the consul to grant the final application, but subject to the findings of the board of review in Washington.

CCC Educational Advisers Confer At Maryland U.

More than 100 educational advisers of CCC camps in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia met yesterday at the University of Maryland in College Park for the seventh annual CCC educational conference of the Third Corps Area.

Col. S. V. Bingham, CCC officer in charge of the Third Corps Area, revealed that 90 per cent of enrollees in the Third Corps Area are taking courses in defense training, the largest number for any corps area.

Panel and group discussions featured the afternoon session. Some o the questions discussed were: How to make use of courses in safety, first aid, health, courtesy and citizenship in preparing the enrollee to once more enter civilian life; how to stimulate enrollees in improving their educational level, and how to get enrollees interested in and prepared for successful job hunting when they leave camp.

Fredericksburg Clubs to Sponsor Soldiers' Dance

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., June 24.—The first of a series of dances scheduled for soldiers using the A. P. Military Reservation in Caroline County will be held Thursday night in the Battery F Armory under the joint auspices of the Senior and Junior Woman's Clubs.

Approximately 100 girls from this city and the surrounding counties have been invited to attend. Chaperones appointed from the membership of both the sponsoring clubs will escort the girls both to and from the dance.

Approximately 300 soldiers from the reservation will be asked to attend. Officers will serve as a floor committee.

R. A. F. Again Blasts Calais And Boulogne

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), June 25.—R. A. F. bombers streaked out of a clear starlit sky above Dover Strait early today and blasted Calais and Boulogne again on the fourteenth night of Britain's accelerated air offensive.

Observers on the English side said it appeared to be one of the heaviest attacks on those French ports.

Residents of the southeast coast were awakened by the crash of bombs on the other side of the Channel. Flashes from the exploding bombs which were believed to be of the heaviest caliber cast a glare aloft along 20 miles of the French coastline.

Bursts of antiaircraft shells showed German ground defenses were throwing up a vigorous resistance but the assault went on virtually without a break.

A few German planes were reported over the east and southwest of England. Others were off the coast. No reports of any bombs or raiders were reported from northwest England or the north midlands.

Hun Losing Five to One

Meanwhile, Britain officially declared that the "Hun" has lost more than five fighters to every British pilot in the continuing grand-scale operations over France and the Channel.

The air ministry news service declared ten offensive forays in the eight days ended Monday cost the Nazis 112 planes and the British only 26 aircraft. At that, five British pilots were reported saved.

A sweep across the Channel at sunset last night netted the British nine more German fighters, while the British lost two, the air ministry reported.

"When the enemy tried offensive operations over this country last year his average loss of aircraft was more than three to our one," the service said.

"Over France during the last eight days not only have the positions of attacker and defender been reversed but the Hun has lost more than five fighters to every one of our pilots who has not returned."

Naval Bases Raided

Monday night far-ranging R. A. F. bombers raided the naval bases of Wilhelmshaven, Kiel and Emden and the factory city of Hannover.

Light Nazi raids were reported over East Anglia and the southeast coast.

A swarm of Nazi bombers attacked a large British convoy off a southeast port. The convoy's naval escort fired heavily and although the Nazi bombs rained into the water around the ships no vessel was hit or damaged, the British said.

Train Victim Dies In Charlottesville

Charlottesville, June 24 (AP).—Grimsley Peyton, 35-year-old Culpeper truck driver, died last night at the University Hospital of injuries received Sunday when he was struck by a train. He never regained consciousness.

Peyton was struck while walking on the tracks near the Southern Railway station at Culpeper. Born in Madison, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peyton.

Supplies Not Nazi Aim, Say Experts

By Claude A. Jagger
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, June 24.—International trade authorities and economists were inclined today to see some deeper significance than the immediate need for vital raw materials, in Hitler's thrust into Russia.

But they made one qualification. If Hitler expects a long war in the west, some thought, then he may have his eye on the oil fields of Baku, the wheat fields of the Ukraine.

What puzzled analysts here was how Germany could expect much in the way of immediately useful spoils, even if the Nazi legions were able to penetrate a great distance into Russia in short order.

Petroleum is the fuel of modern war. But Russia has had little for export. And, furthermore, international oil experts believe Germany, since enveloping Rumania, has not been short of gasoline to fuel her planes and tanks.

As a matter of fact, one petroleum authority said he had received an eyewitness account of oil leaving the Rumanian Black Sea port of Constanza for Russia within the last few months. He thought the Germans would not have been permitting oil to go from Rumania to Russia if Germany had felt urgent need of it.

Russian petroleum production is huge, however, it was reported at 212,909,000 barrels in 1940, about five times that of Rumania, but less than a sixth that of the United States. If Germany anticipated a long and much larger scale war, then Hitler might have his eye on the Russian fields.

Transportation System Poor

But even so, there are complications. Most of the Russian production is around Baku, on the Caspian Sea, more than a thousand miles overland from the Rumanian border. A pipe line runs through the mountains to Batum, at the eastern extremity of the Black Sea. But presumably it would be destroyed if hostilities penetrated to that area, to say nothing of the damage which the Russians might do to their oil fields and refineries before permitting them to fall into German hands.

If indeed it is the problem of supply that is driving the Nazi legions into Russia, the rich wheat fields of Ukraine might be a goal. This important agricultural area produces some 200,000,000 bushels of wheat annually, about a third as much as the United States. The crop is not harvested until August and September, and may now be too green to burn and destroy before the oncoming panzer divisions. But even if the land were occupied, it would seem to be a gargantuan task to expect within a comparatively few weeks to organize the harvest, see it through, and collect the grain.

Besides wheat and petroleum, Russia has also been an exporter of manganese, needed in steel production, and lumber. Perhaps the Germans could readily use more manganese. But the deposits are chiefly in the Caucasus, a long way from the Rumanian and German borders. The Germans are not in vital need of lumber.

A complicating factor, in any Hitler dream of immediately acquiring spoils, is the Russian transportation system. Trunk highways suitable for trucks are almost nonexistant. The railways have remained the country's transportation system, have been under terrific strain for years, and such as they are, would doubtless be put out of commission for some time by fighting.

Lower Standard of Living

This all assumes, of course, that the invasion of Russia will involve heavy and extensive fighting, and that there will be no quick capitulation. A collapse of the Russian armies, early surrender, and perhaps the setting up of a new Russian government friendly to Hitler, might open up a vast source of supply.

On the other hand, Germany could heavily raid the Russian supplies only by drastically lowering the already low standard of living in that country. The effort of the Russo-Finnish war last winter caused reported food shortages in Moscow. If Hitler were able to seize or if he caused the destruction of the Ukraine wheat harvest, a serious famine would threaten.

Nevertheless, international economic experts here were not very optimistic over the prospects of the Russian army's withstanding the German onslaught. While Russian industrial production, particularly in heavy materials, has vastly expanded in the past several years, the impression prevails that the quality is poor. Russia is supposed to have some 6,000 army tanks. How good are they? This must be proven.

While much of Russian industry, particularly steel, has been moved east of the Urals, the impression prevails that the industry there consists of certain huge plants, that it is not well integrated, and that disruption of the western industrial centers would place the Russian forces under a severe problem of supplies for a prolonged conflict.

OPM Revamps Defense Setup For Industry

The long-heralded reorganization of the Office of Production Management to a "vertical" industry-committee basis was announced yesterday by Defense Chiefs William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman.

The reorganization, the most drastic revamping of the agency's administrative setup since it was created in January, provides a complete shift of approach to industrial problems. These will now be undertaken directly by industry advisory committees and special "commodity sections," rather than through the OPM's three major divisions on production, priorities and purchases.

The change calls for committees comprised of representatives of the major defense industries, to be matched by OPM officials organized into an equal number of commodity sections. Thus an industry, or even an individual businessman, will not meet as formerly with one or all of the OPM divisions, but will take its problem directly to the commodity section via representatives on the industry advisory committee.

30 Sections Planned

About 30 industry committee and commodity sections are now contemplated, Knudsen said. He added that others would be formed as the need arose.

He explained that the functions of the directors of the production, priorities and purchases divisions would still remain where they are presently placed; that the industry committees would have only advisory functions and that the commodity sections would make recommendations to one or more of the three directors, depending on whether the problem related to production, priorities or purchases.

In addition, the three directors, John D. Biggers for production, E. R. Stettinius, jr., for priorities, and Donald M. Nelson for purchases, would be placed in charge of a group of commodity sections, in which their special problems were of paramount importance.

How Plan Will Work

Thus, it was announced, commodity sections for the steel, aluminum, magnesium, paper, pulp and chemical industries, where production is the major problem, will be under the charge of Biggers. In industries such as rubber, copper and zinc, where allocations are the major consideration, Stettinius will have charge. Nelson will head commodity sections on textiles, foods, drugs and clothing, where the problem is principally one of purchasing.

OPM labor division officials also will be represented on the commodity sections, as will be executives from other agencies concerned, such as the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and Office of Price Administration.

Members of the industry committees, Knudsen said, will be selected by OPM from nominations made by the industry.

The new setup is patterned in part on the industry section plan of the War Industries Board during World War I, it was admitted.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

That man Stalin has been carrying water on both shoulders so long he thinks buckets are epaulets.

Joe is a combination string saver and acrobat. He is walking a tightrope he made himself out of twine, burlap and bale wire.

Every time he come to a knot he twists and squirms like he was leading a conga line for a lot of people who didn't get there.

I know that he has been getting away with it as quiet as a milk snake in a 12-cow dairy.

But nevertheless I am building a guest room on the dog house for Stalin for I figure he is as overdue as the Cyclops.

Ex-Wife of Hitler's Brother Favors 'Skinning Adolf Alive'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

By International News Service

New York, June 24.—Mrs. Brigid Elizabeth Hitler, 49, walked into the British War Relief Society offices today and said:

"I'm the former wife of Adolf Hitler's brother, Alois. I want to do my bit for England. Hanging or shooting is too good for Adolf Hitler. They ought to skin him alive—slow torture—like every day."

The society welcomed her with open arms.

It was news to everybody that Mrs. Alois Hitler has been here two years although her plans in May, 1939, to come here were given wide announcement. With her when she came to America was her son, Patrick, who has felt the force of naziism because he didn't agree with his half-uncle's grandiose plans and brutal methods of carrying them out.

"Hess," said Mrs. Hitler, was my son's guardian and Patrick liked him. Says he is an idealist."

Patrick is now with the Canadian army and is occasionally in this country to give lectures.

Alois, who runs a tea room obtained for him by Adolf, deserted Brigid in England three years after their marriage, she said, and has since taken another wife.

Enhanced Living Standards Seen for U. S. After the War

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The United States, if it begins work now on postwar industrial demobilization plans, "can build a standard of living the like of which the world has never dreamed," Willima L. Batt, deputy director of production for OPM, predicted yesterday.

Batt urged that the country "tackle this problem of postwar demobilization of industry and man power with an energy comparable to that which we are now devoting to the opposite process."

The result, he said, would be "an industrial system that will have as its only limits the limits of available manpower for production."

The OPM official testified before a House Labor Subcommittee in hearings on a resolution, sponsored by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, for establishment of a "post-emergency economic advisory commission," to begin an immediate study of economic problems likely to confront this country at the end of the war.

Batt said that in the general anxiety over the dangers of a Nazi victory many Americans have overlooked the fact that the world of 1939 will not return, no matter who wins the war.

He ponited out that the defense program is increasing the self-sufficiency of the United States and reducing its dependence on purchases from abroad. At the same time, at the end of the war, the country will attempt to convert defense factories into producers of consumer goods for sale abroad, and the goods cannot be sold unless America is ready to buy in equal volume from foreign countries.

Among other postwar problems, he listed:

Where to find jobs for the men being trained in production of war materials.

Who is to own and operate the plants that the Government is now building or paying for.

What to do about a huge Federal debt and what to do about the vast gold holdings of the United States.

Batt suggested that a small group of "the ablest men in the country" should be "set off in a corner by themselves" to begin preparation at once of long-range plans for the postwar period. The alternative, he said, is an economic crisis more severe than that which followed the last war.

The Voorhis resolution would set up a 12-man commission for study of these problems: three Senators, three Representatives and six members appointed by the President.

The commission would be authorized to recommend legislation "for the full utilization of America's resources of men and machines in maintaining and improving the economic well-being of all the people."

Rickenbacker Set To Leave Hospital

Atlanta, June 24 (AP).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, tomorrow will leave Piedmont Hospital, Atlanta, where he has been recuperating from serious injuries suffered in the crash of one of his company's planes near here February 26, and fly to New York.

E. A. L. was sending a special plane to Atlanta to carry Rickenbacker, his wife and two boys to New York. Rickenbacker was able to walk with a cane. He intended to resume his duties as E. A. L. president gradually, spending only a few hours at his New York office daily at first.

Fords Make New Engine for Bombers

By Devon Francis.
Associated Press Aviation Editor.

Dearborn, Mich., June 24.—I am not one to go around peddling other people's wares, but here in Dearborn the Fords, Henry and Edsel, have done something which as like as not is going to make fellows who fly airplanes talk in their sleep.

Besides, I don't suppose what I say is going to matter much to the Ford industrial empire one way or another.

Just a year ago Ford engineers, rubbing their chins reflectively, showed me some pieces of a foreign-made engine. They had taken it apart methodically to see what made it work.

With the war in Europe and all, they had decided that it might be a good idea to see what could be done in designing an American high-performance aircraft engine.

Now, there are two kinds of airplane engines, air-cooled and liquid-cooled. The liquid-cooled kind uses some sort of fluid running inside a jacket, like those around automobile cylinders, and I have heard tell that some citizens have tried to quaff it with no great success.

Producing Both Kinds

At least that's the story undertakers tell.

Well, the air-cooled kind usually have their cylinders arranged star-like around a central crankshaft, which is where the power goes. That makes for what engineers call a big frontal area, and some of the parlor thought in the aircraft business insists that what you need for speed is a narrow, sleek engine.

Anyway, we are manufacturing both kinds in the United States for our new warplanes. The Allison engine people down in Indianapolis have been the most successful up to now in designing the liquid-cooled kind with the cylinders one in back of another, as in the family car.

The air-cooled types in production are now turning out 2,000 horsepower each, mostly for the big bombers, but the liquid-coolers have had a hard time catching up. The latest word from Indianapolis is that they have boosted the power output to 1,325.

The reason everybody is so interested in bigger engines is that air fighting and bombing operations are going up, maybe beyond 40,000 feet, and you need more power to get there.

As I say, I watched these Ford engineers rubbing their chins last summer. They had an idea.

I have just seen what they were up to. The complete engine is only in the "mock-up" stage, as wooden as Charlie McCarthy's head, but they have a two-cylinder version which makes more noise than a boiler factory.

To Omit Carburetor

The engineers say they are squeezing 150 horsepower out of each one of those cylinders, which is just twice as much as you normally get out of all the cylinders of the ordinary automobile combined.

The complete engine will have 12 cylinders.

More than that, the Ford people are determined on a design which, they say, is expected to deliver an honest 1,500 horsepower up to an altitude of 32,000 feet, or more than 6 miles. That is just unheard of in the flying business.

They are going to do it with a supercharger. A supercharger is a thing which takes thin air and compresses it into thick air and then feeds it into the cylinders. When you get up above 30,000 feet the air is as thin as a husband's excuse when he drags in from a poker game at 3 a. m.

More than that, the Ford people are going to do away entirely with a carburetor, which mixes the gasoline vapor and air, and shoot the fuel right into the cylinders. The Germans have been doing that for several years. The process is called fuel-injection. The Messerschmitt fighters have that type of engine.

If the Ford engineers succeed in producing a 1,500-horsepower liquid-cooled engine at the weight they specify, they will have a mechanical oddity on their hands—one which turns out more than a horsepower a pound.

The Ford people have another little item of manufacture on the new engine they want to prove out. It is casting the two banks of cylinders, arranged in a "V," all at one time or en bloc, as the engineers say. Doubters are saying it can't be done on airplane engines, that the cylinders must be manufactured separately and then be screwed on the crankcase.

Ford says it can be. And Ford didn't build up $750,000,000 in assets on bad guesses.

Fight on Seaway Proposal Opened By Its Opponents

By the Associated Press

Opponents of the St. Lawrence seaways opened their fight against the $385,000,000 navigation and power development yesterday with a warning to Congress that Canada may not be able to fulfill its obligations under the construction agreement.

Tom J. McGrath, Cleveland attorney, told the House Rivers and Harbors Committee that "everything we know about the matter points to the fact that Canada may be either unwilling or unable to commence building the waterway now."

The witness, executive secretary of the National St. Lawrence Project Conference, said he represented an organization of "practical businessmen" who were "convinced that the development of the St. Lawrence waterway and power project is not necessary or even desirable from the standpoint of national defense."

Although previous witnesses had testified that the seaway, "with good luck," might be completed by 1943, McGrath said that under the terms of the agreement Canada was not required to complete its part of the project until 1949.

With Shirley Povich

The American League All-Star team will have to struggle along without the services of Chicago's No. One pitcher, Teddy Lyons, said Mr. James Dykes yesterday. Vastly more important to Dykes than the All-Star game against the National League on July 8, is the American League pennant race, and he says so frankly.

POVICH

The White Sox manager anticipates that his man Lyons, despite his 40 years, will be one of the All-Star team selectees. The venerable Lyons has won six of nine decisions this year and with All-Star game pitchers limited to a three-inning stint, he is a natural choice.

"But," says Mr. Dykes, "I have an important game coming up with Cleveland on Sunday, July 6, and Lyons is scheduled to pitch. I'm not going to change those plans for the All-Star game. I have a job to do as manager of the White Sox, and that comes first. The All-Star game is a great idea and I'm for it, but not to the extent where I am going to take a chance on losing a single ball game in the pennant race."

The fact is that the All-Star game is a pain the neck to managers of both leagues. They don't mind lending their shortstops or outfielders or other players to the affair for a day, but they are very upset about loaning their pitchers. It dislocates their pitching programs and they are very finicky about it. When they do permit their pitchers to work in the game, it is an extreme form of martyrdom, or something.

The club that always gets a bad break out of the All-Star game is the Cleveland Indians. Because they own Bob Feller, the Indians are always represented. They can't duck the issue, because it would be a hollow affair without Feller pitching for the American League. It would be no All-Star team and there is always the unspoken promise to the fans who will see the incomparable Feller pitch in the game. The Indians get a bum rap there, because it can cost Feller one of his regular pitching turns.

Managers don't like the setup at all, but only Dykes has the frankness to speak out against it. When he said Lyons would not pitch in the All-Star game he was merely giving warning that other managers lack the courage to give. They say nothing, but with no intention of resting their pitching stars for the game, they render them unavailable by pitching them immediately preceding the game and then pointing out that they have not had sufficient rest.

A few years back, the National League managers were the greatest offenders in that respect. They beat the American League managers to the idea that the All-Star game was not too important. In 1935 at Cleveland, when the National League had a chance to win with Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean in the box, Manager Frankie Frisch discovered that neither was available, having pitched two days before. In desperation, the National League had to start Bill Walker, a second-flight Cardinal southpaw, as its first pitcher of the All-Star game.

Rather steadily the All-Star game has lost some of its appeal. At the outset, it was a rousing novelty with such as Babe Ruth lending himself to the first performance, in 1933. The players, themselves, were the first to lose interest. They became jaded about it all, and began to regard it as an imposition. For those who were selected, it means no three-day vacation, inasmuch as open dates preceded and followed the All-Star game. The players who are very much in favor of the All-Star game are the ones who aren't chosen. For them it means three days of fishing or otherwise delightful idleness and escape from the grind.

The brass hats of the two big leagues have done little to sustain the interest in the game, either. They have seemingly forgotten the original theme of the All-Star game. It began as the people's game. Teams were chosen by popular vote and evoked millions of ballots from the Nation's fans. That sort of put them next to the ball game. They were watching their own teams play and the balloting made grandstand managers of millions, which was a healthy state of affairs for baseball.

But for some reason which was not quite bright, the folks who run the two leagues decided that the fans should not be permitted to select the teams. They detailed the selections to the 16 managers of the two leagues. The public got a fine shoving around on what was supposed to be its ball game. Baseball put the fans right back in the stands just when they were having a lot of fun running the works.

Ring Body Clears Path For Jacobs

District Commission Authorizes Group To Allow Nonresident Promoters in D. C.

By Al Hailey

The District Boxing Commission—long a citadel from which Mike Jacobs' New York fight dynasty was assailed daily—yesterday capitulated and made ready to give Jacobs a free hand in the Capital.

In a surprise meeting with District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and W. B. Kutz, the boxing body was authorized to amend its rules so that it can extend licenses to nonresident promoters at its own discretion.

The meeting was such a surprise, in fact, that Chairman Claude W. Owen had no knowledge of it until a few minutes before he was called to the District Building. Owen and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., junior member of the boxing body and instigator of the amendment, were quick to admit, however, that the change was asked in order to induce Jacobs to continue his "big-time" boxing promotions here.

Wanted Authority

Jacobs only last Wednesday informed The Post that he was through with boxing ventures in the Capital unless he was given full authority to proceed as his own promoter.

The 8-year-old boxing code at present specifies that no one shall promote boxing exhibitions in the District who cannot prove three years' residence.

In clearing the way for Jacobs to return to the Capital, the Boxing Commission's action further bolstered the chances of passage of its pending salary bill.

The bill, being drawn up by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, among other things asks for salaries of $3,000 per year for two of the ring body's three members. Without Jacobs' big money productions—from which the commission takes a 10 per cent cut—the salary bill would be worthless, as local boxing under Promoter Joe Turner and others, has operated for the past five years on a losing basis.

Underlying purpose of the new amendment will be to make possible the return Joe Louis-Buddy Baer championship fight—tentatively promised the Capital by Jacobs.

Owen said that he was not at all favorable", toward bringing in outside promoters but that if the District is going to have first-class boxing shows it appears to be the only thing to do.

"The public has shown it wants top-flight shows and if we don't provide the means of furnishing them through Jacobs it looks as though boxing will dry up here," Owen said.

Morgan echoed the same sentiments and said that the commission was prepared to withstand criticism for its action in relation to its coming on the heels of the proposed salary bill.

"If that bill doesn't stand on its own feet, it won't pass, that's all," he said.

District Commissioners Hazen and Kutz lent their full approval to the amendment permitting outside promoters.

The subject of "importing" referees to officiate at any ftuture "big time" contests was not discussed, but Morgan reiterated that he still will ask for outside officials when the occasion warrants them.

Mike Joseph Wins Midget Auto Feature Before 8,000 Fans

8,000 See Joseph Win Midget Debut

By Jack Munhall

Like a swarm of locusts, the angry, spitting midget autos last night settled for the first time on the new West Lanham, Md., Speedway, and 8,000 inaugural fans watched Mike Joseph, a Philadelphia veteran, average better than 66 miles an hour to win the feature.

Joseph's victory in the 30-lap featured event of the eight-race dedicatory card came as a climax to an exciting evening for the spectators, who earlier had witnessed a spectacular thrill that sent one driver to the hospital.

Earl Johns, 39-year-old Camden, N. J., driver, cracked up on a fifth-lap turn in the second semifinal race and barely escaped serious injuries when pinned beneath his vehicle for what seemed like several minutes before rescued by track attendants. He was removed to Sibley Hospital and treated for a fractured shoulder and severe brush burns. Hospital attaches declared he was not seriously injured.

Len Duncan Second

Second to Joseph in the 7½-mile feature, which he won in 6 minutes 47.18 seconds, was Len Duncan, diminutive Brooklyn throttle pusher, and third was Rex Records.

Joseph's victory was worth $225. Second money was $175, and third place returned $105. In fourth place, Andy DeVercelly, Cedarhurst, Long Island, received $90.

Joseph, who had earned the pole position in the feature by virtue of winning the second qualifying heat and the first semifinal, led from start to finish in the big event. Likewise his three chief rivals held their finishing positions the entire route as they sped like one car around the quarter-mile oval, lapping the field several times.

Speed at Close Quarters

No more than 10 feet separated any of the four cars at any time, but never did Joseph relinquish his lead as he bore down on the accelerator whenever his advantage was threatened.

On the whole, Edward L. Mahoney, president of the $46,000 speedway, which is built on his property, and his associates handled the first program smoothly. One disconcerting note in the harmony of the handling, however, was the traffic jam that developed before and after the races.

Defense Highway, from the Peace Cross to the speedway which is a route of about 4 miles, was virtually impassable as late as 9 p. m., one-half hour past the scheduled time of the opening race. And as a result of the difficulty in reaching the

Washington Rally in 7th Turns Tide

Case, Bloodworth, Early Shine at Bat; Dutch Allows 8 Hits, Tops Thornton Lee

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

The Nats did a rare piece of business yesterday. They beat Thornton Lee, of the White Sox. In his time Lee has exerted a fine old hex over the Washington athletes, but the Nats caught up with him and whacked him smartly. The score was 6 to 3.

Another reason the Nats beat Lee was Dutch Leonard. Big Leonard outpitched the White Sox left-hander by an easily-discernible margin. He held the Chicagoans to eight hits, and save for two misplays of his own would have permitted only a lonesome White Sox run.

And so the Nats moved out of the cellar, avoiding the falling bodies of the St. Louis Browns who were dumped into the league basement by the Yankees in a 9-1 game up in the Bronx.

Specifically, it was the nether end of the Washington batting order which caught up with Lee yesterday. George Case, Jimmy Bloodworth and Jake Early who do not bat sixth, seventh and eighth respectively because they are solid clouters, rapped out the hits that figured in the last five Washington runs.

Hexer Lee Bears Down

The Nats staked Leonard to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but at the end of the sixth they were trailing, 3-2, what with Hexer Lee pitching three-hit, shutout ball over a five-inning stretch. And then, all of a sudden, in the seventh, the lower end of the Washington batting order started batting the ball, and the White Sox infield started booting it.

Washington came up with three runs in that seventh inning to wipe out Chicago's 3-2 lead. George Case started proceedings by lashing a two-bagger past Third Baseman Kennedy. Manager Bucky Harris disdained a sacrifice by Bloodworth with none out and ordered him to hit. Bloodworth did. He whistled a three-bagger over Center Fielder Kreevich's head, and Case jogged home with the tying run.

Jake Early put the Nats in front. He busted a single to right field and scored Bloodworth. Leonard sacrificed Early to second and Archie popped out, but the White Sox infield stirred up three errors to give

3 New Yorkers Homer While DiMaggio Hits Single to Run Safety String to 36 Games

By the Associated Press

New York, June 24.—The New York Yankees' record home run string and Joe DiMaggio's personal hitting streak were extended another notch today as the bombers blasted out a 9-to-1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns in the opener of a three-game series.

DiMaggio collected a single in the five-run eighth inning to make this the thirty-sixth game in which he has hit safely. The major league record is 41, set by George Sisler, of the Browns, in 1922.

Red Rolfe, Tom Henrich and Joe Gordon hit homers, each with one on base, to make 19 consecutive games in which the Yanks have knocked out round-trip blows. The New York sluggers passed Detroit's old record of 17 games on Sunday.

Behind this offensive screen Lefty Gomez pitched steady five-hit ball for his fifth victory of the campaign and had a shutout until the ninth when he gave two walks and a single.

Bosox Blast Tribe Hurlers And Win, 13-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 24.—The Red Sox pulled to within three games of first place today by slaughtering three of the pace-setting Cleveland Indians' pitchers for 18 hits, including three homers, to win a 13-2 triumph before an 8,000 crowd that included Babe Ruth.

The former Sultan of Swat was viewing his second game of the season and he still must be rated as a nemesis for the Indians, for he saw their great Bob Feller beaten by the Yankees about a week ago.

Ruth also saw plenty of his favorite style of hitting, for the Red Sox chased Mel Harder in the third inning after Dom DiMaggio homered into the left-field screen and, with the bases loaded, Jim Tabor clinched the game by driving another ball into that distant barrier. Bobby Doerr hit for the circuit against Ken Jungels in the eighth, when the Sockers completed their at-bats with a four-run rally.

Sharing honors with the Red Sox sluggers was Heber (Dick) Newsome, the surprising rookie right-hander up from San Diego. He kept ten Cleveland hits well scattered while gaining his seventh win of the season and his fifth in a row.

The Indians' first run was unearned, for Roy Weatherly managed to get to second base on a dinky infield hit when Manager Joe Cronin made a high throw and, after two were out, scored on Rollie Hemsley's single in the second. In the eighth Jeff Heath beat out a bunt and, again with two out, counted after Ray Mack hit safely.

The one-sided triumph was the first the Sockers have gained over the Indians at Fenway this season. The Sockers lost five straight before

3 Jockeys Hurt In Big Pile-Up At Fairgrounds

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 24.—Three jockeys were injured today in the running of the third race at the Fairgrounds track when the two-year-old Miss Rhythmic fell and the riders were piled up under the field of a dozen horses.

Jockey N. Leroy Pierson, 24, of Hemet, Calif., was taken to the hospital with head injuries, while jockeys George Wallace, 19, of Detroit, and Ovie Scurlock, 22, of Evanston, Ill., received medical treatment at the track. The extent of Pierson's injuries was not determined immediately.

Pierson's mount, Bob Dodge, tripped over Miss Rhythmic, ridden by Scurlock, and then Wallace's horse, Cloud Duster, went down. The five furlong event was won by E. H. Beezley's Ball and Chain.

2 Records Set as 64 Gain in College Play

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, June 24.—Two ne wrecords went into the books today as 64 players battled their way into the match play rounds of the forty-fourth National Intercollegiate Golf Championship over Ohio State University's course.

Earl Stewart, Louisiana State's red-haired, freckled 19-year-old junior, copped the medal with a par-shattering 142, erasing the qualifying record of 143 set a year ago by John Burke, of Georgetown.

Stanford's stellar four-man squad scored 580 to rip 21 strokes off the record it set in 1938 at Louisville and take the team championship by a 19-stroke margin over Louisiana State.

A stroke back of Stewart in the race for the medal, with 143, was Charles Finger, of Stanford, while five stars matched par 144 for the 36-hole route. They were A. C. Williams, of Yale; Dale Morey, of Louisiana State; Ray Brownell, of Stanford; Bob Brownell, Duke's Southern Intercollegiate champ; and Cary Middlecoff, of "Ole Miss."

So low was the scoring that 156 failed to get into the match play, 14 players with 155 being compelled to play off for the last 11 places.

Brownell, of Stanford, came through with the day's best round, carding a 69 to get back even with par after an opening 75. Stewart, who opened yesterday with a record-breaking 68 to take the lead by two strokes, slipped to 74 today, matching par on 16 holes and getting bogies on 10 and 18. He "schambled" for the eighteenth hole 5 that gave him the medal, for his tee shot was in a deep woods, his second in a trap, and his third still short of the green. His chip, however, was only 6 inches from the cup.

Back of Stanford and Louisiana State, scores in the team scrap were:

Duke, 603; Illinois, 606; Ohio State, 609; Texas, 611; Northwestern and Michigan State, 615; Notre Dame, 616; Minnesota, 618; Wisconsin and Princeton, 621; Virginia, 622; Georgetown, 623; Michigan, 626; Dartmouth, 630; North Carolina, 645; Syracuse, 650, and Beloit, 680.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled Wednesday and Thurs-

Curt Davis Beats Pirates For Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 24.—With Curt Davis hurling five-hit ball, the Brooklyn Dodgers staged a batting fest at the expense of an assortment of four Pittsburgh pitchers today to take their second straight victory over the Bucs, 8 to 0. Dolf Camilli's first inning triple with two mates on base clinched the game. He and Ducky Medwick each drove in three runs.

Tigers Break Tie in Ninth, Beat A's, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 24.—Singles by Rudy York and Bruce Campbell, followed by Pinky Higgins' long fly that scored York, gave Detroit a run in the ninth inning tonight and a 2-to-1 victory over the Athletics. The A's had tied the score in the eighth on Wally Moses' single and a three-bagger by Bob Johnson.

Bobby Bensinger Wins City Singles, Doubles Net Titles

Defeats Hall, Then Teams With Victim

Is Only Champion To Repeat in Junior Title Play; Miss Fiske Upsets Miss Parsons

Red-haired, freckle-faced little Bobby Bensinger was the only champion to repeat yesterday in the finals of girls, boys and junior competition in the city of Washington tennis championships.

Once again proving himself a great prospect, with his small stature alone likely to impede his improvement, the 17-year-old junior polished off Bob Hall, the lanky dark horse, 6—0, 6—1, 6—1. Bensinger then teamed with the 6-foot 2-inch Hall to take the doubles crown over Ben Fisher and Johns Waits, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Meantime a pair of upsets was registered in the girls' section as Margot Parsons lost her singles title to Julie Fiske, and Ruth Johnsen and Marporie Snowden were deposed as doubles rulers by Misses Fiske and Parsons. Miss Fiske defeated Miss Parsons with astonishing ease in the singles, 6-1, 6-4, and then the rivals joined forces to deal a convincing licking to Misses Johnsen and Snowden, 6-2, 6-4.

Long and Short of It

Both boys' finals followed form, with 14-year-old Britt Schweitzer defeating Dave Sterling in singles, and Delos Smith and Billy Bernard whipping Sterling and Steve Shafroth for doubles honors. However, Smith and Bernard—a Mutt and Jeff sized team respectively—came through only after fighting off a match point in the third and deciding set. They won 2-6, 12-10, 6-3. Schweitzer's winning scores in the singles were 6-3, 6-2.

Bensinger, in winning his second straight junior title and his third crown in three years, counting his victory in the 1939 boys singles, was climaxing a truly remarkable tournament record. Recapitulation shows young Robert lost only four games in four matches, which is sub-par on any course or courts. In succession he trimmed Charley Hackney, 6-1, 6-1; Bob Shortley, 6-0, 6-0; Bob Miller, 6-0, 6-0, and finally Hall, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles Match Thrills

Easily the closest and most exciting finals match was the boys doubles as Smith and Bernard demonstrated plenty of courage in transforming what loomed as a straight-set loss into a three-set victory. The game youngsters trailed 9-10 and 30-40 before starting their comeback. Smith's smashing overheads and speedy court coverage were telling factors in the successful rally.

Schweitzer, the new boys champion succeeding Sam Doyle, who was declared ineligible for over age at the last minute before the tournament, was a freshman last year at Calvin Coolidge High. But in spite of his youth and low class he played No. 1 on the Colts' tennis team and won four of five matches. His lone conqueror was Ben Fisher, the junior star who played No. 1 for Roosevelt.

Miss Fiske's upset of Miss Parsons was a case of friend beating friend. Both girls are members of Army and Navy Club and play often in socuable matches. Miss Fiske is 18 and attends Western High School. Her rival is 17 and a June graduate of Woodrow Wilson.

Walters, Reds Crack Jinx, Beat Phils, 5-1

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 24.—Two ninth-inning errors robbed Bucky Walters of a shutout today as, with five-hit hurling, he pitched and batted the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-to-1 victory over their "jinx" opponents, Philadelphia.

Through seven frames Walters allowed but two hits, a double by Stan Benjamin, first to face him, and a single by Bobby Bragan in the fourth—both before a man was out. But both times, Red fielders contributed to their total of four double plays and the Phils either whiffed—as five did—or died on easy chances. Frank McCormick, at first base, alone accounted for 14 outs.

Walters scored the World Champions' two final runs in the eighth by doubling to the scoreboard and sending across Harry Craft who had doubled and Joost, saved by Joe Marty's bobble of his fly.

Leiber Beaned As Cubs Lose To Giants, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Hank Leiber, big blond slugger of the Chicago Cubs, was beaned today for the second time in his major league career as the Cubs dropped a 3-to-1 decision to the New York Giants.

The star outfielder was knocked down by one of Cliff Melton's pitches in the eighth inning, but was revived quickly by the application of wet towels as he lay, surrounded by players of both teams, beside home plate.

He walked unassisted to the dugout and was taken immediately to the Illinois Masonic Hospital for X-ray examination.

In 1937 while a member of the Giants Leiber was struck by one of Bob Feller's blazing fast balls during a spring exhibition game with the Cleveland Indians. He suffered a serious concussion and missed about half the season.

Leiber Doing Okay

Dr. John Davis, Cub physician, said after examining the big outfielder that Leiber "was coming along pretty good." Dr. Davis said no X-rays would be made until morning, but that he did not believe Leiber had suffered a fracture.

"He's had considerable pain," Dr. Davis said, "and is quite nervous—probably because he is thinking of that first time he was hit by a pitched ball. Regardless of what the pictures show, he'll remain in the hospital several days."

The Giants also had an accident today, Home Run King Mel Ott being forced to retire in the second inning because of a bruised finger which he hurt fielding a single by Babe Dahlgren.

Huskie Crew Even-Money Choice Today

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 24.—Washington's rangy Huskies were established tonight as even-money favorites to win the 4-mile varsity race in tomorrow's forty-fourth annual intercollegiate regatta.

The Huskies won last year by half a length over Cornell. With only three holdovers from that boat, they beat California three and a half lengths in record-smashing time on the Oakland (Calif.) Estuary in April. Coach Al Ulbrickson doesn't think they're as kood now as they were two months ago, but the experts think that still will be good enough to whip the eight other starters without too much effort.

The odds listed California at 2-1, Cornell at 5-1 as leading threat to crack the Far Western monopoly; Syracuse at 10, Columbia at 15, Princeton and Rutgers at 20, and Massachusetts Tech and Wisconsin at 50-1.

Good Weather Forecast

From all indications, the new order in the Intercollegiate Rowing Association will get good weather and good rowing conditions for the first time in four years. The final light workouts which the 19 crews, entered in varsity, junior varsity and freshman races held today were staged on a smooth river, with little wind. The forecast for tomorrow was "cloudy and cooler," which should make it ideal.

Cornell is expected to make the best Eastern showing in the 3-mile junior varsity race against California, Washington and Columbia. The 2-mile freshman race that will open the program at 3:45 p. m. E. S. T.)—the others will follow at one-hour intervals—shapes up as a battle among undefeated M. I. T., powerful Wisconsin and Syracuse, a boatload which beat Cornell twice this spring, Columbia, Princeton and Cornell also are entered.

A new four-station short wave radio hook-up will keep all spectators and contestants informed of developments. A new referee, Howard W. Robbins, Boston attorney, will officiate.

the Tigers, was continually in trouble, especially in the third, fourth and fifth when the A's put two men on base, but he was tight in the pinches.

In addition the Detroit twirler drove in the first run of the game in the third inning. Charley Gehringer led off with a double, went to third on an infield out, home on Gorsica's single to center.

Thereafter Gorsica and Les McCrabb, who went the route for the A's, hooked up in a pitching duel. In the eighth Wally Moses led off for the A's with his fourth straight hit, advanced on Benny McCoy's sacrifice and romped home on Johnson's triple to deep center. Johnson was left stranded as Dick Siebert and Eddie Collins were easy outs.

In the ninth, York singled and reached second on Moses' error. Campbell singled him to third and he scored on Higgins' fly.

Cards Swamp Braves, 13 to 1; Warneke Wins

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 24.—The Cardinals were hotter than the weather today—90 degrees and a boiling sun—as they smothered Boston's Braves, 13 to 1, and clung to their slim National League lead.

Lean Lon Warneke, defeated his last two times out prior to today, limited the Braves to four hits. One of these was Max West's home run in the second. It was Warneke's eighth victory of the year.

Johnny Hopp, of the Cards, smashed out his second home run of the season in the big sixth, scoring two runners ahead of him. His circuit blow, as did West's, went to the top of the right-field pavilion. It was West's eighth home run.

Cobb Given Edge Over Ruth in Today's Match

By Bill King

Associated Press Sports Writer

Newton, Mass., June 24.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, who plays golf with the same carefully planned recklessness he displayed during his 24 sensational baseball seasons, appeared to have an eyelash margin today over George Herman Ruth, his rival diamond immortal, when they completed their final practice rounds for tomorrow's 18-hole southpaw "grudge match" at the Commonwealth Country Club.

Before Cobb made his first trip over the newly stiffened par-72 course, Ruth had completed his second practice round and had put an 80 on top of yesterday's 79. Cobb, wild on the tees going out, reached the turn in 41, but came back in 37 for a 78.

The Georgia Peach played in a threesome with Mel Merritt and John Corcoran, Massachusetts Golf Association executives, and both agreed he displayed a thoroughly sound game plus rare skill on the greens. They said he was willing to take chances to save a stroke, but only after making a careful study of the immediate terrain and analyzing his caddy's advice.

During the first nine holes, Cobb's complaint that his driving was erratic appeared well-founded, but he steadied down after messing up the tenth, where he took a second six. His best performance came on the 522-yard thirteenth, where he was on in two and putted twice for his only birdie of the round.

Russ Hale, the Commonwealth professional, who played with Ruth yesterday and followed Cobb today, refused to predict the victory of this left-handed match, which will be played for the benefit of the Golden Rule Farm, the New England version of Boys Town, at Franklin, N. H. He said they were "too evenly matched."

Cobb missed seeing the Babe today because the latter spent the afternoon at the Indians-Red Sox baseball game, but intimated he was willing to accept Ruth's proposal that they have a friendly wager on the first round of their match, which will be continued in New York on Friday.

Regardless of that, however, the victory is assured of a trophy, for Bette Davis, Newton's gift to Hollywood, wired Bob Worden, the Commonwealth president, to select a cup for such disposal at her expense.

Nats Beat Chisox; Quit Cellar

the Nats their third run of the inning.

Shortstop Jimmy Webb muffed Cramer's grounder and Early moved to third. The Nats then attempted a double steal, and it was a horrible attempt, but not as horrible as the White Sox's attempt to nip it. With Cramer seemingly trapped between first and second and a dead bird before Early could score, Kuhel dropped the throw from Webb. Early crossed the plate, and Cramer lit out for second. He was out at that point until Knickerbocker dropped Kuhel's th-w for the third Chicago error of the inning.

Thus Leonard had a 5-3 lead, but the White Sox kindly gave him another run to work with in the eighth. Webb dropped Vernon's pop into left field for Chicago's fourth error of the day, and Case sacrificed Vernon to second. He scored a bit later when Jake Early pumped a double down the right field foul line.

That explains all of the Washington runs except the two they scored in the first inning. They happened after two were out. Lewis drew a walk, and Travis, Vernon and Case followed with sharp singles to get the two runs home. The rally ended when Case, for no reason, was trapped off first base by Lee. Case had a big lead off the base, but sort of forgot that second base was occupied.

Leonard made his 3-0 lead stand up nicely until the fourth, when Kreevich and Wright singled to put a run on third with one out. Leonard was getting out of the inning without damage, apparently, when Kuhel accidentally hit a soft grounder back of the box. The big knuckle baller had an easy play on Kreevich at the plate, but the ball slipped from his hand as he started to throw and the run scored, with everybody safe. But he limited the damage to one run when he forced Chapman and Webb to pop up.

In the sixth, though, Leonard was in deep trouble, and the White Sox came up with two runs and their 3-2 lead. Taft Wright and Joe Kuhel, the one-time Nats who habitually pound Washington pitching, rapped out a double and triple, respectively, into right field, and the Sox tied the score at 2-2. Leonard wild pitched 'em into a 3-2 lead when one of his knuckle balls sailed far out of Early's reach and permitted Kuhel to move home.

Thereafter, however, Leonard was tough. With the Nats restoring his lead by their seventh-run uprising, he pitched as if deeply grateful. He didn't let a man get to first base in those last three innings and he struck out one in each inning.

The boys were pretty good yesterday.

Cubs Option Billy Myers To Milwaukee

Milwaukee, June 24.—Billy Myers, Chicago Cubs' veteran shortstop, was released on option today to the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association. He is subject to 24-hour recall.

George Trautman, association president, said that Myers was en route to Milwaukee this afternoon and was expected to take over the shortstop position for the Brews when they open a three-game series with Minneapolis here tonight.

The Cubs released Lou Novikoff, an outfielder, to the Milwaukee team yesterday.

Mrs. Davy's 80 Bests Field of 86 for Md. Amateur Medal

Favorites All Make First Flight

Mrs. Meckley's 82 Takes 2d; Medalist Shoots Pair of 40's In 'Record' Effort

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Myron Davy, whose hours of patient work on her golf game are beginning to pay dividends, yesterday outclassed a field of 86 in the twenty-first annual Maryland State Women's Championship with a medal-winning 80 at Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Davy's score is believed to be a new modern record for women over the championship layout, which played longer than ever yesterday due to Monday night's hard rain. The Columbia Club representative played each nine in 40, banging home a 12-footer on the final green to insure medal honors.

Second low qualifier was last year's medalist and a two-time former champion, Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, of Kenwood, who played with Mrs. Davy and finished just two strokes back with a 43-39, 82. Only other 85-breaker was Mrs. T. F. Neblett, Manor, who posted 45-39, 84, the back nine including six fours, excellent scoring for a woman golfer over the exacting test of golf.

Favored Players

All favored players made the championship bracket, although Mrs. W. R. Stokes, the District and defending champion, was worried for a while with a 44, 46—90. Mrs. Stokes started well but started visiting traps on the fourth hole and couldn't dodge them from there home. The Manorite holed a 40-footer for a seven on the sixth hole after visioning an eight or nine then on the eighteenth was stymied while standing over the putt, and by a tree and finally pulled out with a six.

Baltimore's delegation, minus the seven-time champion, Mrs. Boyd Morrow, and the Middle Atlantic titlist, Mrs. Jerome Sloman, nevertheless placed five players in the championship bracket.

Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, former Baltimore City champ, and Elizabeth Bonthron, a school teacher member of two womens International lacrosse teams, posted 87s; Mrs. Maurice Glick and Jeannette Myers, of the neighboring Woodholme and Suburban Clubs, respectively, had 88s, and Gladys Griener, Elkridge, a 90.

Mrs. Leo Walper, the 1939 District Women's champion, bucked a pair of sevens and still posted an 87 for fourth low score of the Washington delegation while other District players cracking the 90 mark were Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, 88; Mrs. David Clark, of the host club, 89, and Mrs. T. O. Brandon, the District medalist, 89.

Mrs. Davy's fine round included a pair of three-putt greens, the tenth where a five on the par three hole threatened to blast her score and the twelfth, where she reached the green in two shots but took three putts. The 1940 finalist had just four one putt greens, dropping 12-footers on the fourteenth, for a birdie and the eighteenth, for a par, for the only long ones of the day. Her round included 34 putts.

Recent Lessons Helped

Mrs. Davy attributed her success to her latest teacher, Big Frank Walsh, of Rumson, N. J. The medalist recently spent 11 days in Rumson continuing a series of lessons under the one-time National P. G. A. finalist, whom she calls "the finest instructor in the country."

A playoff for the sixteenth position in the championship flight between Mrs. G. E. Pugh, Manor, and Mrs. Henry Goodman, Woodmont, was averted when the former graciously withdrew and dropped into the second flight. They each had 94's.

Manor and Kenwood each placed three players in the championship flight, the former with Mrs. Stokes, Pray and Neblett while in addition to Mrs. Meckley, Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg made the select circle for the River Road Club.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 24.—Ty Cobb fearlessly places two members of the corrupt Black Sox on his all-star team—shoeless Joe Jackson in left field (where all other authorities place Ty himself) and Buck Weaver on third base. Ty's full team:

CONSIDINE

"A team like that wouldn't need a manager," bright-eyed old Ty told us. "But I know one man who could get the very best out of all of them. Connie Mack."

Ty flies to Boston today for his first of two scheduled golf matches against Babe Ruth. The second 18-hole test will be staged in New York Friday before what might well be the biggest mob ever to see a golf match. A third match may go to Detroit, after which Tris Speaker will challenge the winner to play him in Cleveland. Except for the Boston match, all the contests will be for the benefit of USO, the organization which has pledged itself to make the life of draftees more bearable.

Walter Hagen gave Ty a lesson in goat-getting in Chicago the other day. Cobb was the greatest goat-getter in baseball history, but Hagen was the master of that intricate trade on the links. In the old days it took precious little to start a fight between Ruth and Cobb, and though they've mellowed, Cobb would be secretly pleased if the old fires were stoked during their long-deferred golf clash. Cobb told us he is thinking idly of saying to Babe:

"Hey, Ruth, I've been hearing a lot about your golf, out on the Coast. All those sub-par rounds you have. Well, come on, show me something." Cobb beamed at the prospect of making Babe squirm a little. "That oughta get him," he told us. "Babe's goat was always pretty easy to get," he recollected. "Just as well, too. The fellow was so great on the ball field that he'd beat you every day, unless you distracted him."

Cobb's a 9-handicap golfer. He had a 71 on the coast in March, but came back two days later and shot an 84 over the same layout. Ruth's game fluctuates just as violently. It should turn out to be a close, hard-fought golf match, this battle between the two greatest figures in baseball history. To plug the match, and draw more bucks into the USO fund, both may appear Thursday night at Ebbets Field and whack a few golf balls over the fence before the Dodgers-Braves game, if Larry MacPhail can be assured that they won't bring Lindbergh.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., becomes the port of missing men tomorrow. The annual regatta will see nine crack college crews, a record-equalling number, groan and gasp through 4 miles of water with the collegiate crown on the line. It is a tremendous test, calling for considerably better specimens of manhood than the two thunderously acclaimed gents on view last Wednesday night at the Polo Grounds. But no matter what feats of strengh and sheer ability will be turned in tomorrow, they will be ignored. Because the old college shell game is the world's most anonymous sport. If Washington wins again it will be the college, not the crew members, which will be accoladed. The only individuals who will be named in the average story out of Poughkeepsie will be the hapless blokes who break an oar or snag a crab. Only in the profession of umpiring is perfection taken as much for granted.

Regatta Data: Recent talk about the armor of the H. M. S. Hood and the Bismarck lead us to reveal that the 8-oared shells are shells indeed. All of them in the race tomorrow were made by George Pocock, the University of Washington's English born boat-builder. They weigh 280 pounds, carry more than 1,500 pounds of man-power, are made of native northwest cedar, are 60 feet long, 24 or 25 inches wide and the skin covering is only an eighth of an inch thick . . . If Washington wins much more, the cry of "break up Washington" will go out. Six of the nine colleges entered in the race are coached by Washington graduates. We won't mention their names, out of respect to their long years of anonymity.

Earle Skinker Leads Eastern Prep Golf

Greenwich, Conn., June 24.—Earl Skinker, a 19-year-old representative of Devitt Prep School, in Washington, took a two-stroke lead at the end of the first day's qualifying for the Eastern Interscholastic Golf Championship here today over the Westminster course.

Skinker, a former District schoolboy champ, played each nine in 38 strokes for a 72 against a course par of 71. The blond youngster had 15 pars, 1 birdie, dropping a 15-foot putt on the fourteenth hole, and 2 bogeys.

The other Devitt player and only other District representative, Charles Cullen, had an 84.

Skinker's 72 was two shots lower than three home-State prep school players, Don Kling, Alvin Mayer and Bob Edwards. Steve Norris and James Vander Hoff had 75s.

Lawrenceville (N. J.) Prep took the lead in team totals at the halfway mark.

The second of the 18-hole qualifying rounds will be played today while two rounds of match play will follow Thursday and Friday with the finals Saturday over the 36-hole route.

Bill Cassedy Wins Maryland Junior Title

Bill Cassidy, an 18-year-old Blair High graduate who played in his first District Junior last year and won it—yesterday made his Maryland State Junior Championship debut and wont it— with his lowest round of golf.

The slim youngster, a three-letter man at Silver Spring High School and member of Argyle Country Club, fired a 37-36, 73, one over par, over the Indian Spring course, to top a field of 21 in the 18-hole tournament.

Cassedy, star second-sacker on the Blair nine and a starting player on the basketball team, had played only two nine-hole rounds prior to the scholastic tournament late in May. But for a week or two he's been practicing hour after hour and yesterday it produced results.

Beats Wagner

Cassedy's margin was three strokes over Herbert A. Wagner, jr., 20-year-old Middle Atlantic medalist and quarter-finalist in the Maryland amateur, from Baltimore. Wagner had 40-36, 76.

The new champion's round included 13 consistent pars, two birdies, both from short putts, and three one-over par holes.

Mrstik Wins

Buster Mrstik, of the House Pages School and Bannockburn Club, won the 16-17 year age class with a 40-38, 78. Jim Fitzgerald, of the Kenwood Club and Gonzaga's golf team, won the 15-and-under years class with a 43-40, 83.

Two of the co-favored players were well back, Dick Meyer, Manor Club champion with a 79 and George Vass, G. W. Frosh golf captain with an 85.

Sandlot Meeting Set For Tonight

All five leagues in the National Capital Amateur Baseball Federation, involving 28 teams and approximately 360 local sandlot baseball players, are looking forward to the "open house" meeting of the body tonight at 8 p. m. at 6101 Blair Road Northwest. Numerous important matters concerning federation business will be discussed.

Most important of these will be plans for the championship tournament to be held in Youngstown, Ohio, early in September. Rule changes and other items will be discussed.

Chris Heurich, jr., one of the directors and sponsor of the champion Heurich Brewers, will be on hand to receive the federation's trophy for his club's triumph in The Washington Post-Industrial League and subsequent capture of the city title last year.

Scocca, of D. C., Brings Giggle Lee Home at Charles Town

Workman Protege Wins Winchester

Victor Over Red Idol Pays $14 in Mutuels; Palumbo Registers His 29th Victory

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 24.—A Washington jockey turned in a brilliant ride today to win the Winchester purse, featuring the Tuesday program here. Danny Scocca, who was helped along the path of a jockey's career by Sonny Workman, turned in a whale of a saddle effort to bring Giggle Lee, owned by G. G. Waugh, jr., to the wire ahead of Red Idol and Shailleen in a field of five going seven furlongs.

Giggle Lee was overlooked by the majority of the 6,000 bettors and brought a return of $14 for each $2 investment. Red Idol ran a creditable race but was handicapped because Jockey Butsy Hernandez lost his whip in the opening stages and was unable to do his mount justice. Red Idol finished second with Shailleen third.

Red Idol and Shailleen teamed to set most of the pace while Jockey Scocca rated Giggle Lee behind the pair. When the real test came, Scocca shook up his mount and the son of General Lee developed momentum to take command and draw out in the stretch run.

The track was heavy as the result of rain last night, making it a trying task for the horses throughout the program.

Sammy Palumbo hung up his twenty-ninth victory and moved to within one of Willie Kelly for the jockey leadership when he annexed the 4½-furlong opener with J. F. Donaldson's Busy Time.

†Donaldson and Rudacille entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUSY TIME (entry), $5.00, $5.20, $2.80; VERA M. (entry), $5.20, $2.80; CLIFTON'S DAWN, $2.80.

BUSY TIME went around CLIFTON'S DAWN to take command and opened long lead to win easily. VERA M. came gamely in closing test to take place in concluding stride. CLIFTON'S DAWN, first away, opened clear lead, but weakened gradually after being displaced. HAPPY SLAVE was held safe.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:07½. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. A. S. Bowman's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAVIGATION, $9.00, $4.20, $3.60; JALAINE, $5.80, $4.80; JEWEL SONG, $6.60.

NAVIGATION, closest to pace of OF COURSE, took command at far turn and won with speed in reserve. JALAINE had rough early trip, came out for racing room and closed full of run. JEWEL SONG moved up menacingly approaching stretch and hung thereafter. COURT BLENHEIM raced wide throughout and showed good effort.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:39. Winner, J. V. Stewart's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNSUELLO, $7.60, $4.60, $3.80; ROYAL WANTON, $5.00, $4.00; GROUCHY GIRL, $3.60.

COUNSUELLO displaced BRAINCHILD to take command on backstretch, drew out, but just lasted. ROYAL WANTON saved ground to improve position and closed with good energy on inside to just miss getting up. GROUCHY GIRL was hard ridden and had no excuses. BRAINCHILD set early pace and weakened badly.

Daily Double, NAVIGATION and COUNSUELLO, Paid $36.60.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06½. Winner, Gilford Farm's ch. g. (4), by Groucher—London Charm. Trained by R. Harris. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:28⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENGLE'S CHARM, $10.20, $5.60, $3.80; BALLYHAUNIS, $5.20, $3.20; EMMA H., $3.60.

ENGLE'S CHARM, off slowly, worked way to contention on outside and closed willingly to wear down BALLYHAUNIS. The latter took command early, drew out, but could not resist winner while vigorously handled. EMMA H. was hard ridden and had no excuses. STAR CANTER was well placed early on outside and weakened.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:27½. Off at 4:28. Winner, C. W. Davis ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STORMINESS, $12.60, $6.80, $5.00; GLITTER GIRL, $4.20, $3.00; VANTRYST, $3.90.

STORMINESS lost ground going wide into first turn, came on outside to reach forward position and was steered along rail through stretch to wear down GLITTER GIRL. Latter took early lead, saved ground through last furlong and could not match winner's bid. VANTRYST raced in spots. IDA TIME made up ground late.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at once. Winner, G. G. Waugh, jr.'s ch. c. (4), by General Lee—Giggles. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GIGGLE LEE, $14.00, $4.40, $2.60; RED IDOL, $2.80, $2.40; SHAILLEEN, $2.60.

GIGGLE LEE, going in good form over the heavy strip, rounded field to assume command entering stretch and won in hand. RED IDOL, used up in duelling with SHAILLEEN for five furlongs, did not have enough left to match winner. SHAILLEEN raced herself into ground engaging RED IDOL. GINOBI pulled up sore.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:36½. Winner, W. B. Worthington's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAGERSTOWN BOY, $5.60, $3.20, $2.40; SEA FINN, $3.60, $2.80; MACIE MARGARET, $4.20.

HAGERSTOWN BOY, close up from start, forced to front when called upon and drew out to win under good handling. SEA FINN, steadied along early, closed with good energy. MACIE MARGARET was keen forward contender from beginning and weakened in final test. ALMAC closed some ground.

EIGHTH RACE (substitute)—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:01½. Off at 6:02. Winner, E. M. Lee's ch. f. (4), by John Grier—Grace Troxler. Trained by M. Anthony. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:27⅘.

At The Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Well, it is all over but the cheering now as Gus Petty almost reached immortality with his brilliant radio speech on our program. Gus definitely declared that, in his opinion, Sammie Palumbo is a cinch to wind up as leading rider at the meeting. Right now it is really a nip and tuck battle, with Kelly still in a slight lead and Sammie right on his heels, and we cannot leave Buddy Root out of it. He still has an outside chance. The most improved rider at the meeting is without question Martin Bletzacker and had Martin not been so unfortunate as to be set down for some time he would be right up there battling for the championship. Jockey Kelly almost stole one in the third today when he appeared hoplessly beaten on Brainchild only to keep on knocking and just did get beat a "dirty" nose. Jockey Kelly said that Of Course bled in the running of today's second race. We are fortunate in having with us for the rest of the meeting Ford McClung, mutuel manager at Dade Park, Owensboro, Ky. While here, McClung will assist Mutuel Manager Donald Hay in the calculating. We forgot to mention that all those swell pictures that are taken by Steve Wever, the demon track photographer, are aided and abetted by Ed Hannigan who hails from Staten Island, New York. Hannigan is new at the racing game but sure is a big help to Wever. When Jockey Clarence Wright rode Kal-Min to victory in yesterday's seventh event it was his fifth victory at the meeting and also the fifth victory for Kal-Min. F. E. James, capable trainer of Don Orlan and others, reports that Gold Parade died of a kidney ailment after having a veterinarian in attendance for 24 hours and not from eating clover as I reported yesterday. G. Cardoza (jockey), was fined $10 for failure to report to fill his engagements. Jockey J. O'Malley was fined $10 for failure to report to fill his engagements. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—MICROPLAY won recently under good handling and deserves the call over this field. KINDLE should like the drying track and will be close. MAFUTA and SAIL BY are possibilities.

Second race—MINSTON can't be as bad as shown in that recent effort. Promises to like the going and I'm going to string along. HIGH AIM and WAR SCARE have plenty of speed and deserve attention.

Third race—ACE OF TRUMPS likes this route and gets in with steadying weight. I see no reason for mistakes under Palumbo's handling. SCHLEY GORGE is a hard knocking plater and should be in the thick of contention. GOLD SWEEP to take care of the others.

Fourth race—JUNGLE MOON has had a good rest and should be ready to turn back these. CAIDON flashed speed last out and belongs close with this gang. CAUTIOUS BO will be in good hands and belongs in the money circle.

Fifth race—CLOCKS has done about everything asked hereabouts and will be the one to beat in this event. HIGH BUD gets an assignment of 118 pounds but is a threat. FARMLANDS will be a factor.

Sixth race—QUILL looks like the best bet of the day providing the track drys out. This one should take the lead early and never look back. TRANSDAY and KINGOO to take care of the place and show.

Seventh race—NIJINSKY may be suspected of not going this far but I believe he can run all day. Gets the checks down and steps up for the pay off. GRAND WALTZ gets in light and will be a factor. The SWAGMAN has shown signs of awakening.

Eighth race—CLYMENE should take this race. She has trained well, gets her distance and I will make no excuses if she is beaten. JUSTA JIMMIE and COTILLION should be the second and third ones in this field.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take HIGHLAND SONG, TIME PASSES and NOTORIETY.

Gallahadion Takes Arlington Feature In Late Drive

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 24.—Milky Way Farm Stable's Gallahadion, 2-1 favorite, slipped through on the rail and drove to victory at Arlington Park today.

J. W. Bell's Steel Heels also made up ground in the stretch to finish second while Calumet Farm's Easy Mon, after setting the pace, managed to save third.

The winner was ridden by Bobby Vedder. Gallahadion paid $6.20.

Rising Prices Of Furniture Bring Warning

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply sent requests yesterday to 47 of the largest manufacturers of furniture and to 16 producers of household refrigerators to halt price rises and cease other activities leading to inflation and economic demoralization.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, asked the furniture makers to cease immediately the "open" method of quoting prices.

A growing number of furniture manufacturers are refusing to quote firm prices, but instead are leaving the matter of prices open until the time of shipment, Henderson's letter stated. He declared the practice would upset the market and seriously affect the general price levl.

Sharp Climb Cited

"We are also concerned over the fact that the price of furniture has risen considerably during recent months," the letter continued. "If such price rises continue in this and other industries the result will be inflation and demoralization, not only in your industry, but over the economic system generally."

Asking that no new price advances be scheduled without prior consultations with the OPACS, Henderson suggested it was better for the manufacturer to "refuse any customer's order which he is not sure of his ability to fill, rather than to resort to the open price method."

While the letter went only to the 47 largest manufacturers, Henderson said similar requests would be sent to some 3,200 other producers all over the country in the next few weeks.

Penalty Not Stated

The letter to producers of household refrigerators went to firms turning out approximately 97 per cent of the output. It declared that Henderson's office was studying recent price increases "with a view to determining their justification." This hint of further action to control refrigerator prices was not amplified with any suggestion as to what action might be taken if the price boosts were found to be unjustified.

Henderson told the refrigerator makers that his office would be glad to arrange for discussions with producers in advance if they felt any new price advances were necessary.

Later, Henderson gave notice that he has considered placing a ceiling on prices of high speed tool steel scrap and other types of steel scrap having a high content of tungsten. High speed steel is required to provide the cutting edge of machine tools and is essential in arms production .Tungsten is its most important ingredient.

The price of this scrap has been stable until recently at $1.80 a pound, a statement issued by Henderson said. In recent weeks, however, certain dealers and users have been asking higher prices on scrap being sold back to companies producing high speed steel, the price administrator said.

Furniture Firms Swamped

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 24 (AP).—An increased volume of May business which virtually swamped the furniture manufacturers was pictured today in the report for the month by Seidman & Seidman, furniture industry accountants.

Unfilled orders, up 29 per cent from April and 190 per cent from May, 1940, pushed delivery dates farther and farther back. While shipments rose 3 per cent from April and 49 per cent above a year ago, they could not keep pace with orders.

The accounting firm pointed out it was the first time in eight years that the volume of shipments for May showed an increase over the April figure and noted that for the first five months of the year the industry was more than 38 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of 1940 in "new business booked."

Business Highlights

By Standard & Poor's Corp.

Anthracite Prospects

The near term outlook for the anthracite industry is better than it has been for some time. The one-day strike resulted in wage increases smaller than generally expected; anthracite prices currently are being held at relatively high levels through the producers' voluntary allotment agreement; and indicated competitive conditions should permit higher prices to absorb the increased wage cost. Prices of fuel oil, the industry's most important competitor, have been increased 8 per cent recently, and consumers who can readily shift over to anthracite, without serious expenditures, might be expected to do so if oil prices are again increased.

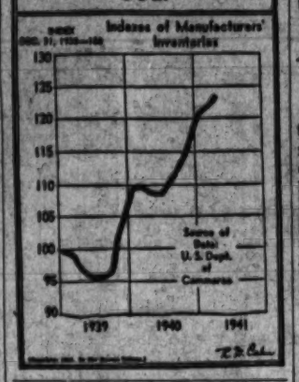
Sales Gain for Paper

The high level of industrial activity and the improvement in national purchasing power are greatly stimulating demand for virtually all lines of paper and paper products, and the industry is assured of a high operating rate for the remainder of this year at least. Tonnage volume is expected to run 5 per cent to 10 per cent higher than in 1940, with dollar sales showing a somewhat larger gain as a result of higher average prices. Generally speaking, the companies producing paperboard, wrapping paper and paper bags appear likely to report the best gains in sales volume. These lines will benefit not alone from rising consumer spending, but also from demand for packing a myriad of small defense items.

Bakers' Profits

Higher general business activity and larger consumer incomes should stimulate demand for bakery products, particularly for such lines as cakes, pastries an dfancy biscuits and crackers. However, earnings will depend upon the industry's ability to pass on recent increases in raw material costs to consumers. If selling prices are soon adjusted to such costs, a moderate gain in profits for the current year is likely; otherwise, returns will do well to equal 1940 levels. Profits of flour millers will probably not change much from those of a year earlier.

Factory Inventories Soar



8.3% Increase In Advertising Noted in Week

A total of 22,265,132 lines of retail display advertising was placed in the newspapers of 83 major cities, including Washington, during the week ended June 14, according to a report released yesterday by Advertising Age. This total is more than 1,000,000 lines greater than that carried in the same newspapers during the corresponding period of 1940, and shows an increase of 8.3 per cent over last year's figure of 20,553,808 lines.

For the year to date (23 weeks), lineage in the newspapers in 83 cities has totaled 494,702,417 lines, an increase of 4.3 per cent over the comparable 1940 total of 474,170,484 lines.

Banquet for Schram

Emil Schram, newly elected president of the New York Stock Exchange, will be honored tonight in New York at a banquet sponsored by the Association of Stock Exchange Firms. Among those from Washington who will attend are George M. Ferris, president of the Washington Stock Exchange, and Robert C. Jones, head of the investment house bearing his name.

7 At Quebec Parley

Accompanying Mr. Fresh at the convention are Supervisors Edward H. Vo nDeck and Walter A. Miller; Representatives H. R. Fredenburgh, George L. Hawsworth, Selby B. Hardwick and Roger M. Stuart. The three-day program includes sales demonstrations, seminars and talks by home office and fieldmen.

Douglas Fairbanks' Stock Sale Approved

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP).—Sale of 4,000 shares of United Artists Corporation stock of the late Douglas Fairbanks to the corporation has been approved by Probate Judge Jess E. Stephens. The sale price of $400,000 cash goes into the Fairbanks estate.

The sale was confirmed after Fairbanks' widow, the former Lady Ashley, withdrew objections. She valued the stock at $1,000,000. Her lawyer, Isaac Pacht, said conferences with lawyers and banking executives convinced her the price was fair.

Pacht said the 4,000 shares would be resold to David O. Selznick and Frank Capra, each taking 2,000.

White, New Rail Head, To Attend First Meeting

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Roy B. White, new president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. will attend his first board of directors' meeting tomorrow.

Daniel Willard, former president, who became chairman of the board, when White, former Western Union president, was elected to head the B. & O. June 1, will preside at the regular monthly meeting, to be held here instead of in New York.

$60,000,000 Utility Issues Are Awarded

By the Associated Press

New York, June 24.—Observing the competitive bidding rule made recently by the Securities & Exchange Commission, the Philadelphia company, today awarded $48,000,000 of its bonds to a syndicate headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Smith, Barney & Co., and an issue of $12,000,000 collateral trust notes to a group headed by the Mellon Securities Corp. and the First Boston Corp.

The bonds, 20-year collateral trusts, were sold as 4¼s, at the syndicate's bid of 100.3375. The successful bid for the notes was 100.07 for 2¾ per cent obligations maturing in 1 to 10 years.

Public offerings of the two issues were scheduled for later in the week, subject to their clearance through the SEC.

Philadelphia Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Gas & Electric Co., controls operating utilities in the Pittsburgh district and other areas in Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia.

The company will use the proceeds of the financing to redeem $80,000,000 of secured 5 per cent bonds due in 1967.

Standard Gas Faces Test

New York, June 24.—The financial district expects the first test of competitive bidding for public utility common stock to come July 8, when Standard Gas & Electric Co. will consider offers for 590,527 shares of San Diego Gas & Electric Co. common.

The sale is intended to help Standard reduce its system to integration, complying with the public utility act of 1935.

More than 400,000 shares of San Diego stock were reported surrendered so far to Standard in exchange for its own debentures.

Bids, to be opened at Standard's Chicago office, will be received without limitation as to the amount of stock that may be bought. It was indicated, however, that, aggregate prices being equal, a bidder for the entire lot would have preference.

Standard Gas & Electric's integration program is expected to entail disposal of a number of other properties, with the sale of San Diego common a yardstick for future action.

Chase Gets State Issue

Albany, N. Y., June 24 (AP).—New York State sold today $15,000,000 of long term bonds to a syndicate headed by the Chase National Bank, New York City, at an annual interest cost to the State of 1.1946 per cent. Proceeds will be used to finance State institutional construction.

Utility Rejects Bids

New York, June 24 (AP).—The New York State Electric & Gas Corporation rejected several bids yesterday for $35,393,000 of bonds offered under competitive bidding, when it developed no bids were entered for 120,000 shares of preferred stock.

The corporation had stipulated it would not sell either the bond or stock issue separately.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. What is the price of a defense savings bond?

A. For the smallest bond, you pay $18.75. The bond will increase in value in ten years to $25. For $75, you get a bond which will increase to $100, other bonds are in proportion.

Q. What will the Government do with the money I pay for my bond?

A. Your money will be put to work at once in the National defense program to protect the freedoom and safety of the United States, and of all its people everywhere.

Note—To purchase defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest postoffice or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington.

Stocks Retreat on Growing War Fears; German Bond Issues Show Sharp Drop

New York, June 24.—The stock market's war-buying inspiration of Monday faded today and leading issues retreated to a point or more.

Growing fears the Soviets would be no match for the seasoned Nazi legions and that the respite granted the British by the latest shift in the European conflict might be short, brokers said, brought in enough profit selling on yesterday's run-up to reverse the trend. Business news, while fairly good, was ignored in the majority of cases.

While isolated specialties and senior stocks displayed individual strength, steels, motors, mail orders, oils, farm implements and utilities were shaky from the start. A few rails and rubbers did fairly well.

The one comforting fact in the day's performance for recovery forces was that volume slackened appreciably on the set-back. Transfers totaled 442,580 shares against 754,140 the day before. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net loss of .2 of a point at 41.6.

Universal Pictures preferred pushed up 7 points to 153½ on the announcement of a loan agreement with banks making available funds for production and other proposes up to $5,600,000.

On the other hand Wilson & Co. preferred conceded ½ of a point in the face of two $1.50 dividend declarations on account of arrearages. Santa Fe also was off ¼ despite the directors' vote of a $1 dividend, send since 1937.

Prominent on the offside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Sperry, American Telephone, Western Union, St. Joseph Lead, duPont, Texas Corporation and Anaconda.

United States Rubber held a gain of 1⅛. The thought here was that the latest Federal rubber restrictions might stabilize crude prices and aid tire makers. Retaining modest advances were Southern Railway, Goodyear, United Aircraft and Mack Truck.

On the declining side of the Curb were Aluminum of America, Creole Petroleum, American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft, Gulf Oil and Wright Hargreaves. Improved were Pittsburgh Plate Glass, New Jersey Inc, Todd Shipyards and Chesebrough. Turnover here was around 70,000 shares compared with 92,000 yesterday.

Generally lower prices prevailed in today's bond market, although there were individual firm spots in the rails.

A group of German industrial and municipal issues slumped 50 per cent or more in quoted value under light offerings while obligations of the German government were in moderate demand at slightly higher prices.

Total turnover of $7,622,000, par value, compared with $8,364,900 on Monday. Of the four domestic divisions in the Associated Press averages, two were unchanged and two lost .1 of a point. The foreign group was down a shade after establishing a new 1941 top the day before.

It was late in the session when offerings of one or two German municipal and industrial issues upset the applecart. Most of these bonds had been inactive since a fast run-up early in May attributed at that time to enthusiasm on the part of some for Hitler's reported peace feelers. Berlin City 6s and 6½s each dropped 9 points to 8, Berlin Electric 6½s lost 8 at 8, Frankfort 6½s dropped 9 to 8 and Bavaria 6½s lost 5 at 12.

Some quarters of the bond market suggested that holders of these bonds placed one or two for sale at the market merely in order to find out what sort of bids were on specialist's books for the issues after the latest turn affecting Germany's war outlook.

German government 7s were up ¾ at 9¾ and the 5½s ended up ⅝ at 7. Other foreign bonds were without important change.

Unchanged to lower were, among others, International Hydro Electric 6s, International Telephone 5s, Northwestern 4¾, Erie 5s, Southern Pacific 4½s and Portland General Electric 4½s.

United States Governments were extremely quiet and changes were negligible both on the stock exchange and over the counter.

General Drop In Key Staples Led by Cotton

By the Associated Press

Commodity markets yesterday reacted sharply from Monday's upturn, in some instances losing more than half of gains netted from the war-inspired spurt.

Expectation of Government price action in the cotton cloth field coupled with less optimism in other markets pushed cotton down 85 cents to $1.05 a bale in New York. Cottonseed oil moved raggedly, to close .12 of a cent lower to .09 cent higher.

In Chicago, wheat slumped 1¼ to 1⅝ cents a bushel, corn losing ⅝ to ⅞ cent as it followed the major crop.

Santos coffee futures, mixed the previous day, closed .06 to .17 of a cent a pound higher.

Hides lost .14 to .15 cent a pound.

In its first decline in 20 trading days, the Associated Press index of 35 staple basic wholesale commodities moved to 88.63 per cent of the 1926 average from 88.76 the previous day.

U. S. Oil Stocks In April Drop to 131-Day Supply

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday a 2,290,000 barrel decrease during April in total stocks of all oils.

Supplies amounted to 356,787,000 barrels, or 131 days requirements on April 30, compared with 359,047,000 barrels for 138 on March 31.

April stocks of all oils were 1,324,000 barrels more than the same month last year. Total demand for all oils dropped from 127,829,000 barrels in March to 127,053,000 barrels is April, of which 8,408,000 barrels were for export.

The bureau reported the April total new supply of oils at 124,763,000 barrels compared with a new supply of 127,353,000 barrels during March. Domestic production amounted to 111,080,000 barrels in April which was 4,965,000 barrels less than during the previous April.

May Auto Sales Put at 609,481

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—The Automobile Manufacturers Association said today that retail sales of new passenger cars and trucks during May totaled 609,481 units. Of this total 524,269 units were passenger cars. Sales in May, 1940, numbered 358,379 units of which 330,521 were passenger cars.

For the first five months of the current calendar year retail sales totaled 2,485,060 vehicles, of which 2,105,955 were passenger cars. For the comparable period a year ago sales totaled 1,764,977 units, of which 1,498,463 were passenger vehicles.

Int. Paper Merges With Southern Kraft

New York, June 24 (AP).—Richard J. Cullen, president of International Paper Co., announced today that the Southern Kraft Corporation had been merged into International Paper after completion of recent bond financing. Southern Kraft was formerly a wholly owned subsidiary.

he merger marks another step in the simplification of International Paper's corporate structure. It now owns directly all of the major operating properties controlled by it in the United States.

Bay State Reports 28% Job Increase

Boston, June 2 (AP).—A 28 per cent increase in the number of Massachusetts industrial wage earners and a jump of 62 per cent in their individual earnings during May as compared with the corresponding month of 1940 were reported today by the State Department of Labor and Industries.

The department said that the weekly earnings averaged $27.68—the highest since it began making surveys in 1922—and added that the increases were contra seasonal, due prncipally to defense contracts.

Mushroom Growth of Currency Exchanges Is Noted in Cities Lacking Branch Banks

An effort, which will doubtless be successful, is being made in the Illinois legislature to bring the new style currency exchanges, or unofficial banks, which have had a mushroom growth in Chicago since 1933 under public supervision.

With the dedation of the number of banks in the Chicago area from 210 in 1929 to 56 as a result of the process of elimination during the depression, Chicagoans found themselves physically short of nearby financial facilities. The law of the State does not permit branch banking. Accordingly, in order to fill the gap, men opened up currency exchanges throughout the city which charge stated fees for cashing checks and for issuing so-called money orders. There are now 300 of them in the Chicago metropolitan area, and they are owned by 50 individuals, one of whom has 24 separate locations. They keep open after banking hours and otherwise accommodate workers and others without regular banking affiliators.

Under the regulatory bill now pending in the legislature, new locations will be authorized only on demonstration to the satisfaction of the auditor of public accounts, who supervises banks in Illinois, that public convenience warrants them. Also under the proposed law the currency exchanges will be required to post performance bonds, and to submit to period State audits.

On peak days before holidays, these currency exchanges cash checks for as much as $3,000,000 in the aggregate. The banks do not regard them as competitors as the banks do not want to clutter up their banking floors with mobs of individual seeking to cash small checks. In fact, the so-called money orders sold are little more than checks drawn by the currency exchanges on regular banks of which they are depositors.

The fee for cashing a check runs from 5 to 25 cents or more depending on the amount of the item. Apart from the 300 currency exchanges in the Chicago area, there 50 more in the smaller towns of the State.

Unlike banks, these currency exchanges, hitherto unregulated, do not accept deposits or make loans.

Just as branch banking developed in California, so this new phenomenon has taken from without much public attention in the second metropolis of the Nation, where branches are not permitted.

The currency exchanges clear their own business through regular banks. Banks find the business profitable, because, though compensatory deposit balances are usually insufficient, the bank charges a service see for sorting the checks, collecting the items drawn on other banks, and for shipment of the actual currency to the exchanges in armored trucks.

In the typical currency exchange, 90 per cent of the volume comes from cashing pay roll checks. Operating like banks, the exchanges build up signature files. When an individual comes for an accommodation for the first time, careful effort is made to establish his identity through direct inquiry through his employer, through inspection of social security cards, automobile licenses, and other documentary evidence.

For its protection against fraud, the currency exchange, like the bank, carries a blanket insurance policy which covers it against all forgeries in excess of $25 and also a blanket fidelity policy covering employes. Hold up insurance is also carried.

The idea has spread to Los Angeles and to other centers. It seems however to flourish in communities without a multiplicity of banking offices permitted under a branch banking law.

3,000,000 Cut in Auto Output Seen

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 24.—Apprehensive as the motorcar makers may be regarding production and price controls and materials and man-power shortages, there is a feeling among many of the sales authorities that next year's output will be sufficient for actual replacement needs.

Current speculation among the trade authorities forecasts an ultimate curtailment of car and truck production for civilian uses to not more than 3,000,000 units during the coming model year.

This figure is reached by anticipating another 20 per cent reduction order before the new model year is six months old to be followed later by another cut.

Fear Buying to Fade

But even with such further curtailment orders many of the trade experts believe actual new cars needs can be met. These sources do not agree as to the volume of demand, but they make a sharp distinction between new-car desire and new-car need.

Some of the trade authorities believe the sales division will have a job on its hands immediately at the start of the new model year; others assert that the "fear buying" that boosted production for the 1941 model period to an indicated 5,200,000 units will not taper off until at least halfway through the new automobile year.

The trade commentators admit this is guesswork based wholly upon sales trends of the last several months. They are agreed, however, that the motorcar market could not possibly absorb another huge volume of cars in the coming year if the factories were able to make them.

Trade sources generally believe that hysteria—fear of higher prices and doubt regarding the availability of needed quality in raw materials—inspired much of the 1941 model buying.

Quality Not Affected

The desire of many persons to buy new cars before the introduction of alternate materials undoubtly contributed much to the high level of retail demand during the current model season. The use of these replacement materials to free needed metals and other substances for the defense program, however, began in some instances many weeks ago without in any way affecting the quality of the vehicle.

Some further adaptation of alternate matetrials will come with the advent of the new models, of course. But all of them will have been thoroughly tested and proved before being put into use.

Figures compiled by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association show that retail sales of new cars and trucks in the United States last month totaled 609,481. Estimated production for the same month was 552,000 vehicles. Assemblies for June should be approximately the same as those of last month with retail distribution also coming close to the high mark of last month.

Thus will be further cleaned up the field stocks already depleted by unusual consumer demand.

Universal Pictures Takes Bank Loan

New York, June 24 (AP).—Universal Pictures Co., Inc., has concluded a loan agreement for funds for production and general corporate purposes up to $3,600,000 with the First National Bank of Boston and the bank of the Manhattan Co., J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, announced today.

The agreement calls for interest at 3 per cent, runs for three years from June 30, 1941, and is renewable for an additional year.

Week's Gold Imports Rise to $7,749,432

Gold imports last week totaled $7,749,432, nearly double the previous week.

The Commerce Department said principal shipments were $3,700,309 from Canada, $938,435 from Peru, $939,443 from the Philippine Islands and $893,470 from Chile.

Foreign gold deposits in Federal Reserve banks declined $398,960 to a total of $1,915,387,110.

Amtorg Clears Way for Active Buying in U. S.

By the Associated Press

New York, June 24.—Foreign trade circles heard today that the Amtorg Trading Corporation, Russian buying agency, was preparing to step up its purchasing to a rate of $100,000,000 or more a year if the present curb on exports to Russia were eliminated or modified.

Less than a month ago, it was said, the agency was considering closing because of inability to obtain export licenses. The change in plans was based on the German invasion of the Soviet Republic.

Trade quarters indicated belief that some action might be taken to bring about early release of $1,700,000 worth of machine tools and parts, oil field equipment and other machinery purchased here by Russia but immobilized in East and West Coast warehouses by export licensing restrictions.

Foreign trade authorities suggested that if the United States decided to follow Great Britain's course and aid Russia quickly the most tangible way to do so would be to permit Russia to buy here the supplies she cannot get elsewhere.

Socony-Vacuum Boosts Output of Aviation Gasoline

New York, June 23 (AP).—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., announced today it had increased its production of 100 octane aviation gasoline 30 per cent at its Beaumont refinery through an improvement in refinery methods. The OPM asked the oil industry for a 25 per cent increase in production of that grade of gasoline.

The Beaumont plant has been producing 100 octane fuel at a rate of 1,000,000 barrels a year. The company estimated that production for the second half of the year would be at the rate of 1,300,000 barrels a year.

Increased Sales Of High-Priced Cigars Reported

New York, June 24 (AP).—Fathers probably received better cigars than usual on Father's Day this month, the Cigar Institute of America decided today.

Withdrawals of cigars selling for 20 cents each or more climbed from 268,000 in May, 1940, to 333,820 in May of this year, a rise credited to demand for Dad's gifts.

Withdrawals of both 8-15 and 15-20 cent cigars also gained relatively more than did the 5-cents-or-less variety. The 8-15 cent withdrawals this May were 46,068,000, against 45,114,000 in May, 1941; the 15-20 cent figures were 3,462,000, against 3,373,000.

The nickel-or-less total for May, 1941, was 421,725,000, compared with 417,055,000 for the same month last year.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

. . . run the risk of having to pay rent while their home is being rebuilt after a fire

If Fire should chase you out of your home, where would your family stay while repairs are going on? Rent insurance costs a ridiculously low sum . . . and pays rent in quarters equivalent to your home while you're rebuilding.

Moral: Don't go another day without this protection. It's attached to your present policy, and costs less than you'd believe.

Soft Coal Tieup In South Voted For July 7

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A new soft coal strike, affecting about 150,000 miners in the Southern third of the Appalachian mining industry, was called yesterday for July 7 by the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) policy committee.

The determination was made after a two-hour conference between union officials and representatives of the Southern mine operators failed to result in an agreement on a proposed two-year contract.

The Southern operators announced last night that negotiations had been ended and that they were returning to their homes. They charged that a new strike further depleting the available coal supplies "will be a crime and nothing less than sabotage."

According to John L. Lewis, mine workers' president, only the mine owners in turbulent and bloody Harlan County—traditional trouble spot in labor relations—failed to accept the contract offered by the union. Unless they and the other Southern operators agree to sign before July 7, the policy committee statement declared, miners in the Southern area would not return to work following a five-day vacation period from July 3 to 7.

Settlement Hope Indicated

Hope that yesterday's deadlock would not materialize into a strike was found in news that the Harlan operators' representatives departed by plane immediately after the conference to discuss developments with their local association; and in word from the union that the president of its Harlan district, William Turnblazer, would meet tomorrow with the operators to try to iron out the difficulties.

Later, Lewis told reporters that he was relying on other Southern operators to induce the Harlan group to sign up. He said he had allowed "reasonable" time for them to consider the offer and hoped that the period between now and July 7 would provide a "cooling off period" for the Harlan owners.

He added that he told the Southerners, "Influence Harlan; you can."

L. T. Putnam, of Berley, W. Va., spokesman for the operators, said last night, however, that Lewis' action was a violation of the temporary agreement under which the mines were reopened after the Nationwide strike in April, at the instance of the National Defense Mediation Board.

"Protective Clause" Barrier

Major stumbling block to agreement, it was known, is Lewis' insistence on the inclusion in the contract of a "protective wage clause" giving the union the right to strike at any time. Removed as an obstacle was the bone of contention which led to the April strike throughout the entire industry—the miners' demand for an additional 40-cents-a-day wage increase in the Southern region to eliminate an existing differential and to bring wages to a standard $7 a day in both areas.

The contract offered by Lewis, it is understood, provides for the extra 40 cents, and, in fact, includes other concessions to the miners above those recommended by the National Defense Mediation Board, which made public findings and proposals after the case was referred to it following an earlier breakdown of negotiations.

Northerners Agreed

Last week Northern mine owners agreed to the contract, including the protective wage clause and other benefits above those suggested by the Mediation Board.

A union spokesman indicated that although all Southerners except those in Harlan County were willing to sign a contract almost identical with the Northern agreement, Lewis had insisted on an all-or-nothing basis.

30,000 Miners Excluded

Lewis also disclosed that 30,000 miners employed in Southern "captive" mines—those owned and operated by railroads and steel companies and serving those interests exclusively—would not be included in the strike call. The reason, he indicated, was that this would directly affect steel production, whose reserves above ground amounted now to between only three and five days' supply, and because he understood that the captive mines were willing to agree to the contract once it was accepted by commercial operators.

By his answer Lewis implied that he had no wish to impede defense production.

Asked why he was not calling a Nation-wide strike like the 30-day April stoppage which is deemed to be more effective toward achieving the union's objectives, Lewis replied that the union's policy was "designed to meet the existing situation."

Putnam asserted, however, that "Government reports show roughly there is only a 15-day supply of coal on the surface. Any further depletion would be a crime.

"The Nation will suffer for coal by the end of next winter. Remember that. Industry cannot continue without coal from the Southern fields. May production did not make up the loss of April, when the mines were idle. It didn't even meet consumption demands."

Navy Seeks Shipyard Workers

SIGNS urging machinists to register under Civil Service for work in San Francisco Bay area shipyards were posted yesterday following an appeal by Rear Admiral J. W. Greenslade to all machinists. This sign is hung at the Bethlehem plant, San Francisco. Machinists have been on strike at the shipyards since May 10, slowing down the national defense effort

Mrs. Sol Bloom Dies After Brief Illness

Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Sol Bloom, Democrat from New York, and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died yesterday at Doctors Hospital in New York City, after a two-weeks illness. Besides her husband, Mrs. Bloom leaves a daughter, Vera.

In 1897, when Sol Bloom was a song publisher in San Francisco, a young woman, Evelyn Hechheimer, came to his office to sell a song called "Cinderella White." The song publisher asked her to return the next day, and when she did, he greeted her with a contract, a corsage and an invitation to lunch. Shortly afterward they were married, moving to New York City.

Mrs. Bloom followed her husband's career with great pride from his entrance into politics to his appointment as chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee in 1937.

Travels in Europe in later years made Mrs. Bloom a great lover of art, and she spent many years doing miniature reproductions of works of great artists and sculptors. After Queen Elizabeth's visit to this country, Mrs. Bloom modeled a 6-inch figure of her as she looked on tour. She was an expert in making plaques.

Mrs. Bloom disliked publicity and, although she accompanied her husband on most of his trips in this country and abroad, seldom permitted interviews and generally succeeded in keeping her name out of the newspapers. She was with Representative Bloom at the inauguration of President Manuel Avila Camacho, in Mexico City, last December 1.

Mrs. Bloom maintained homes on Riverside Drive in New York, 1930 Columbia Road Northwest, here, and at Bluemont, Va., where she usually passed the summers. She was a contributor to several charities.

Funeral services in New York Thursday morning will be private.

Paradox Seen As Gulf Coast Oil Stores Rise

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., June 24.—Oil men today drew a paradoxical picture of unmoved oil accumulating near the rich Gulf Coast fields while gasoline rationing is being discussed in the East.

The accumulating stocks, they said, explain an order cutting the amount of oil Louisiana wells will be allowed to produce in July, although civilian and military demand apparently is increasing.

John J. Metzger, jr., chief engineer of the Louisiana department of minerals, declared that the removal of 50 tankers by Government order from the Gulf-Atlantic Coast runs was responsible for the situation.

"Our department ordered the reduction on the recommendation of the United States Bureau of Mines," Metzger said. "Oil stocks are piling up on our Gulf Coast and I am sure the same situation exists in Texas. There just isn't any way of moving it."

The Louisiana daily allowable production for July was fixed at 303,397 barrels, a reduction of 16,103 barrels from the daily June allowable of 319,500 barrels. The allowable had been increased from month to month until the June order was issued, keeping production practically at the May level. The July order promulgated yesterday included the first recent cut.

Gov. Sam Jones, who yesterday bound Louisiana to a two-year extension of the interstate oil compact for voluntary conservation measures, agreed that "transportation difficulties" were responsible for curtailment of production, but added, "I feel sure the reduction is only temporary until the transportation facilities are reestablished. The demand is steadily increasing."

Legislation to facilitate the construction of a pipe line from Louisiana to North Carolina now is pending in Congress and was opposed by railroad interests at a Senate subcommittee hearing yesterday.

Some north Louisiana fields have access to existing pipe lines. The bulk of the reduction in the July proration order was made in the allowable set for south Louisiana fields, dependent on tanker ship and rail facilities.

U. S. Mediators Get Powder Strike Threat

A threatened strike of 4,500 employes of the Western Cartridge Co., Alton, Ill., was referred to the National Defense Mediation Board last night by Secretary of Labor Perkins. The board immediately asked the A. F. L. chemical workers involved to delay any stoppage pending a hearing on Friday.

Union recognition was said to be the main issue in the dispute. The company is manufacturing smokeless powder in the defense program.

The new dispute came into prominence as the Navy endeavored with slight success to end the machinists strike at 11 West Coast shipbuilding yards by opening civil service rolls to machinists willing to take employment in the plants, where $500,000,000 in Navy construction work is being handicapped.

Only 27 applicants were reported from San Francisco to have qualified for jobs at the Navy's registration booth at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding plant, while at least 500 are needed there. Only six applicants were reported at the Moore Drydock Co., in Oakland, which also needs several hundred.

Other Steps Hinted

The civil service plan had been resorted to by Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, after C. I. O and A. F. L. machinists had refused numerous appeals by labor leaders and Government officials that they return to work. Admiral Greenslade had expressed his desire to settle the strike without resort to force if it is possible. He declined to say what other steps would be taken. Approximately 1,700 machinists are participating in the "outlaw" strike.

E. F. Dillon, A. F. L. Machinists' business agent, and James Smith, business agent for the C. I. O., criticized the Navy's plan as "strike-breaking."

Dillon and Harry Hook, another A. F. L. business agent, called a meeting for tonight to discuss latest developments, especially Bethlehem's announcement that the company would sign the Pacific Coast master shipbuilding agreement.

Dillon said Bethlehem's decision to accept the contract, including a closed shop agreement with the A. F. L. Bay Cities Metal Trades Council, "might change the situation."

At Los Angeles, meanwhile, Army troops were withdrawn from the North American Aviatoin plant where, 15 days before, they had taken over the big works and had driven away pickets conducting a strike repudiated by C. I. O. leaders. Lieut. Col Charles E Branshaw, who directed the Army's restoration of production on $196,000,000 in orders for the United States and Great Britain, remained in charge at the plant

The 1,500 troops moved to bivouac quarters on the nearby municipal airport. Branshaw, the Associated Press said, reported that production at the plant was slightly above normal last week.

In another labor peace move here, the Mediation Board appointed Paul R. Hays, member of the New York State Mediation Board, as arbitrator in a dispute between the E. W. Bliss Co. and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (C. I. O. An agreement to arbitrate was reached last week. The plant, employing 1,500, has $30,000,000 in contracts for torpedoes and heavy machinery.

Central Y. Glee Club Gives Concert Tonight

The concert will be under direction of J. Nelson Anderson and Mrs. Anderson will be accompanist. Admission will be free.

45 Offer to Enlist In Maryland Unit At Silver Spring

Forty-five men applied for enlistment last night at the Silver Spring (Md.) State armory into the Seventh Battalion of the new Maryland State Guard.

The Seventh Battalion will consist of five companies, two in Frederick County, two in Silver Spring and one in East Kensington. Further enlistments are expected to be held next Monday or Tuesday night at the armory. Enlistees will be required to take a physical examination.

Lieut. Col. E. Brooke Lee last night recommended three men for commissions. They are Mark Patterson, Silver Spring, to be a captain; George A. Hood, Silver Spring, and Ronald McDonald, Woodside, to be second lieutenants. All were in the Twenty-ninth Division in the last war.

Gov. O'Conor also appointed John J. Geary yesterday to be an infantry captain. He will be stationed in the intelligence division.

Absentee Vote Held No Domicile Proof

Justice James W. Morris ruled yesterday in a special memorandum opinion in District Court that absentee voting does not deprive one of legal residence in the Nation's Capital.

The court stated that while voting in other States is "strong evidence" of legal residence there, "it does not of itself so conclusively settle the issue of domicile that it can be said there is no genuine issue as to that material fact."

The opinion was given in divorce procedings between Mrs. Ocie S. Hicks, 138 B Street Northeast, and Losee C. Hicks, Navy Yard employe, who lives at 767 Tenth Street Southeast.

Paula Kelly, the songstress you hear with Glenn Miller's band over WJSV every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 9 p. m., is a good example of the adage, "Practice makes perfect"—well, perfect by all the definitions of her millions of fans throughout the country.

For 22-year-old Miss Kelly has been singing for the public ever since she was 10 years old, and now she's so good that "name" bands fight over the privilege of hiring her.

At 10 Miss Kelly had the leading role in a production of the operetta "The Toy Maker," in her native Grove City, Pa. Shortly after that she appeared on "Major Bowes' Amateur Hour" and was such a success that she was signed by the Major for a nationwide tour with one of his vaudeville units.

When she was 16, simultaneously she was offered jobs as soloist with Dick Stabile and Roger Pryor. Playing no favorites, Paula suggested the two popular bandleaders toss a coin, and Stabile won. Again she toured the country, with the Stabile orchestra, for two years, until Orchestra Leader Al Donahue made her such an attractive financial offer that she joined his group. And, yes, again Miss Kelly made a triumphal tour of the country. She could hardly be called a home girl. But it was on that tour that she married Hal Dickenson of "The Modernaires" quartet, now heard with Glenn Miller.

Lee Hazen, holder of one of our fanciest contract titles, the masters' individual, has unhappy moments at the card table like the rest of us.

Presenting an account of his victory, Hazen describes a deal of the tournament, played at a grand slam, on which he had chills and fever. He was only the dummy, but his worries were greater than those of Atlas. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box. His partner was Charles J. Solomon, of Philadelphia. His adversaries were Mrs. J. E. Folline, of Richmond, Va., and Robert McPherran.

"The bidding was rather aggressive," he begins, "but the contract was a good percentage one. Whether you're playing rubber bridge or duplicate, the bidding of a grand slam always generates an air of tension, and this was no exception. After some thought, McPherran led a club, which was won in dummy. Charlie now studied and saw that the hand was cold if the hearts broke or the spade finesse worked. He led a small diamond from dummy and when Mrs. Folline showed out, broke out in a cold sweat (at least, that is what it looked like to me). I didn't know what his problem was, but if he was worried, so was I.

"I began to regret bitterly my bidding and began thinking of explanations to give an irate partner. For a moment I thought that when he scolded me I would say that this or that bid had been a slip of the tongue or that I had thought he was playing Blackwood or something.

"Charlie now cashed the diamond queen, the heart ace and the spade king and led a small heart to dummy. When Bobby showed out the finesse was proved, and taken back to the closed hand.

"At this point McPherran looked puzzled. He showed me his hand and it was obvious that all the tricks were ours. I couldn't understand why Charlie didn't claim them, but then it dawned on me that he must have miscounted the diamonds. Now I redoubled Charlie's cold sweat. I could easily foresee his taking a losing spade finesse.

"He cashed the last heart and discarded a spade, and then exclaimed, 'I am a dope!' and spread the hand. The result was a very good one partly because of the known aversion of many masters to bidding grand slams in tournament competition."

Senators Kill Antistrike Legislation

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Drastic anti-defense-strike legislation voted by the House two weeks ago was rejected by the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday on recommendation of the War Department that its proper enforcement is "impracticable."

At the same time the House leadership announced that another anti-strike measure had been given the right-of-way for floor consideration later in the week. It would make it a criminal offense for anyone to attempt by violence or threats to prevent workers on defense orders from entering or leaving any defense plant, and grant President Roosevelt other powers to deal with defense stoppages.

The Senate committee elliminated from the $10,500,000,000 1942 Army appropriation bill, the so-called Case and Pace amendment written into the measure on the House floor the day President Roosevelt sent troops into the strikebound North American Aircraft plant.

Enforcement Held Difficult

It would have barred any future defense employment or payments to persons or firms who refuse to abide "for as long as then days" by the recommendations of the National Defense Mediation Board or to strikers who picket after the board has asked them to return to work.

This action was taken, it was said, on the recommendation of Undersecretary of War Patterson that the "difficulties surrounding the enforcement of these sections would result in retarding the national defense program rather than accelerating it."

He told the group that Army contracting and disbursing officers would have to make an investigation before signing every voucher for payments under defense contracts to determine if the conditions set forth have been met.

Speaker Rayburn announced the leadership's approval for House consideration of the additional legislation designed to curb defense strikes. An amendment to the Selective Service Act, it was written in the House Military Affairs Committee as a substitute for a Senate bill approved earlier.

Drastic Penalties Provided

Under it, the President would be empowered to use troops to protect workers who disire to comply with a Government order to go back to their jobs. Anyone interfering with such men would be subject to a $5,000 fine and five years imprisonment.

The President also would be authorized to take over plants whose owners refuse to use Federal mediation or conciliation agencies to settle strikes. Another section bars strikers from collecting pay later for the time the plant is shut down.

The measure would also defer from military service all registrants not now in the Army who are 28 or older.

Speaker Rayburn declared that in setting down the bill for House consideration, perhaps on Friday, the Vinson bill, providing for a compulsory "cooling off" period before defense strikes could be called, would be side-tracked.

Family Increases in Defense Area

BABY BOOM—Thirteen babies grouped together in Grady Hospital, Atlanta, Ga., tell a story of defense boom in busy Southeastern United States. Hospitals in Atlanta, center of a thriving defense area, report baby wards booked months ahead. Obstetricians credit the baby boom to better times, defense effort and greatly increased marriages

1,725,000-Man Army, More Arms Urged

Further expansion of the defense program, designed to provide complete equipment for an enlarged Army of 1,725,000 men, plus officers, and the arms for a force of 3,000,000 men will soon be asked by the War Department.

In addition, a plan to procure 6,000 balloons to be used in balloon barrages for cities in the United States, similar to the one which London uses to force Nazi bombers to high altitudes, is being worked out by the Army Air Corps.

These facts were disclosed in secret testimony taken by the Appropriations Committee during the past week and made public yesterday. While the greater part of testimony regarding future expansion was deleted from the published transcript, the following statement of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, was released:

"The War Department is now working on data necessary for the preparation of additional estimates for essential items of equipment for the augmentation of the protective mobilization force of 1,418,000 men to a force of about 1,725,000 men, for the critical items of equipment for an augmented force of about 3,000,000 men and for essential items of Air Corps equipment and all critical items of equipment for the expansion of the Air Corps beyond the 54 group program to the second aviation objective."

It was not officially disclosed what the Army's "second aviation objective" is, but it is understood to involve an increase in aircraft strength from about 25,000 to about 40,000 planes.

The 1,725,000-man army mentioned by Marshall, would give the Nation a force of about 1,850,000, including officers. Although the "critical" equipment—arms and other supplies difficult to produce—would be provided for a 3,000,000-man force, there are no plans as yet to actually set up such a force. Heretofore, Army plans had contemplated providing arms for 2,800,000 men, plus plants capable of producing such equipment for 4,000,000 men in all.

The published hearings reveal that Maj. Gen. G. H. Brett, chief of the Air Corps, urged that 3,000 balloons be constructed immediately under the pending bill and 3,000 more during the next fiscal year. They would be used for protecting the Canal Zone, the strategic points of the Haaiian Islands and the principal American cities and strategic points, should need arise. It is estimated that they will cost in the neighborhood of $6,000 apiece.

Give Labor Share in Industry, Catholics Told at Conference

PAPAL LEGATE LEAVES HIS THRONE—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Papal Legate to the Ninth National Eucharistic Congress, leaves his throne in St. Paul's Cathedral to address the assembled thousands in St. Paul, Minn. He is wearing the cappa magma and biretta of cardinal red

By the United Press

St. Paul, June 24. — Bishop Gerald T. Bergan, of Des Moines, Iowa, urged Catholic employers at the Ninth National Eucharistic Congress today to give labor a share in the management.

"This might sound extremely radical, but on sober thought it is most reasonable," Bishop Bergan said at a sectional meeting held for employers at the congress.

"If a man works in a factory a number of years, has slaved day after day, certainly we might declare that he has put himself into that business. He has helped develop it . . . should he not be given some little share in the stock, managements, or profits?"

Bishop Bergan suggested that "one union should be established for both capital and labor."

"Both are striving for the same ends," he said, "but under the present system labor unions and employers' associations are "aligned against each other."

In another of the 26 sectional meetings Bishop Joseph F. Busch, of St. Cloud, Minn., said "our modern world is organized along the wrong lines."

"The modern pattern is based entirely on prices," he said.

"This pattern must go within the next few years and the solution is cooperatives."

Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara, of Kansas City, told a meeting of parents that Catholics who practice birth control should be excluded from the Holy Sacraments of the church "under all circumstances."

The congress was convened formally this morning when Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia and personal representative of Pope Pius XII, celebrated a potifical mass before thousands of worshipers gathered before a 53-foot altar in the State Fair Grounds.

The religious ceremonies and discussions of contemporary problems will continue through Thursday with 450,000 Catholics expected to attend.

Spread Religion In Jails, Cleric Urges

Religion must become a tradition in penal institutions if it is to produce "outstanding results," the Rev. Francis J. Lane, chaplain of Elmira (N. Y.) Reformatory, said at yesterday's sessions of the Catholic Prison Chaplains Institute here.

The institute is being held this week at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest, under the auspices of the Federal Bureau of Prisons of the Justice Department, the National Conference of Catholic Charities and National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Emphasizing that traditions could only be produced after "many years of ceaseless endeavor," Chaplain Lane urged establishment of religious leadership among inmates as one of the best methods of attaining such objectives.

Rome Clamps Reprisal Curb On U.S. Citizens

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, June 24.—American citizens now in Italy were forbidden today to leave the country without special governmental permission. This measure was taken, it was said, as a reprisal against similar acts by the United States, setting up an exit visa system for Italians in that country.

From such American dispatches as have reached Rome it was understood here that the American measure is aimed at controlling the taking of funds out of the country by the Italians there. Italy has for years banned the export of funds without special governmental permit and the degree to which the new measure will stop Americans from going elsewhere remains tonight a matter of doubt.

In Fascist circles it was made plain that the application of the decree would depend entirely upon how the American measure is applied to Italians in the United States.

There was an indication here today that Americans who have had their credits blocked may soon have some of them released. Americans in need of living expenses were told to apply to their banks for whatever sum would carry them along and at least one American was assured that he need not worry about funds for living. Allowances up to $500 a month might be released from the American funds, it was said.

A typical Fascist exposition of why Adolf Hitler was right in signing a treaty of friendship and nonaggression with Josef V. Stalin and then attacking him was contained in an editorial by Roberto Farinacci today in Il Regime Fascistsa.

"Der Fuehrer had every reason to pretend to believe in Soviet good faith," it said. "To obtain the following two ends: "To eliminate, at least for a moment a Russian front, and to obtain a great part of the supplies indispensable for his army. But at the proper moment the Soviet comedy had to cease."

Va. Institute Speaker Urges Peace Drive

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., June 24—Representative John Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, declared tonight that the United States could render the most effective aid to Britain by leading the world in a peace offensive now.

HOWE

"We are the greatest nation on earth," Vorys said in an address to the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs. "We owe it to the thousands abroad who are otherwise sure to die this year to give them the chance to live in peace before we send our thousands to die with them."

An opposite pole of thought was expressed by Edgar Ansel Mowrer of the Chicago Daily News who said it was the duty of the United States to join Britain "in crushing the unholy Axis and having done this must enter into a permanent arrangement with the British and other well-disposed peoples for the conscious organization of the world."

Vorys declared that America would lose nothing if peace were declared now and he called upon President Roosevelt to take the leadership in forming peace proposals. Such proposals doubtless would require the backing of Congress, he said, because "we must show the world that the whole country means business."

Faith in Persuasion

"Some say that peace now would be only a truce," he added. "I do not think so. But perhaps it would be wise for us to know this time that war would come again unless we waged peace as bravely and wisely as we waged war.

"Suppose all we got would be a truce for a few years. Who would be the loser? We need those years to complete our arming.

Vorys said that he had "faith in persuasion versus pressure and in Yankee ingenuity versus Prussian efficiency" in any peacetime competition with Germany that would follow the war's immediate cessation.

He said that Congress had heard definite reports that Hitler would be willing to call it quits with Britain, leave her fleet and dominions intact, restore every pre-war conquered country and settle the rest at a conference table.

Urges Peace As Aid

"If Britain is losing, we can open peace negotiations better than she can and an American peace offensive could be our most effective aid to Britain," he asserted.

"Although the United States should continue sending aid to Britain, our first obligation is toward ourselves and toward those principles that have made us great," Quincy Howe, author and publisher, asserted.

America cannot make defense of the British Empire the sole basis for operations," he said, "because the defense of Britain and its empire are not paramount American interests."

He viewed the United States' tasks as those developing a strong centralized government with a minimum of internal dissension and developing regional economy with a minimum of external struggle.

A strong central government, he said, did not mean the sacrifice of democracy, but rather an enlargement of democracy.

U. S. Unafraid, LaGuardia Tells 4-H Club

"We never go out of our way to look for a war, and we try to shun it, but we refuse to be intimidated by brute force and we are afraid of nobody in the entire world," vehemently declared Fiorello H. La Guardia, Mayor of New York and director of the Office of Civilian Defense in an address yesterday at the Department of Agriculture before 173 boys and girls attending the National 4-H Club here.

"Your greatest contribution to national defense," LaGuardia told the rural group, "is to provide ample crop production for industrial use. You must know your part of the county, so that you will be ready when you are called upon."

The new director of civilian defense suggested that the farm boys and girls have training in first-aid in case they should ever have to assist in transporting war-injured persons.

Using the "4-H" name to make his point, LaGuardia advised his youthful audience: "Keep your heads clear, your hands busy, your hearts pure and your health perfect."

Preceding the mayor's address in the morning, the 4-H'ers had a "citizenship-oath" ceremony in which 25 girls and 12 boys who will reach voting age this year, pledged their allegiance to country.

Last night they had a party at the United States Chamber of Commerce building and today they will hold a panel discusion on their responsibilities in the present crisis, to be followed by a visi tto Mount Vernon.

The 4-H Camp will close tonight in a formal ceremony.

U. S. to Direct Fire on Officer Of Bookniga

The Federal Government will direct its fire on the Bookniga firm's vice president, Raphael Rush, when the Communist propaganda case continues before a jury of 11 men and 1 woman in District Court today.

Rush already has occupied the witness stand in the criminal courtroom of Justice F. Dickinson Letts for two days. Benjamin Parker, special assistant to the Attorney General, will head the prosecution's cross-examination of Rush.

Rush testified yesterday that Bookniga had a small working capital which resulted in the ultimate dissolution of the firm. The reason for its dissolution, he said, was the secretary of State of New York's refusal to grant a second charter under the name of Bookniga.

Earlier in the day Frank T. Kleiger, auditor and accountant for the corporation, testified that the firm showed a net loss of $1,823 in 1938 and from September, 1938, to March, 1939, a net loss of $2,269.

Kleiger told the jury he had no idea what was contained in the books the company sold.

"I was never requested to issue a certified statement in auditing the books of the company," he said. "There was nothing irregular about any of the entries which warranted further investigation."

He stated further, "I never gave a statement to anyone other than the officers of the company."

Following him to the stand, Rush declared:

"We never did anything for charity. In everything we did we looked for a profit."

Martinsburg Girl, 19, Reported Missing

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 24.—A search for Ola Stum, 19, of this city who disappeared May 31, was started today by a sister, Mrs. Dayton Canby, Route 1.

The girl is about 5 feet 4 inches tall, was dressed in a blue dress with white dots when she left this city. She had never gone away previously without giving her family proper notice, it was said.

Shenandoah Area Scouts Open Camp

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., June 24.—The annual camp of Boy Scouts of the Shenandoah Area Council got under way this week on the Capon River with troops from Virginia and West Virginia in attendance.

Berryville troop 18 won attendance honors. Other troops are from Luray, Shenandoh, Martinsburg, Shepherdstown and Front Royal. Troops from Edinburg, Winchester and Charles Town will go to camp next week.

Lutheran Church Young People Hold Banquet

Young people of Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street, last night staged their banquet in a June night setting.

Lacking only a balcony, Romeo and Juliet (Paul Lein and Dorothea McCorkle) vocally serenaded each other under Japanese lanterns in a bowered garden; Elva Clark "plinked" out the "serenade romantique" on a marimba, and Mary Sue Moore sang "The Evening Nightingale."

After Dr. William R. Barnhart, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, spoke on "The Time Capsule," Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor and Federation president, installed the new officers in a candlelight service. Richard Schmitt was toastmaster. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor, participated in the program.

Make HOLC Building Tax Free, D. C. Asks

Congress was asked yesterday to remove from District tax books the $3,000,000 office building and site of the Home Owners Loan Corporation at First Street and Indiana Avenue Northwest.

According to District Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent, the HOLC property has been listed for real estate taxes since the corporation acquired it from the Acacia Life Insurance Co. in 1934. He added that no tax has been paid by the corporation and that at the present rate of $1.75 per $100 the property would yield the District a return of about $38,000 a year.

He explained that the District's only recourse against tax delinquents is to put the property up for sale, but that in the case of HOLC, a Federal Government instrumentality, no tax buyer conceivably could be found for the property because of its high value.

HOLC officials estimated the property as worth "slightly under $3,000,000," including land and addition to the Acacia Building.

A bill to exempt the property from "any and all taxation heretofore or hereafter imposed" was introduced by Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee. A similar measure, amending the Home Owners Loan Act, last year passed the House but failed in the Senate.

HOLC officials explained that under the law the corporation is required to pay taxes on residential property it holds throughout the country, but that it was felt its office building in Washington should be exempt as is all Federal property here.

Does Your Breath Broadcast—"I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

People who wear plates or bridges often suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing may not prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing that definitely stops "denture breath" is daily use of Polident! This new brushless cleaner has won the approval of thousands of dentists and users. Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and food deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 30¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if not delighted.
